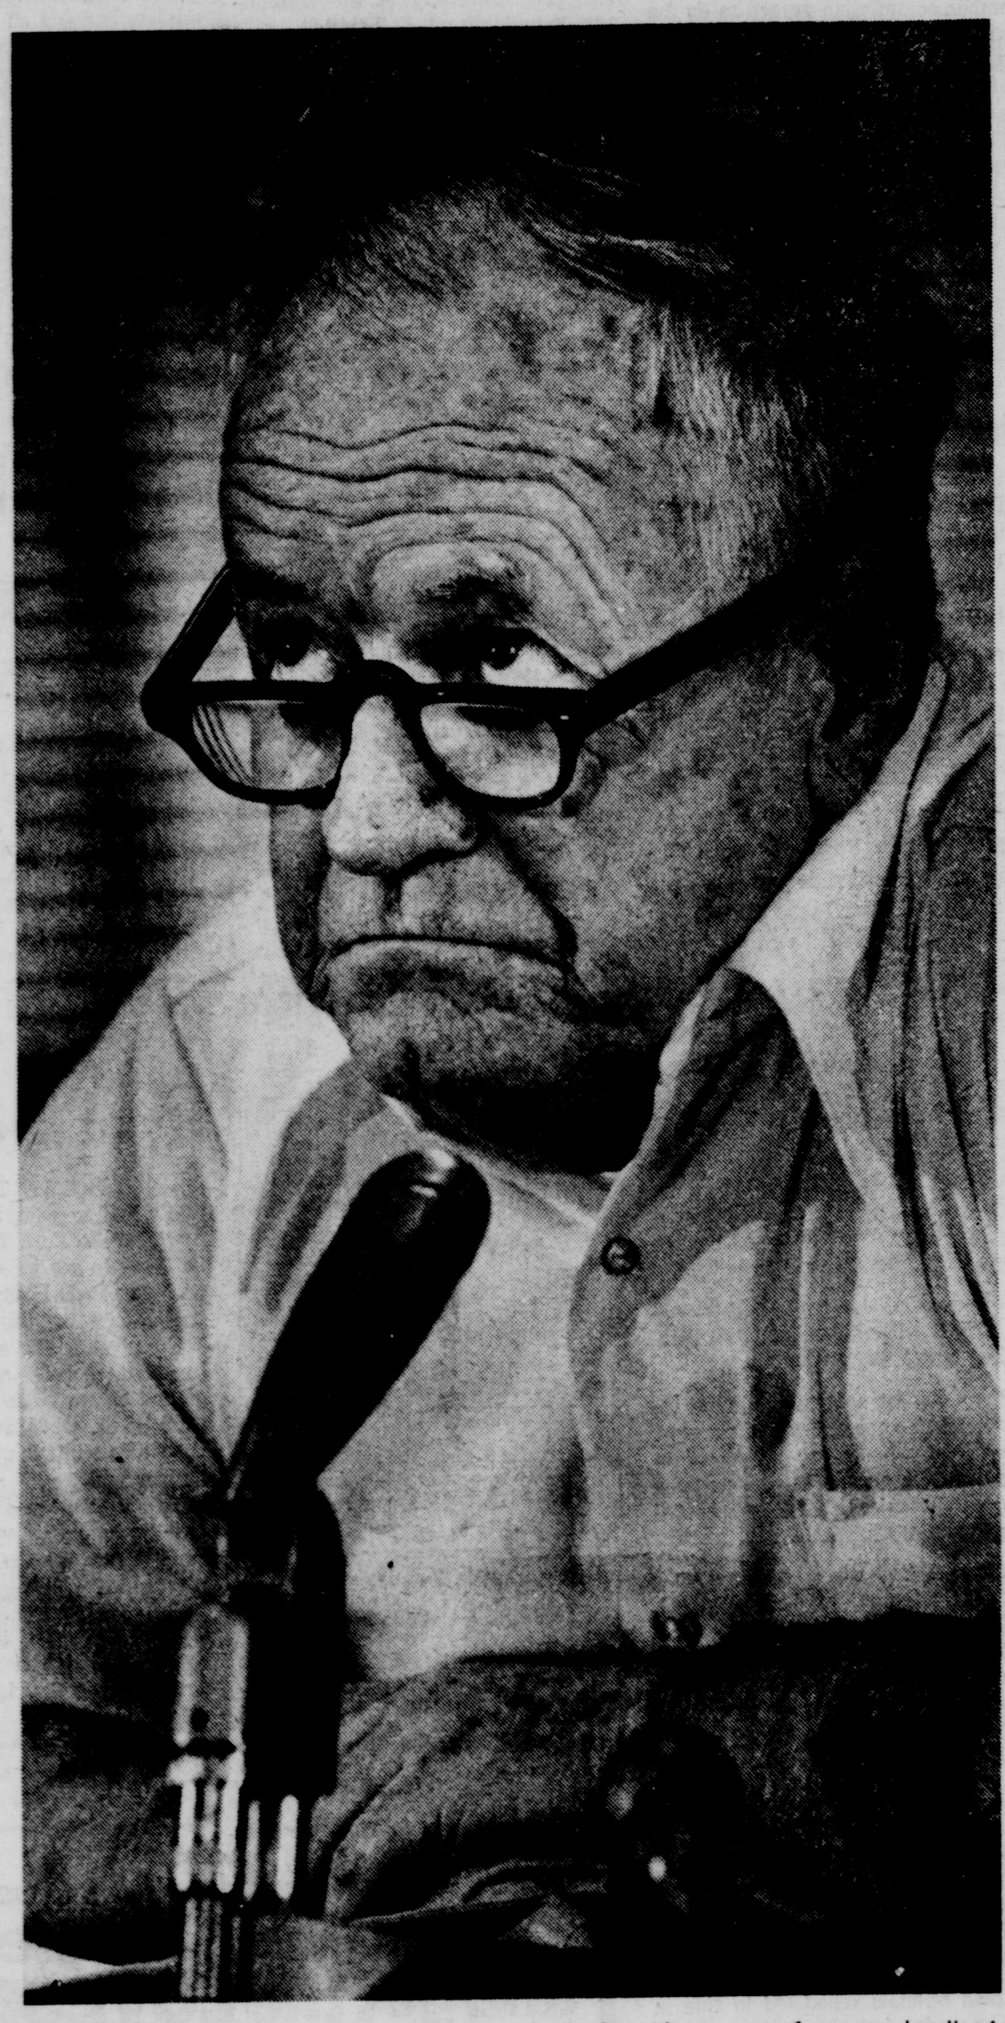
Prostitution 'good' life for Marty



GUY STRAIT, who is serving a 10-to 20-year prison term for sexually abusing minors, told a Senate subcommittee Friday he had to "beat away from my door" minors willing to appear in porno films.

by TONI GINNETTI

At 17, Marty already is a master at selling himself . . . literally.

Marty, not his real name, has supported himself for the past two years in the easiest way he knows how — prostituting himself to men who pay him for sex or to appear in pornographic films.

He doesn't particularly like the film-making, he says. He's only appeared in three, all with older men. His life of prostitution is another thing, though.

"WELL, BECAUSE it's an easy way to get money," he says. "I do it so I won't have to work."

Marty's story is one of hundreds of thousands in the country, stories of young people — most of them runaways from broken homes who have no fathers or fathers who have shown little or no attention or love — who are now caught in the nationwide network of "kiddie porno."

Marty, through a telephone hook-up, told his story in Chicago Friday to a three-man U.S. Senate Judiciary subcommittee investigating juvenile delinquency and child abuse.

The youth was one of nine witnesses — including two convicted child porno dealers now in state prisons—who testified for four hours on the magnitude and pervasiveness of the child porno-prostitution buisiness in the United States.

THE HEARING Friday was the first session outside Washington, D.C., for the subcommittee, whose members include chairman John C. Culver, D-Iowa; Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., and Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo.

Culver and Mathias already have introduced a bill that would make the sexual exploitation of minors a federal offense.

Illinois Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy also took part in the hearing briefly on behalf of himself and Democratic Sen. Adlai Stevenson.

Marty, sequestered from the hearing, had come forth voluntarily, telling oft he life he has lived since age 15, when a "friend" introduced him to "connections" in Chicago's New Town area.

"Well, I start off at the Yankee Doodle at Clark and Diversey and the cars come by and pick me up," he said. "My minimum is $25. I get about two or three a night. I work about seven days a week.

"I SPEND IT ON drugs, clothes. I give my mother some when she needs it or I get something for the house."

He has no father. The only male member of his family is a great-uncle on his mother's side. He completed eighth grade, but he "didn't particularly" like school.

Marty talked about the other boys he knows who work the streets. "I know a lot of them — maybe around 50, all around Clark and Diversey because that's where I do my hustling. They're 12 to 19, I'd say."

All of them are on drugs, he said.

Ryan orders ban on lawn sprinkling

A ban on lawn sprinkling in Arlington Heights was ordered Friday by Village Pres. James T. Ryan because of large drops in storage reserves Thursday night.

Ryan termed the ban "temporary," but said Friday afternoon that it may be imposed through next week. "I'm sure we'll discuss it at the (village) board meeting June 6 and see where we stand then," he said.

Police, fire and emergency vehicles equipped with loudspeakers will drive through Arlington Heights neighborhoods today to tell homeowners of the sprinkling ban, Assistant Village Mgr. Frank Charlton said.

ORDINARILY, LAWN sprinkling is allowed in the village Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Charlton said that for the duration of the sprinkling ban, only newly sodded lawns may be watered and permits for that purpose should be obtained from the public works department.

Village officials blamed lawn sprinkling Thursday for a drop in the village's storage facilities from 13 million gallons to 5.5 million gallons. More than 14 million gallons of water were used Thursday, twice the average consumption on nonsprinkling days.

Thursday night both of the village's elevated storage tanks were empty, Public Works Director Gene Willroth said.

DON RENNER, superintendent of utilities, said the shortage has been made worse by the fact that only 10 of the village's 13 wells are in operation.

Renner estimated that 2 to 3 million gallons of water can be recovered in one day and that the 5.5 million gallons in storage should be reserved for emergencies.

Renner said most residents who water their lawns overdo it.

"They use a lot more than they have to," Renner said. "If they did it a couple hours and just once a week,

Rape reaction to provocative clothing

Women sex objects, judge says

JUDGE ARCHIE SIMONSON

MADISON, Wis. — "Let's face it. Women are sex objects. God made them that way. A woman has the ability, if she plays her part right, to turn a man on."

Judge Archie Simonson was sticking to his guns Friday, despite the nationwide uproar he provoked with his statements about a rape case here.

"You can see things on a street in Madison that you have to pay to see in Chicago. You can see women's bare breasts . . . they've appeared in my court braless and with see-through shirts."

But while he scoffed at criticism, Simonson looked tired as he greeted a Herald reporter in his Dane County Court Building office.

HE WAS IN THE middle of an unwed father custody case and said with a half-hearted grin that "this (case) may be harder than the last one."

The last case involved the rape of a 16-year-old girl in a stairwell at Madison West High School. Simonson, in placing one of the three boys involved on a year's court supervision at home, said rape was a "normal" reaction to sexual permissiveness in society and provocative women's clothing.

At the time of the rape, the girl was wearing tennis shoes, blue jeans and a blouse over a turtleneck sweater.

Simonson's comments earned him headlines around the country and brought demands for his removal from the bench, picketing outside the courthouse and a threatened city council resolution denouncing his views.

Simonson, the father of three girls and one boy, said Friday his comments in the courtroom were of a general nature rather than being directed at the Madison West rape case.

He cited a social worker's report and the lack of a previous criminal record as justification for the leniency he showed the 15-year-old boy.

The prosecuting attorney in the case, Meryl Manhardt, had recommended the youth be placed in a residential treatment facility.

SHE WAS OUTRAGED by Simonson's statements.

"The press reports have been accurate," she said. "If he wasn't referring to that case, why did he make the comment in a closed courtroom? He was saying that a 15-year-old boy could react normally to those kinds of influences.

"I thought his ideas had been rejected by enlightened people all over the world. It's nonsense to believe that a woman's appearance would provoke a rape. One boy from West told me, 'What does he think we are, animals?' "

Three teen-aged boys originally were charged in the case. The charges against one 15-year-old were dropped for lack of evidence, and a 14-year-old youth pleaded no contest to a charge of sexual assault. He was placed in a residential treatment center for a year.

That boy held the girl down while the boy who was released to his home raped her.

A PSYCHOLOGIST and a social worker had testified in court that court supervision in the home would be adequate treatment.

As the judge continued to talk about the "bombardment of sexual stimuli," women's groups in Madison demanded his ouster and Mayor Paul R. Soglin said he would ask for a censure.

The chances of pushing him off the bench, Simonson said, are "slim or none."

But while he has "touched a raw nerve in this town," Simonson said, "I've had support coming in from all over the country, much of it from the religious community.

"It may strike some change. Women's groups have been concentrating on remedial solutions, but what we need now are preventive measures."

Scientists live four months with plants

MOSCOW (UPI)—Three Soviet scientists recently spent four months in an airtight bunker eating carrots, cabbages and other vegetables grown in special steel trays and living off the air and water produced by the plants, the government newspaper Izvestia reported Friday.

Izvestia said the experiment represented a major gain in the development of closed biological systems for long manned space voyages, and also pointed to practical ways of protecting the environment.

"People and plants can successfully coexist in a closed space under one roof for long months," Izvestia said.

Izvestia said the three unidentified scientists lived for four months in a special closed bunker with an inside volume of about 315 cubic yards — about the size of a large mobile home.

HALF THE COMPLEX was given over to plants grown hydroponically — that is, in special nutrient solutions.

"Exploration has shown that top plants grown with the use of a particular technology met all the requirements of the crew in oxygen and water," Izvestia said.

"In steel trays on a common porous clay filler, the hydroponics method is used to cultivate carrots and radish, cabbage and cucumbers, onions and chufa flatsedge, remarkable for its nutritiousness — its bulbs rich in vegetable fats.

A special short stem variety of wheat was developed for the hydroponic system and accounted for more than half the carbohydrates in the crew's diet, Izvestia said.

Izvestia said the condensate of plant moisture "after final purification and mineralization" fully met requirements for drinking and washing water.

Besides its obvious value in spaceflight, Izvestia said, the experiment opened ways of developing waste-free industrial production adn closed water systems.

Ex-student arraigned in coed killing

A former Northwood Institute student, charged with the strangulation death of Marilyn L. Goodman, 19, of Mount Prospect, Friday was arraigned in Midland, Mich. The suspect, Ronald Molter, 19, of Monroe, Mich., was remanded to jail without bail pending a preliminary examination, the date of which has not been set. Miss Goodman, a freshman at the school, was slain and sexually attacked May 8 after attending an off-campus fraternity party. Her partially clad body was found May 10 on a path near the entrance gate to the campus. Police have said that Molter, an employe of a paper products firm, has said he gave Miss Goodman a ride in his car and then drove her back to the party, where she was last seen.

Arrests clear rash of burglaries

Police now say that nine home burglaries and 50 attempted burglaries were cleared up with the arrest of three juveniles earlier this week in Arlington Heights. Police earlier had linked the boys to six burglaries and 25 unsuccessful break-ins. The burglaries occurred in an area bounded by Ridge Avenue, Oakton Street, Kirchoff Road and Wilke Road. Poice estimated the value of the stolen goods at $100. Police said the three boys, two 15-year-olds and one 16-year-old, all village residents, committed the burglaries over a period of 1½ months. The boys have been charged with the burglaries in a delinquency petition.

Suits filed to halt dumping

Two suits were filed Friday seeking to halt illegal dumping on a 53-acre site west of Palatine along Northwest Highway. The suits, filed by Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott and Cook County State's Atty C. Bernard Carey, were directed against the Maywood - Proviso State Bank, Maywood, trustee of the property. Both agencies acted after complaints from the villages of Palatine, Barrington and Inverness. Scott's suit asks that the owner of the property be fined up to $10,000 and $1,000 per day for every day the dumping continues. The site is located between Palos and Doe avenues, north of Baldwin Road in Palatine Township.

ECC to study impact of college

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

The Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission will conduct a study to determine the effects of locating a branch campus of Roosevelt University at Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St.

An advisory arm of the Arlington Heights Village Board, the seven-member commission agreed to do the environmental impact study at the request of Miner area residents who attended a commission meeting Thursday.

The study is expected to take about two months to complete and will look at the impact Roosevelt would have on noise and air pollution levels, traffic and parking, commission chairwoman Jean Hanlon said.

MINER AREA RESIDENTS plan to ask the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education to postpone making a decision on leasing Miner to Roosevelt until the impact study is completed. A petition to this effect, signed by 400 residents, will be presented to the board when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the administration building, 301 W. South St.

Officials of Chicago-based Roosevelt University have asked the board to allow them to lease either Miner or Thomas Junior High School, 303 E. Thomas Ave., as a branch campus beginning in September 1978. While noting that either of the schools would be acceptable, they picked Miner as their first choice because of its structural design and its proximity to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

The board has decided to close one of its four junior highs at the end of the 1977-78 school year because of declining enrollment and rising budget deficits, but has not named the school.

"It's commendable that the commission is doing an impact study, but I'd prefer the scope be more broad than zeroing in on one location," board member Edith Jolly said after attending Thursday's meeting. "What is the impact of having a university in Arlington Heights?"

MRS. JOLLY SAID she would like to know whether residents see a university as an asset or a liability and whether they see it as a liability only if it is located in their neighborhood.

"Any change made in a community is going to have an environmental impact and we also have to look at the impact of a boarded-up, empty building," she said.

Mrs. Hanlon said her commission is undertaking the impact study in conjunction with ongoing concerns in the Miner area relating to Recreation Park, the Arlington Market Shopping Center and the manufacturing facilities off Miner Street.

Neighborhood residents have expressed concern that the traffic university classes would generate could endanger the safety of children bicycling to Recreation Park and walking to Windsor School, which adjoins Miner.

Carnival fun this weekend

The Memorial Day weekend is being celebrated in downtown Arlington Heights with a carnival sponsored by the Arlington Heights Firefighters Assn.

The carnival rides and games will be open from noon to 10 p.m. Saturday, from 1 to 10 p.m. Sunday and immediately following the parade Monday morning until 9 p.m.

Profits will be donated to the Arlington Heights Fire Prevention Bureau for films and slide presentations.

Roto building on new site

Roto Lincoln Mercury is building what it bills as the largest Lincoln Mercury dealership in the Midwest, at 1400 E. Rand Rd., Arlington Heights.

Owner Dick Roto said the 38,000-square-foot building will be completed by late 1977.

Roto said he is negotiating with several import dealers to lease his company's present building at 1410 E. Northwest Hwy.

The new facility will include twin glass-domed showrooms for new and used cars, a repair shop and an employe cafeteria, Roto said.

Property owners reject streetlight compromise

Commercial property owners included in a special assessment tax district to finance streetlights along Northwest Highway have rejected a compromise offer from village officials.

A 20 per cent reduction in the businessmen's bills for the $180,000 streetlighting project was offered by the village but rejected as "insufficient," James Hendricks, attorney for nine of the property owners, said Friday.

In an unprecedented move Thursday, the village board met with Hendricks and several businessmen included in the special tax district and agreed to conduct further negotiations. Ordinarily, adjustments to assessments are made only by the courts after a special assessment is approved by the village board and filed for approval in circuit court.

HENDRICKS SAID that unless the village offers a bigger reduction, the property owners will leave it up to Judge Joseph Schneider of Cook County Circuit Court at a hearing June 21.

"At the hearing the village will have to prove there is a private benefit accruing to these people and explain the gross disparity between the assessments for residential property owners and the commercial property owners," Hendricks said. "I think the village will have a tough time doing that," he said.

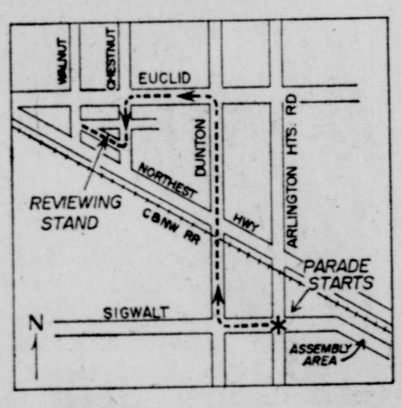
Bands from Arlington, Buffalo Grove, Elk Grove, Hersey and Forest View high schools are scheduled to march in the parade as well as various units from area VFW and American Legion posts.

Among the guests who will appear in the parade are Maj. Gen. Wilbur F. Munch of the 86th U.S. Army Reserve Command; Walter Luksta, commander of the state VFW chapter; Col. Edward Mills of the U.S. Air Force Reserve, Comdr. James Millay of the U.S. Navy Reserve, and Pat Essington, president of the state Ladies VFW Auxillary.

Other guests include State Representative Eugenia Chapman, Eugene Schlickman, Virginia Macdonald, all of Arlington Heights, State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect.

Local officials scheduled to ride in the parade include Village Pres. James T. Ryan, Police Chief Robert Derks, Fire Chief John K. Hayden and Edward H. Gilbert, superintendent of High School Dist. 214.



ARLINGTON HEIGHTS' Memorial Day parade will begin at 9:30 a.m., starting at the municipal building at Sigwalt Street and Arlington Heights Road. It will proceed north on Dunton Avenue, west on Euclid Avenue and south on Chestnut Avenue to Memorial that would be plenty," he said.

"PEOPLE DON'T realize that a half-inch to one inch of water a week will keep their lawns very pretty and they can do that with one garden hose in three hours. But a lot of people use two or three hoses and they think the ground has to be so soaked you can't walk on it, when actually, the lawn will do better if it's left a little dry," Renner said.

Renner also said residents waste water when they water their lawns during the afternoon because much of it evaporates.

The Arlington Heights Village Board is expected to consider at its meeting June 6 a recommendation from Willroth that lawn sprinkling be allowed only Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 10 a.m. and from 7 to 10 p.m.

Ex-student arraigned in coed killing

Ronald Molter

A former Northwood Institute student, charged with the strangulation death of Marilyn L. Goodman, 19, of Mount Prospect, Friday was arraigned in Midland, Mich. The suspect, Ronald Molter, 19, of Monroe, Mich., was remanded to jail without bail pending a preliminary examination, the date of which has not been set. Miss Goodman, a freshman at the school, was slain and sexually attacked May 8 after attending an off-campus fraternity party. Her partially clad body was found May 10 on a path near the entrance gate to the campus. Police have said that Molter, an employe of a paper products firm, has said he gave Miss Goodman a ride in his car and then drove her back to the party, where she was last seen.

Arrests clear rash of burglaries

Police now say that nine home burglaries and 50 attempted burglaries were cleared up with the arrest of three juveniles earlier this week in Arlington Heights. Police earlier had linked the boys to six burglaries and 25 unsuccessful break-ins. The burglaries occurred in an area bounded by Ridge Avenue, Oakton Street, Kirchoff Road and Wilke Road. Poice estimated the value of the stolen goods at $100. Police said the three boys, two 15-year-olds and one 16-year-old, all village residents, committed the burglaries over a period of 1½ months. The boys have been charged with the burglaries in a delinquency petition.

Suits filed to halt dumping

Two suits were filed Friday seeking to halt illegal dumping on a 53-acre site west of Palatine along Northwest Highway. The suits, filed by Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott and Cook County State's Atty C. Bernard Carey, were directed against the Maywood - Proviso State Bank, Maywood, trustee of the property. Both agencies acted after complaints from the villages of Palatine, Barrington and Inverness. Scott's suit asks that the owner of the property be fined up to $10,000 and $1,000 per day for every day the dumping continues. The site is located between Palos and Doe avenues, north of Baldwin Road in Palatine Township.

ECC to study impact of college

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

The Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission will conduct a study to determine the effects of locating a branch campus of Roosevelt University at Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St.

An advisory arm of the Arlington Heights Village Board, the seven-member commission agreed to do the environmental impact study at the request of Miner area residents who attended a commission meeting Thursday.

The study is expected to take about two months to complete and will look at the impact Roosevelt would have on noise and air pollution levels, traffic and parking, commission chairwoman Jean Hanlon said.

MINER AREA RESIDENTS plan to ask the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education to postpone making a decision on leasing Miner to Roosevelt until the impact study is completed. A petition to this effect, signed by 400 residents, will be presented to the board when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the administration building, 301 W. South St.

Officials of Chicago-based Roosevelt University have asked the board to allow them to lease either Miner or Thomas Junior High School, 303 E. Thomas Ave., as a branch campus beginning in September 1978. While noting that either of the schools would be acceptable, they picked Miner as their first choice because of its structural design and its proximity to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

The board has decided to close one of its four junior highs at the end of the 1977-78 school year because of declining enrollment and rising budget deficits, but has not named the school.

"It's commendable that the commission is doing an impact study, but I'd prefer the scope be more broad than zeroing in on one location," board member Edith Jolly said after attending Thursday's meeting. "What is the impact of having a university in Arlington Heights?"

MRS. JOLLY SAID she would like to know whether residents see a university as an asset or a liability and whether they see it as a liability only if it is located in their neighborhood.

"Any change made in a community is going to have an environmental impact and we also have to look at the impact of a boarded-up, empty building," she said.

Mrs. Hanlon said her commission is undertaking the impact study in conjunction with ongoing concerns in the Miner area relating to Recreation Park, the Arlington Market Shopping Center and the manufacturing facilities off Miner Street.

Neighborhood residents have expressed concern that the traffic university classes would generate could endanger the safety of children bicycling to Recreation Park and walking to Windsor School, which adjoins Miner.

Roto building on new site

Roto Lincoln Mercury is building what it bills as the largest Lincoln Mercury dealership in the Midwest, at 1400 E. Rand Rd., Arlington Heights.

Owner Dick Roto said the 38,000-square-foot building will be completed by late 1977.

Roto said he is negotiating with several import dealers to lease his company's present building at 1410 E. Northwest Hwy.

The new facility will include twin glass-domed showrooms for new and used cars, a repair shop and an employe cafeteria, Roto said.

Property owners reject streetlight compromise

Commercial property owners included in a special assessment tax district to finance streetlights along Northwest Highway have rejected a compromise offer from village officials.

A 20 per cent reduction in the businessmen's bills for the $180,000 streetlighting project was offered by the village but rejected as "insufficient," James Hendricks, attorney for nine of the property owners, said Friday.

In an unprecedented move Thursday, the village board met with Hendricks and several businessmen included in the special tax district and agreed to conduct further negotiations. Ordinarily, adjustments to assessments are made only by the courts after a special assessment is approved by the village board and filed for approval in circuit court.

HENDRICKS SAID that unless the village offers a bigger reduction, the property owners will leave it up to Judge Joseph Schneider of Cook County Circuit Court at a hearing June 21.

"At the hearing the village will have to prove there is a private benefit accruing to these people and explain the gross disparity between the assessments for residential property owners and the commercial property owners," Hendricks said. "I think the village will have a tough time doing that," he said.

How the tearjerkers rate

The following is a ranking of the 14 daytime soap operas according to their national A. C. Nielsen ratings. The networks on which they are carried are indicated and their local ratings are denoted in parentheses.

As The World Turns CBS (5)
A conservative soap that centers on the Hughes family and is often a scene of musical beds.

Another World NBC (9)
A throwback to the original soap opera with much involved mate-swapping between the Randolph, Corey, Frame and Matthew families.

The Guiding Light CBS (7)
One of the oldest soaps, entering its 41st year on radio and television, that dabbles in the Bauers and Trappist family affairs.

Young and the Restless CBS (7)
A three-year-old soap that revolves around the Foster and Eliot families and that deals openly with contemporary issues and problems.

All My Children ABC (1)
A seven-year-old soap tuned into social issues of the day and heavily into romances going on within the Tyler and Martin families.

Search for Tomorrow CBS (9)
This is television's oldest soap, begun just a few months before any of the other existing veterans, which is blessed with the long-time presence of Mary Stuart as the three times widowed homemaker Joanne Vincente.

Days of our Lives NBC (9)
It has traditionally been one of the boldest daytime dramas that centers around the Horton family and claims one of television's most popular couples on and off the screen, Susan Seaforth Hayes and Bill Hayes.

Ryan's Hope ABC (3)
One of the soaps with a real life location, New York City, where the Ryans operate a bar.

One Life to Live ABC (1)
Currently centered on the tug of war going on between George Rheinholt and Jacqueline Courtney, it is an on-going tangle of love-hate relationships.

General Hospital ABC (3)
Just recently received a face-lift to become more relevant, but the show still dallies in the traditional affairs of television doctors.

The Doctors NBC (13)
In this soap, the hospital is more important than the town. In this case Dr. Matt Powers still reigns supreme over Hope Memorial Hospital.

Love of Life CBS (12)

Edge of Night ABC (5)
There are multi-families and multi-mysteries in this soap many times revolving around the Saxons, Richardsons and Karrs.

Lovers and Friends NBC (13)
The newest soap opera on television so far, focusing on the traumas and lessons of the Saxton family.

Networks find gold in soap opera

50-year-old phenomenon finally hits TV prime time

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The year is 1925 and the place is Chicago. Jim and Marion Jordan, a young vaudeville couple performing in town, are asked to help develop a new form of radio promotion.

They are asked to portray the main characters in "The Smith Family" which includes a mother with two daughters, one who is being courted by a prizefighter and the other who is being courted by a nice Jewish boy.

A year later writers Charles Correll and Freeman Gosden are asked by a Chicago radio station to come up with a similar continuing comedy to highlight advertising. They create and act out all of the parts in the original "Amos 'n' Andy," the story of two young Alabama boys who come to seek their fortune in Chicago.

The soap opera had been born.

All sorts of ongoing, humorous skits followed in the same form. "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" was one serial based on the lives of Southern mountain people while "The Goldbergs" became the most popular and enduring of the early ethnic soaps. Despite demographics and ethnicity, the one common element these early soap operas had was an authentic domestic flavor and believable characters.

Soap operas are America's greatest continuing broadcasting success. Spanning more than 50 years, the soaps have been able to survive the transition from radio to television and today are more popular than ever. Today, Herald TV writer Diane Mermigas begins a three-part series examining the actors, writers and producers that have nurtured the soap opera phenomemon.

WHAT BEGAN as "catch your ear" contrivance for selling products such as Pepsodent and Oxydol on the air suddenly had captured the hearts of the American public and took off like a shot.

One never would have suspected that somewhere in Middle America between the two elite coasts of the entertainment world, that a new form of melodrama would be born, developed and adopted by the listening public as pure American folklore. Chicago was and still is the source of much soap opera inspiration.

Just about the time that Molly Goldberg and other soap opera characters were becoming household names, radio bosses suddenly came to realize the potential of the form as ongoing entertainment. WGN radio was one of the first stations to commission the creation and production of a regular night-time serial entitled "Painted Dreams" which was launched in 1932 by Irna Phillips, who is considered to be the mother of the contemporary soap opera.

Ms. Phillips' concentration on women in the home and her creative manipulation of melodrama paved the way for developing soap operas on all three networks. Families throughout the country gathered around their radios in the afternoon and evening to digest the teary or gutsy episodes of other serials Ms. Phillips created such as "Woman in White," "Road of Life," and "The Guiding Light."

OTHER SOAP opera writers set out to pattern Irna Phillips' successful formula, basing their stories on the woman's place in the home, social divisions and love. Her contemporaries included Elaine Carrington who created "When a Girl Marries" and Frank and Anne Hummert who created "Our Gal Sunday" and "Backstage Wife."

The soaps offered the American people an escape from the disappointment and traumas of their own lives and the ravages of the world such as war.

In the late 1950s, when more than 30 soap operas were filling the radio airwaves, featuring characters such as Ma Perkins and Helen Trent, the new medium of television was beginning to catch on.

Although the soaps were popular, radio stations began dropping the network — produced dramas to make room for local programming which would attract a higher priced and more sought-after local advertising dollar. It was radio's way of staying competitive with television and so programs such as "Road of Life" and "This is Nora Drake" was canceled.

As is still the case today, audiences thought their favorite soap operas would last forever and, yet, the mortality rate during the transition from radio to television was very high.

Television definitely presented some new problems for the soaps. Production costs were much higher because the show was no longer just limited to sound. There now were sets, costuming, makeup and general appearances to worry about.

THE FACT that affairs and wrongdoings could no longer just be referred to in dialogue and had to be acted out on camera opened up a new can of worms for soap opera producers.

But somehow the soaps survived. CBS was the first to venture into full-fledged television soaps in 1950 with "The First Hundred Years," followed by "Search for Tomorrow" and "Love of Life" in 1951 which still are on the air.

Today, soap operas are daytime television's biggest and brightest gem. There is a lot of money to be made from a good soap opera and the advertising, the main source of network profit, still is done largely by the soap industry which initiated the form of real life drama as a promotional stunt more than 50 years ago.

THE FACT that prime time television has begun to copy the daytime soap opera formula with much success is proof of the high plateau daytime drama has reached.

The audience loyalty and involvement in soaps is unparalleled anywhere else on television and nowhere in the uncertain world of television is an actor or actress assured of more steady work.

There seems to be little separation that soap opera fans can make between reality and the fantasy they become so immersed in on television. To many of the more than the 31 million people in this country who watch soaps every week, soapland is real.

Tomorrow: Some of television's biggest soap opera stars discuss their attitudes toward the evolution of soap opera and the characters they portray.

66 die in Soviet plane crash in Cuba

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Soviet airliner crashed Friday at Havana Airport, killing 66 of the 68 persons aboard, an official of the Cuban Ministry of Foreign Relations said.

Fernando Garcia told UPI by phone from Havana that 56 passengers and the entire crew of 10 were killed in the crash landing of the plane about 1,000 yards from the runway.

Garcia said only two passengers survived — a Russian boy and a West German woman. He gave no further details except to say authorities were investigating the tragedy.

The IL62 Turbotjet was on a flight from Moscow via Frankfurt and Lisbon.

EARLIER, A CANADIAN diplomat in Havana said the two survivors were critically burned in the disaster. The aide to Canadian Embassy First Sec. S. F. Pattee said the plane was trying to make an emergency landing with one engine burning.

The aide, identified only as Mr. Fraga, said one of the Soviet-built airplane's four turbojet engines was on fire as the craft tried to land at Jose Marti Airport on the outskirts of Havana.

Fraga said the plane came down "several hundred meters (yards) short of the runway" and burst into flames.

Patee, contacted later by phone in Havana, said he had no official report on the crash but added he had been told the plane was carrying about 55 persons when it crashed "and we understand there may be a couple of survivors."

The official Soviet news agency Tass reported from Moscow that "there are human casualties" in the crash. But as is the Soviet practice in disasters, Tass gave no casualty figures or details.

A SOVIET GOVERNMENT commission was established to investigate the crash, Tass said.

The IL62 aircraft, with four turbojet engines, is capable of carrying as many as 186 passengers.

It was the first officially confirmed crash of a Soviet airliner since last February, when a turboprop IL18 crashed on a domestic flight in Central Asia. The number of casualties has not been made public.

In January, at least 90 persons were said to have died in the crash of a TU104 jetliner near the city of Alma Ata in the republic of Kazakhstan. That crash was never officially confirmed.

The Soviets rarely acknowledge aircraft disasters unless the news has leaked out or appear likely to become public. Casualty figures are normally kept a secret.

Aviation sources in New York said Havana airport was closed briefly after Friday's crash, but was reopened later.

Troops surround hijacked train

ASSEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — South Moluccan gunmen Friday freed 104 tired, hungry children from a besieged schoolhouse but 15 miles away authorities moved troops and ambulances around a hijacked train where the terrorists held 56 more hostages.

A government spokesman said troops and nearby police heard two shots fired in the area of the train. But he said there was no firm indication of who had fired them.

The release of the children left four teachers still at gunpoint in the school in the village of Bovensmilde in northern Holland.

As the ambulances rolled into place around the stalled four-coach passenger train, authorities cleared the tracks for about a mile.

"We have arrived at a stage where we can say very little," a government spokesman said after a day of negotiations with the terrorists over a field telephone.

Heavily armed troops in armored personnel carriers surrounded a rail crossing area near the train and replaced wooden barriers along the tracks with a twin wall of steel and barbed wire.

The 18 military ambulances packed with stretchers and green blankets were parked nearby.

Officials said privately the terse public statement reflected caution at a delicate turning point in the government's bid to end the twin sieges now more than four days old.

The gunmen, believed to number about a dozen, are part of the 35,000-member Moluccan community living in Holland. The terrorists are pressing for independence for their homeland, the former Spice Islands, which came under Indonesian control with the pullout of Dutch colonial troops more than 25 years ago.

The gunmen, who grabbed the hostages Monday, demanded the release of 21 South Moluccan prisoners, including those involved in a similar attack in 1975, and a getaway plane.

Officials said the government made no concessions to obtain the release of the children, many of whom walked out arm-in-arm smiling.

Premier Joop Den Uyl told reporters the talks with the train gunmen broke off during the afternoon at the government's request after a long night of "intensive contacts."

The hostages, crowded into the front part of the train, were earlier denied food. In a macabre mock hanging, the gunmen underscored earlier death threats by forcing four hostages to stand on the tracks with nooses around their necks.

The gunmen accepted hot food Thursday night, and Friday morning took on water, chocolate milk and sandwiches. They also handed over notes requesting medicines.

The train passengers, including a woman five months pregnant, also received blankets for the first time, candles, underwear, toilet paper, tobacco and cigaretts.

State Dept. pleased with talkative Young's trip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While several foreign governments fumed at U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young Friday, the State Dept. said it was "pleased" with his African trip — event hough he once again disagreed with the official U.S. line.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said Young and Sec. of State Cyrus Vance met for two hours Thursday in an "extremely cordial and informative" session.

"The secretary of state is pleased with Ambassador Young's trip," Carter said. "It was a very valuable one and served its purpose."

AFTER THE MEETING, Young left the State Department by a side entrance without answering questions.

There were reports that State Department officials — who had expressed "grave concern" at the presence of Cuban military advisers in Ethiopia — were angered at Young for saying the Cubans "might be able to help."

But Carter denied that Young's freewheeling remarks had caused problems.

"The State Department is not enraged," he said.

TWO DAYS EARLIER, Carter had said the United States took a "serious view" of the possibility of a larger Cuban military involvement in Ethiopia. He warned their presence would be "an impediment" to better relations between Washington and Havana.

Young, in London Thursday, grinned when asked what he thought of the situation.

"The State Department has expressed grave concern and I guess that's what I should do too," he said. "But the Ethiopians are killing people right and left and I guess I think that maybe the Cubans may be a little more rational than the Ethiopians at this point."

While the State Department said it did not object to Young's remarks, his comments on other subjects drew angry rebuttals.

As he flew home from his African tour Thursday, Young told reporters that the Swedes were "terrible racists" who treated blacks as badly as they are treated in Queens.

HE SAID THE Russians were "the worst racists in the world," and stated that Britain's "old colonial mentality" was still "very strong throughout the island."

Queens Borough President Donald R. Manes termed Young's comment "an insult to the two million people of Queens," and questioned whether he knew anything about the borough across the East River from Manhattan.

"His thoughts and feelings about how Queens residents might think were certainly a well-kept secret during the Carter campaign," Manes said.

Manes and Young worked for Carter in Queens, which went for Carter by a substantial margin last November.

Young, however, was unrepentant. "I didn't live there but four years," he said, referring to 1957 to 1961 when he resided in Queens while serving on the staff of the National Council of Churches.

Carter gets new, clear view of sub

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — President Carter, a onetime Navy submariner, piloted a nuclear sub deep in the Atlantic Friday and took part in mock underwater torpedo attacks on a U.S. target ship.

"He did a superb job," Admiral Hyman G. Rickover, the father of the nuclear submarine and once Carter's Navy boss, said after the nine-hour presidential cruise aboard the U.S.S. Los Angeles — a 360-foot hunter-killer sub whose primary wartime mission is to destroy Soviet strategic missile submarines before they can fire at U.S. targets.

"He actually piloted the ship . . . and operated the throttle of the plant when it was making top speed," Rickover said.

CARTER ALSO tried out the periscope and the diving plane controls during nearly four hours of underwater maneuvers designed to acquaint him first hand with U.S. strategic weaponry.

Clad in a two-piece rain suit and a cap bearing the legend, "Commander in Chief," Carter told reporters dockside he was impressed with the first underwater ride he — or any President — has ever had aboard a nuclear-powered sub.

"It is very crucial that our friends and potential adversaries understand that our country is equipped to defend ourselves to maintain the peace without belligerence or threat . . . with a will to do what is right and ability to do what is right in defending our country," he said.

Noting the Los Angeles had been operating at its top-secret top speed, "and under all kinds of emergency situations," he said: "I'm very proud of what I've seen. I believe with absolute certainly there's no finer ship in the world than this one."

The Los Angeles also has the capability of carrying the "cruise missile" that is now under development and is a sensitive bone of contention in U.S.-Soviet negotiations on a new strategic arms limitation treaty.

The Preident said he was well briefed "on how this ship could utilize the cruise missile in carrying out its basic purposes, and I was highly impressed with what I saw."

And he doesn't want a Carter button either

"With the help of the President's Club," Mondale's letter said, "the Democratic Party can continue to seek out excellent candidates and provide campaign services to assure their election next year." Regner wrote back to Mondale Friday saying, "I am sure you will arrange to have my name removed from your mailing list when you realize that for the fourth year in a row the Illinois Conservative Union has voted me the most conservative senator in Illinois."

• Elizabeth Taylor may saddle up again to do a sequel to the movie "National Velvet," but she's not sure she wants the same title on the film. In the sequel she will play the part of Velvet Brown as a middle-aged woman. "I played Velvet when I was 11 years old. I am now 45," Ms. Taylor said. Networks find gold in soap opera

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The year is 1925 and the place is Chicago. Jim and Marion Jordan, a young vaudeville couple performing in town, are asked to help develop a new form of radio promotion.

They are asked to portray the main characters in "The Smith Family" which includes a mother with two daughters, one who is being courted by a prizefighter and the other who is being courted by a nice Jewish boy.

A year later writers Charles Correll and Freeman Gosden are asked by a Chicago radio station to come up with a similar continuing comedy to highlight advertising. They create and act out all of the parts in the original "Amos 'n' Andy," the story of two young Alabama boys who come to seek their fortune in Chicago.

The soap opera had been born.

All sorts of ongoing, humorous skits followed in the same form. "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" was one serial based on the lives of Southern mountain people while "The Goldbergs" became the most popular and enduring of the early ethnic soaps. Despite demographics and ethnicity, the one common element these early soap operas had was an authentic domestic flavor and believable characters.

Soap operas are America's greatest continuing broadcasting success. Spanning more than 50 years, the soaps have been able to survive the transition from radio to television and today are more popular than ever. Today, Herald TV writer Diane Mermigas begins a three-part series examining the actors, writers and producers that have nurtured the soap opera phenomemon.

WHAT BEGAN as "catch your ear" contrivance for selling products such as Pepsodent and Oxydol on the air suddenly had captured the hearts of the American public and took off like a shot.

One never would have suspected that somewhere in Middle America between the two elite coasts of the entertainment world, that a new form of melodrama would be born, developed and adopted by the listening public as pure American folklore. Chicago was and still is the source of much soap opera inspiration.

Just about the time that Molly Goldberg and other soap opera characters were becoming household names, radio bosses suddenly came to realize the potential of the form as ongoing entertainment. WGN radio was one of the first stations to commission the creation and production of a regular night-time serial entitled "Painted Dreams" which was launched in 1932 by Irna Phillips, who is considered to be the mother of the contemporary soap opera.

Ms. Phillips' concentration on women in the home and her creative manipulation of melodrama paved the way for developing soap operas on all three networks. Families throughout the country gathered around their radios in the afternoon and evening to digest the teary or gutsy episodes of other serials Ms. Phillips created such as "Woman in White," "Road of Life," and "The Guiding Light."

OTHER SOAP opera writers set out to pattern Irna Phillips' successful formula, basing their stories on the woman's place in the home, social divisions and love. Her contemporaries included Elaine Carrington who created "When a Girl Marries" and Frank and Anne Hummert who created "Our Gal Sunday" and "Backstage Wife."

The soaps offered the American people an escape from the disappointment and traumas of their own lives and the ravages of the world such as war.

In the late 1950s, when more than 30 soap operas were filling the radio airwaves, featuring characters such as Ma Perkins and Helen Trent, the new medium of television was beginning to catch on.

Although the soaps were popular, radio stations began dropping the network — produced dramas to make room for local programming which would attract a higher priced and more sought-after local advertising dollar. It was radio's way of staying competitive with television and so programs such as "Road of Life" and "This is Nora Drake" was canceled.

As is still the case today, audiences thought their favorite soap operas would last forever and, yet, the mortality rate during the transition from radio to television was very high.

Television definitely presented some new problems for the soaps. Production costs were much higher because the show was no longer just limited to sound. There now were sets, costuming, makeup and general appearances to worry about.

THE FACT that affairs and wrongdoings could no longer just be referred to in dialogue and had to be acted out on camera opened up a new can of worms for soap opera producers.

But somehow the soaps survived. CBS was the first to venture into full-fledged television soaps in 1950 with "The First Hundred Years," followed by "Search for Tomorrow" and "Love of Life" in 1951 which still are on the air.

Today, soap operas are daytime television's biggest and brightest gem. There is a lot of money to be made from a good soap opera and the advertising, the main source of network profit, still is done largely by the soap industry which initiated the form of real life drama as a promotional stunt more than 50 years ago.

THE FACT that prime time television has begun to copy the daytime soap opera formula with much success is proof of the high plateau daytime drama has reached.

The audience loyalty and involvement in soaps is unparalleled anywhere else on television and nowhere in the uncertain world of television is an actor or actress assured of more steady work.

There seems to be little separation that soap opera fans can make between reality and the fantasy they become so immersed in on television. To many of the more than the 31 million people in this country who watch soaps every week, soapland is real.

Tomorrow: Some of television's biggest soap opera stars discuss their attitudes toward the evolution of soap opera and the characters they portray.

66 die in Soviet plane crash in Cuba

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Soviet airliner crashed Friday at Havana Airport, killing 66 of the 68 persons aboard, an official of the Cuban Ministry of Foreign Relations said.

Fernando Garcia told UPI by phone from Havana that 56 passengers and the entire crew of 10 were killed in the crash landing of the plane about 1,000 yards from the runway.

Garcia said only two passengers survived — a Russian boy and a West German woman. He gave no further details except to say authorities were investigating the tragedy.

The IL62 Turbotjet was on a flight from Moscow via Frankfurt and Lisbon.

EARLIER, A CANADIAN diplomat in Havana said the two survivors were critically burned in the disaster. The aide to Canadian Embassy First Sec. S. F. Pattee said the plane was trying to make an emergency landing with one engine burning.

The aide, identified only as Mr. Fraga, said one of the Soviet-built airplane's four turbojet engines was on fire as the craft tried to land at Jose Marti Airport on the outskirts of Havana.

Fraga said the plane came down "several hundred meters (yards) short of the runway" and burst into flames.

Patee, contacted later by phone in Havana, said he had no official report on the crash but added he had been told the plane was carrying about 55 persons when it crashed "and we understand there may be a couple of survivors."

The official Soviet news agency Tass reported from Moscow that "there are human casualties" in the crash. But as is the Soviet practice in disasters, Tass gave no casualty figures or details.

A SOVIET GOVERNMENT commission was established to investigate the crash, Tass said.

The IL62 aircraft, with four turbojet engines, is capable of carrying as many as 186 passengers.

It was the first officially confirmed crash of a Soviet airliner since last February, when a turboprop IL18 crashed on a domestic flight in Central Asia. The number of casualties has not been made public.

In January, at least 90 persons were said to have died in the crash of a TU104 jetliner near the city of Alma Ata in the republic of Kazakhstan. That crash was never officially confirmed.

The Soviets rarely acknowledge aircraft disasters unless the news has leaked out or appear likely to become public. Casualty figures are normally kept a secret.

Aviation sources in New York said Havana airport was closed briefly after Friday's crash, but was reopened later.

Troops surround hijacked train

ASSEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — South Moluccan gunmen Friday freed 104 tired, hungry children from a besieged schoolhouse but 15 miles away authorities moved troops and ambulances around a hijacked train where the terrorists held 56 more hostages.

A government spokesman said troops and nearby police heard two shots fired in the area of the train. But he said there was no firm indication of who had fired them.

The release of the children left four teachers still at gunpoint in the school in the village of Bovensmilde in northern Holland.

As the ambulances rolled into place around the stalled four-coach passenger train, authorities cleared the tracks for about a mile.

"We have arrived at a stage where we can say very little," a government spokesman said after a day of negotiations with the terrorists over a field telephone.

Heavily armed troops in armored personnel carriers surrounded a rail crossing area near the train and replaced wooden barriers along the tracks with a twin wall of steel and barbed wire.

The 18 military ambulances packed with stretchers and green blankets were parked nearby.

Officials said privately the terse public statement reflected caution at a delicate turning point in the government's bid to end the twin sieges now more than four days old.

The gunmen, believed to number about a dozen, are part of the 35,000-member Moluccan community living in Holland. The terrorists are pressing for independence for their homeland, the former Spice Islands, which came under Indonesian control with the pullout of Dutch colonial troops more than 25 years ago.

The gunmen, who grabbed the hostages Monday, demanded the release of 21 South Moluccan prisoners, including those involved in a similar attack in 1975, and a getaway plane.

Officials said the government made no concessions to obtain the release of the children, many of whom walked out arm-in-arm smiling.

Premier Joop Den Uyl told reporters the talks with the train gunmen broke off during the afternoon at the government's request after a long night of "intensive contacts."

The hostages, crowded into the front part of the train, were earlier denied food. In a macabre mock hanging, the gunmen underscored earlier death threats by forcing four hostages to stand on the tracks with nooses around their necks.

The gunmen accepted hot food Thursday night, and Friday morning took on water, chocolate milk and sandwiches. They also handed over notes requesting medicines.

The train passengers, including a woman five months pregnant, also received blankets for the first time, candles, underwear, toilet paper, tobacco and cigaretts.

State Dept. pleased with talkative Young's trip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While several foreign governments fumed at U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young Friday, the State Dept. said it was "pleased" with his African trip — event hough he once again disagreed with the official U.S. line.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said Young and Sec. of State Cyrus Vance met for two hours Thursday in an "extremely cordial and informative" session.

"The secretary of state is pleased with Ambassador Young's trip," Carter said. "It was a very valuable one and served its purpose."

AFTER THE MEETING, Young left the State Department by a side entrance without answering questions.

There were reports that State Department officials — who had expressed "grave concern" at the presence of Cuban military advisers in Ethiopia — were angered at Young for saying the Cubans "might be able to help."

But Carter denied that Young's freewheeling remarks had caused problems.

"The State Department is not enraged," he said.

TWO DAYS EARLIER, Carter had said the United States took a "serious view" of the possibility of a larger Cuban military involvement in Ethiopia. He warned their presence would be "an impediment" to better relations between Washington and Havana.

Young, in London Thursday, grinned when asked what he thought of the situation.

"The State Department has expressed grave concern and I guess that's what I should do too," he said. "But the Ethiopians are killing people right and left and I guess I think that maybe the Cubans may be a little more rational than the Ethiopians at this point."

While the State Department said it did not object to Young's remarks, his comments on other subjects drew angry rebuttals.

HE SAID THE Russians were "the worst racists in the world," and stated that Britain's "old colonial mentality" was still "very strong throughout the island."

Queens Borough President Donald R. Manes termed Young's comment "an insult to the two million people of Queens," and questioned whether he knew anything about the borough across the East River from Manhattan.

"His thoughts and feelings about how Queens residents might think were certainly a well-kept secret during the Carter campaign," Manes said.

Manes and Young worked for Carter in Queens, which went for Carter by a substantial margin last November.

Young, however, was unrepentant. "I didn't live there but four years," he said, referring to 1957 to 1961 when he resided in Queens while serving on the staff of the National Council of Churches.

Anticrime bills passed by Senate

A wide ranging anticrime measure, including the key proposal of Gov. James R. Thompson's plan, passed the Illinois Senate, 46-4, Friday afternoon with practically no debate as the body dashed to meet a midnight deadline for passing its own bills. The bill (S165) combines part of Thompson's package and anticrime bills of about a dozen senators, including the creation of a new Class K felony for heinous crimes such as rape, aggravated kidnapping for ransom, armed robbery, arson and taking indecent liberties with a child.

In other action the Senate also:

• Passed, 43-7, S1000 by Sen. Philip Rock, D-Chicago, changing the primary election date in non-presidential years to September but leaving presidential year primaries in March. Rock urged backing for his bill since it is the only primary bill still pending. If the bill becomes law, it could affect jockeying for 1978 races since candidates could file nominating papers in June instead of this December.

• Defeated an effort to raise the state drinking age for beer and wine from 19 back to 21. The bill's sponsor, State Sen. Frank Ozinga, R-Evergreen Park, had tried to get the bill passed last week but it fell one vote short. Friday's vote, 28 to 25, with five senators voting present, was two votes short of the necessary majority.

• Passed legislation hiking the corporate tax rate for the Metropolitan Sanitary District 38 per cent over the next three years.

The increase will give the MSD an additional 32 million in new revenue, but according to the measure's sponsor, State Sen. Frank Saviokas, D-Chicago, homeowners with property valued at $50,000 will see their taxes rise about $5 each year through 1980.

Lisa's killers get 200 years

An angry judge sentenced two youths to prison for 200 to 400 years Friday for the murder of 9-year-old Lisa Cabassa. Cook County Circuit Court Judge Frank W. Barbaro, in passing sentence on Michael Evans, 19, and Paul Terry, 18, both of Chicago, said they "showed no remorse whatsoever." Lisa was strangled Jan. 14, 1976, after being abducted near her South Side home. The two youths were found guilty by a jury April 27, largely on the testimony of prosecution witness Judith Januszewski, a neighbor of the victim.

Kimes bond set at $755,000

David L. Kimes, an escaped prisoner who held a man hostage for 14 hours before surrendering to police, was charged with forcible detention and escape Friday. Total bond was set at $755,000. Kimes, being held at the DuPage County Jail in Wheaton, was charged Thursday with armed robbery. Bond for that charge and Friday's charges totaled $700,000 and a pretrial hearing was scheduled for June 9. Kimes, 27, Aurora, was awaiting trial on charges of armed robbery, theft and forgery when he escaped from the Kane County Courthouse. Bond for those charges was $55,000 and trial was scheduled for June 6.

Family protests did not stop Columbo cremation

A brother of Frank Columbo appeared close to tears Friday as he described how he pleaded with his niece, Patricia Columbo, to give her slain family a Catholic burial rather than having them cremated.

Mario Columbo, of Elk Grove Village, testified in what prosecuting attorneys said was an effort to show jurors how callously Miss Columbo disposed of the bodies of her parents and younger brother to destroy evidence linking her to their slayings.

Miss Columbo, 20, and Frank DeLuca, 39, are being tried in Cook County Circuit Court on charges they murdered Frank Columbo, his wife, Mary, and their son Michael, 13, May 4, 1976, at their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

MARIO COLUMBO said Miss Columbo telephoned him May 9, 1976, two days after her family's bodies were discovered by police.

Mario Columbo said his niece told him the bodies would be cremated May 11, 1976. He said he protested.

"She said, 'It will be all right, Mom and Dad and Michael all will be together,' " Mario Columbo said. "I said, 'We're Catholic, we don't believe in cremation.' "

Miss Columbo became furious, Mario Columbo said. His voice trembling, he said she told him, "Look, you f--- a---, who the F--- do you think you are? I'm the heir. We'll do it my way."

THE BODIES were cremated as Miss Columbo ordered. During the days immediately following the slayings, Miss Columbo never cried or expressed sorrow over her family's slayings, Mario Columbo testified.

Prosecutors also called witnesses who last saw the Columbos alive on the day they were slain.

They included Glenn Miller, 13, of Elk Grove Village, a friend of Michael Columbo, and Judy DiMartino, of Hoffman Estates, a waitress at an Arlington Heights restaurant who said she served them between 7:30 and 9 p.m.

victed child porno dealers, one of whom still operates a business.

That man, Guy Strait, was brought to the hearing from the Stateville Correctional Center, where he is serving a 10 to 20 year term for sexual acts with a minor.

HE TOLD THE committee he never had difficulty finding boys willing to pose in films.

"Recruit? I would say that's a poor choice of words," he said. "You'd have to say, how did I beat them away from my door. Money has no bearing on it. Ego is the primary reason someone jumps in front of a camera."

Strait talked about his business that would sell 10- to 12-minute films, called "loops," for $25 to $50 a copy. "Pornography is a self-defeating business," he said. "The more there is, the less it's worth, so that the first copies sell very well, the latter ones won't sell as well."

He spoke of three prominent dealers in the country he knew, one from Houston who is serving 10 years in Leavenworth Prison, another who is serving 14 years in Attica Prison and a third who might yet be in business.

Strait was scornful of the subcommittee at one point, defending some of his activities because he said he never used extremely young children or asked anyone "to do anything in front of a camera that they didn't normally do."

HE SAID HE had "reservations about the sincerity of this committee," saying society doesn't ensure the civil rights of children and that he had "spent all my fortune and all of my life fighting for the rights of juveniles."

But Strait's testimony was followed by that of Gerald S. Richards, an inmate at Jackson State Prison in Michigan, who said he knew Strait and still receives the literature from Strait's F&F Distributors.

Richards told of how a part-time job in an adult book store during his college years started him in the child pornography business.

He told of an organization called "Better Life," whose initials also stand for "Boy love," which is active in the child porno business and some Boy Scout leaders and youth counselors use their positions to entice boys for pornographic purposes.

Others testifying at the hearing included Chicago Acting Mayor Michael A. Bilandic, Chicago Police Sgt. Ronald Kelly who is heading the department's investigation into child abuse, and Cook County State's Attorney Bernard Carey.

• Passed, 43-7, S1000 by Sen. Philip Rock, D-Chicago, changing the primary election date in non-presidential years to September but leaving presidential year primaries in March. Rock urged backing for his bill since it is the only primary bill still pending. If the bill becomes law, it could affect jockeying for 1978 races since candidates could file nominating papers in June instead of this December.

• Defeated an effort to raise the state drinking age for beer and wine from 19 back to 21. The bill's sponsor, State Sen. Frank Ozinga, R-Evergreen Park, had tried to get the bill passed last week but it fell one vote short. Friday's vote, 28 to 25, with five senators voting present, was two votes short of the necessary majority.

• Passed legislation hiking the corporate tax rate for the Metropolitan Sanitary District 38 per cent over the next three years.

The increase will give the MSD an additional 32 million in new revenue, but according to the measure's sponsor, State Sen. Frank Saviokas, D-Chicago, homeowners with property valued at $50,000 will see their taxes rise about $5 each year through 1980.

Lisa's killers get 200 years

An angry judge sentenced two youths to prison for 200 to 400 years Friday for the murder of 9-year-old Lisa Cabassa. Cook County Circuit Court Judge Frank W. Barbaro, in passing sentence on Michael Evans, 19, and Paul Terry, 18, both of Chicago, said they "showed no remorse whatsoever." Lisa was strangled Jan. 14, 1976, after being abducted near her South Side home. The two youths were found guilty by a jury April 27, largely on the testimony of prosecution witness Judith Januszewski, a neighbor of the victim.

Kimes bond set at $755,000

David L. Kimes, an escaped prisoner who held a man hostage for 14 hours before surrendering to police, was charged with forcible detention and escape Friday. Total bond was set at $755,000. Kimes, being held at the DuPage County Jail in Wheaton, was charged Thursday with armed robbery. Bond for that charge and Friday's charges totaled $700,000 and a pretrial hearing was scheduled for June 9. Kimes, 27, Aurora, was awaiting trial on charges of armed robbery, theft and forgery when he escaped from the Kane County Courthouse. Bond for those charges was $55,000 and trial was scheduled for June 6.

Family protests did not stop Columbo cremation

A brother of Frank Columbo appeared close to tears Friday as he described how he pleaded with his niece, Patricia Columbo, to give her slain family a Catholic burial rather than having them cremated.

Mario Columbo, of Elk Grove Village, testified in what prosecuting attorneys said was an effort to show jurors how callously Miss Columbo disposed of the bodies of her parents and younger brother to destroy evidence linking her to their slayings.

Miss Columbo, 20, and Frank DeLuca, 39, are being tried in Cook County Circuit Court on charges they murdered Frank Columbo, his wife, Mary, and their son Michael, 13, May 4, 1976, at their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

MARIO COLUMBO said Miss Columbo telephoned him May 9, 1976, two days after her family's bodies were discovered by police.

Mario Columbo said his niece told him the bodies would be cremated May 11, 1976. He said he protested.

"She said, 'It will be all right, Mom and Dad and Michael all will be together,' " Mario Columbo said. "I said, 'We're Catholic, we don't believe in cremation.' "

Miss Columbo became furious, Mario Columbo said. His voice trembling, he said she told him, "Look, you f--- a---, who the F--- do you think you are? I'm the heir. We'll do it my way."

THE BODIES were cremated as Miss Columbo ordered. During the days immediately following the slayings, Miss Columbo never cried or expressed sorrow over her family's slayings, Mario Columbo testified.

Prosecutors also called witnesses who last saw the Columbos alive on the day they were slain.

They included Glenn Miller, 13, of Elk Grove Village, a friend of Michael Columbo, and Judy DiMartino, of Hoffman Estates, a waitress at an Arlington Heights restaurant who said she served them between 7:30 and 9 p.m.

victed child porno dealers, one of whom still operates a business.

That man, Guy Strait, was brought to the hearing from the Stateville Correctional Center, where he is serving a 10 to 20 year term for sexual acts with a minor.

HE TOLD THE committee he never had difficulty finding boys willing to pose in films.

"Recruit? I would say that's a poor choice of words," he said. "You'd have to say, how did I beat them away from my door. Money has no bearing on it. Ego is the primary reason someone jumps in front of a camera."

Strait talked about his business that would sell 10- to 12-minute films, called "loops," for $25 to $50 a copy. "Pornography is a self-defeating business," he said. "The more there is, the less it's worth, so that the first copies sell very well, the latter ones won't sell as well."

He spoke of three prominent dealers in the country he knew, one from Houston who is serving 10 years in Leavenworth Prison, another who is serving 14 years in Attica Prison and a third who might yet be in business.

Strait was scornful of the subcommittee at one point, defending some of his activities because he said he never used extremely young children or asked anyone "to do anything in front of a camera that they didn't normally do."

HE SAID HE had "reservations about the sincerity of this committee," saying society doesn't ensure the civil rights of children and that he had "spent all my fortune and all of my life fighting for the rights of juveniles."

But Strait's testimony was followed by that of Gerald S. Richards, an inmate at Jackson State Prison in Michigan, who said he knew Strait and still receives the literature from Strait's F&F Distributors.

Richards told of how a part-time job in an adult book store during his college years started him in the child pornography business.

He told of an organization called "Better Life," whose initials also stand for "Boy love," which is active in the child porno business and some Boy Scout leaders and youth counselors use their positions to entice boys for pornographic purposes.

Rage over judge's rape statement boils at school

by SCOTT FOSDICK of The Herald staff

MADISON, Wis. — The national outrage over a Madison judge's comments in a rape case runs strongest where it all began, at Madison West High School.

It was here where three students dragged a classmate into a stairwell late last fall and raped her.

The girl's cries for help couldn't be heard over the noise of the school band practicing in a room nearby.

But the judge's statement in the case has been heard around the country.

JUDGE ARCHIE SIMONSON in sentencing one of the boys to court supervision at home, said the boy was reacting "normally" to a permissive society and to provocative clothing worn by women.

Although not all all young women at West share her fear, junior Roberta Fox said the school can be a dangerous place for a girl who doesn't know her way around.

"It can be really dangerous. It depends on who your friends are and what you say," she said.

Roberta said she is upset over the judge's implication that provocative clothing encourages rapists. She said she was a friend of the victim and that clothes didn't have anything to do with it.

"She was a girl who wouldn't wear those kinds of clothes to begin with," Roberta said.

"AS THE GIRL was wearing a turtleneck with a shirt on top of it, I don't see that it was a cause of the crime," Laura Chaffee, a junior said.

"I don't feel the way the girls dress affects the guys, that it means they can put their hands all over you," sophomore Cindy Roff said Friday."Maybe they ask for it, but that doesn't give anybody the right to go rape them."

"You should be able to go naked without getting raped." senior Valya Woodstock said.

Valya organized a petition drive among students, calling the judge "irrational and prejudiced."

The teachers passed around petitions of their own, berating the judge for his "blatant sexist attitude" and expressing concern over "the implications of his irresponsible statement for the future educational climate of all Madison high schools."

TRENCH COATS and swimsuits adorn women picketing outside Madison's City County Building. Barbara Kavadias, left, and Lisa Clark make the point that woman shouldn't base their dress on male hangups.

At one time, Madison West was considered peaceful. Central High School had the reputation of being the city's "tough" school.

BUT AS THE population moved to the outskirts of Madison, Central High School was closed because of low enrollment. By default, West became the school closest to the deteriorating downtown area, and began to experience the problems of an inner city school.

The school is located in an old, but well maintained residential neighborhood on Madison's near West Side. The students come from the well-to-do West Side as well as from the poorer South Side, and it is this mix that often is blamed for the school's troubles.

In recent months, West has seen a rash of student crime. Last October, 12 students were arrested in one week on various charges, including use of marijuana, drinking and traffic violations.

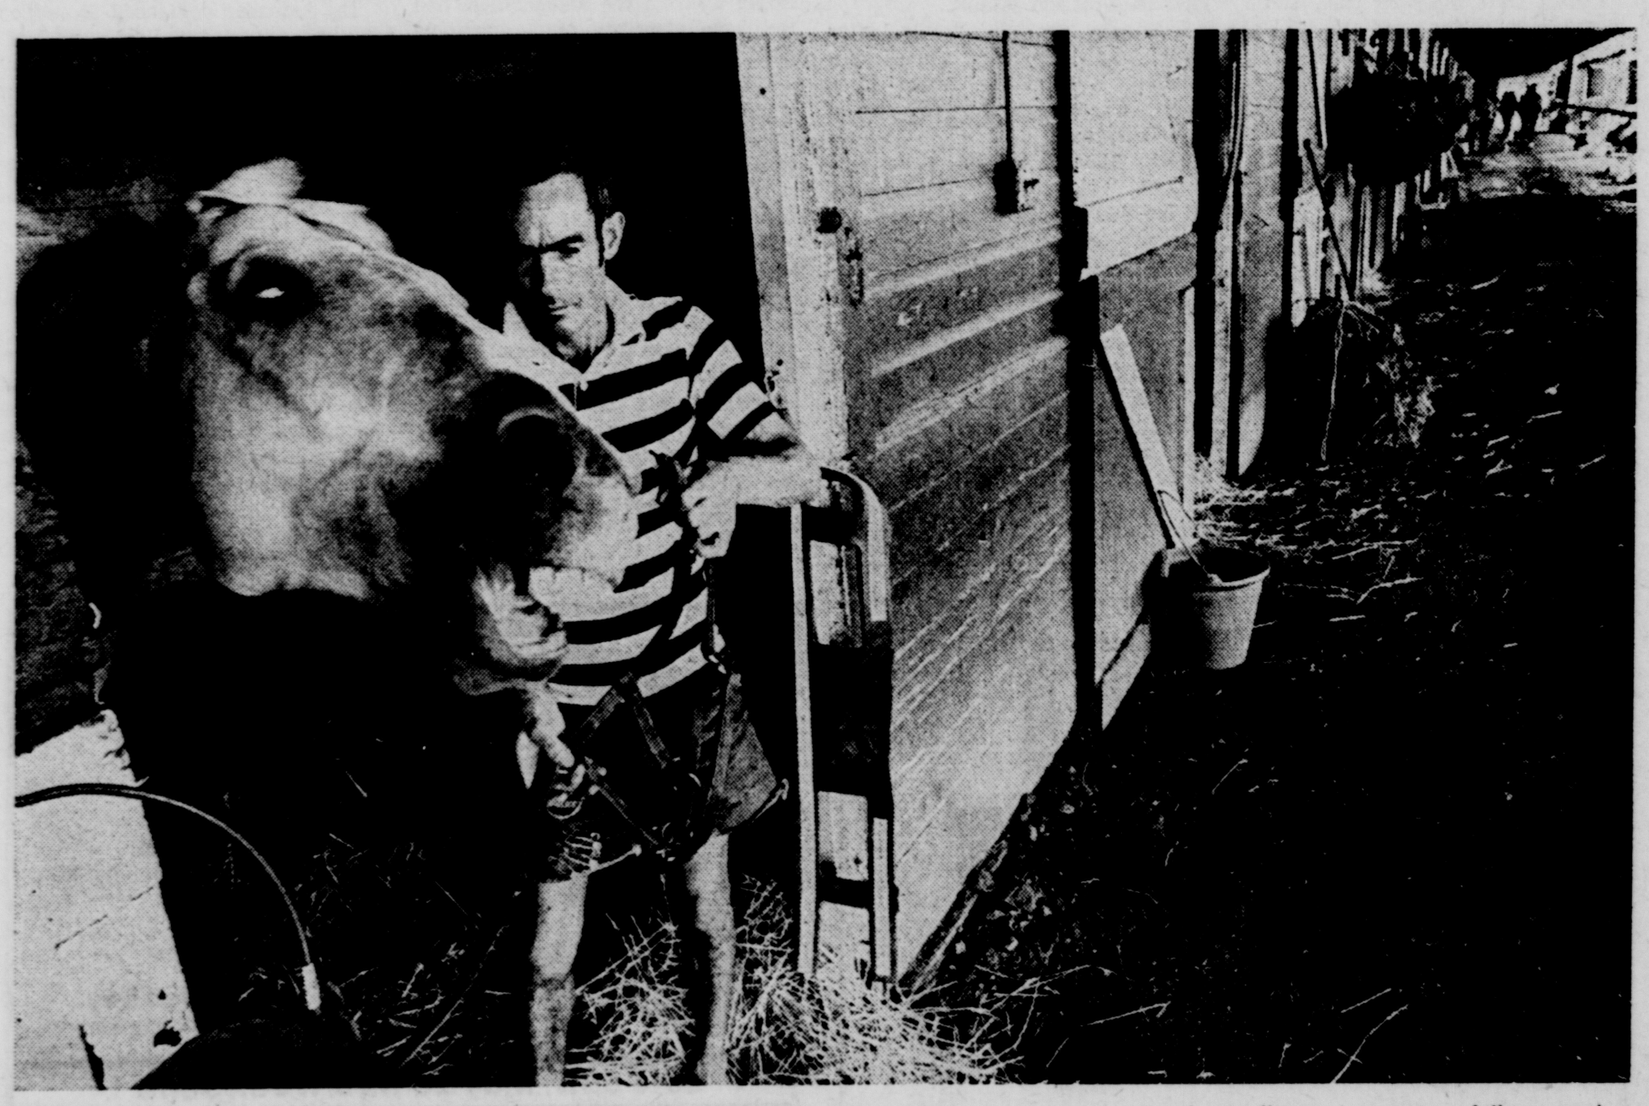
In December, a senior punched a teacher on hall duty, knocked him to the floor and kicked him in the face.

ONE 16-YEAR-OLD girl was arrested for carrying a foot-long knife and a chain. She told the police she was carrying them for protection.

"Some teachers are afraid," said Marion Kanable, an English teacher who organized the teacher's petition drive.

"The woman who walks with me walks with me because she doesn't want to be alone in the halls," she said.

It's to the point where the students themselves are calling for stricter supervision. In January, the student newspaper urged the administration to "take the hard line" on student law violations.



HORSES HAVE BEEN part of Scotty Mulligan's life since his boyhood days on a Scotland farm. Every evening, after grooming and feeding horses at Arlington Park Race Track, Mulligan entertains fellow workers with tales of his years as a European jockey.

Horse groom on top of the world

by NANCY GOTLER

He is barefoot, muddy and unshaven, but with a beer in one hand, a cigaret in the other and an audience for his well-worn stories, Scotty Milligan is on top of the world.

"This is our game," he said smiling widely, unembarrassed by his missing front teeth. "We wouldn't have nothing else."

Milligan is typical of the 1,100 workers who still live on the grounds of the Arlington Park Race Track this summer, caring for horses who run to help pay Milligan.

SEVERAL DOZEN workers have arrived since last week to prepare the 200 horses already on the grounds for the June 6 racing season opening.

Eventually there will be 2,000 horses in the barns and Milligan and the others will feed, groom and pamper them from now until the track closes Oct. 1.

And, like many of his fellow grooms, Milligan has a limitless arsenal of racing stories to impress younger workers and help pass a hot, lazy afternoon.

Milligan was born on a farm in Ayr, Scotland, about 40 years ago — he won't say exactly how many — and he grew up working with Clydesdale horses.

"All my brothers were 6 feet tall," the 122-pound, 4 foot 11 ex-jockey said in a light Scottish brogue. "I was the runt in the family and my father said I wouldn't make it as a jockey. But I did. It took a while — I ran 43 races before I won one — but I finally made it."

MAKING IT MEANT a 12-year career riding horses on race tracks in Scotland, England and the United States.

Why did he stop? "Too heavy," he said, patting his flat stomach and appearing 25 pounds lighter than he weighs. "My bones are too heavy. Besides, I don't have the energy any more."

Since 1963, Milligan has exercised and groomed horses for other jobkeys, traveling to tracks in New England, Florida, Kentucky and Illinois.

He reminisces about the well known horses he has trained and brags about their high lifetime purses winnings.

While he talks, others listen to the combination of rock and Latin music blaring from nearby apartments in the backstretch dormitory where Milligan lives with his wife, Nancy, also a groom.

"In the old days in Europe we had it tough," he said. "We had to do everything — exercise, train, groom and ride the horses. It was a good learning experience. Compared to that, what I do now is a piece of cake."

While he has every evening and most afternoons free, Milligan and the other grooms must awaken at 5 a.m. to begin working with the animals. But they don't complain.

"I don't plan to ever give it up," he said. "You're only as old as you feel and I feel 15. I expect to stay in the business forever. It's a great life."

Keeping an open mouth not easy for denturists

by TOM TIEDE

SHREVEPORT, L a .—(NEA)—William Dudley doesn't seem to be the kind of fellow who would willfully run afoul of the law. He is mild mannered and middle class, a family man and military veteran. On nights and weekends he goes into the skid row enclaves of town to do evangelical duty for the Assembly of God church.

And yet, according to Louisiana police, Bill Dudley's in a heap of trouble. He's been arrested for practicing dentistry without a license, which is the same as saying he has endangered the public health. He is now awaiting criminal court proceedings and if convicted he could be sent to prison for up to five years.

For his part, Dudley admits guilt — but to doing good rather than evil deeds. A skilled dental technician, he says he has for years been supplying dentures to patients without the aid or the expense of a supervising dentist. This is against state law, but Dudley says the law is wrong, and deserves to be broken until changed.

IN ESSENCE, Dudley sees himself as something of a dental crusader, an updated tooth fairy as it were. His cause is justice for the mouths and pocketbooks of America. He says dentists have shamefully monopolized the tooth repair industry, and at the same time have conspired to fix dental charges well beyond what is proper.

For example, Dudley says that under a dentist's supervision a technician such as himself will fashion a set of false teeth for between $200 and $250. "Then the dentist will turn around and add as much as 400 per cent to the fee charged the patient." Hence, Dudley explains, he has broken the law in order to point out "the ripoff."

What's more, Dudley adds, he is not the only technician so motivated these days. More than 300 others around the nation have organized a National Denturist Association, its goal being the "elimination of laws favoring the DDS monopoly." Presently, all 50 states forbid anyone but licensed dentists from fitting dentures.

The "DDS monopoly" laws were originally urged by dentists themselves. And, not surprisingly, the profession continues to insist were originally urged by dentists believe that technicians are not qualified for denture work, and speak ominously of misfittings that could lead to disastrous consequences for unprotected patients.

OF COURSE THE denturists feel otherwise. Dudley says that dentists attach a mystique to fitting dentures that simply doesn't exist. He says he is fully qualified in all phases of the work required, and has done it for hundreds of patients. "I even guarantee my work," he says, "and that's something no dentist would dare do."

Dudley says he is careful not to overstep himself. For example, he requires his patients to have a thorough oral examination by a dentist before he begins his work. He also declines patients' pleas for other treatment, such as fillings. "I don't pretend to be a dentist," he says, insisting that he renders unto Caesar that which is Caesar's.

At bottom, then, Dudley says he is not trying to replace the man with the DDS. He merely wants to supplement the dentist's service.

How low are Dudley's fees? About $225. He says this is compared with the $500 to $1,000 that licensed dentists charge for the same service.

To lessen Dudley's chance of incarceration, the National Denturist Assn. has launched a drive to rewrite the laws favoring DDS monopoly. Dee Boyd, a lawyer who heads NDA, says new laws have been introduced in 15 states. He says Oregon has considered a change for three years, and "it looks very good there now."

Eventually, denturists believe most U.S. states will legitimize denturists. Until then they say they will go on breaking the law. Some will make dentures privately for family members and friends, others will do it publicly for all comers. "We won't give up, we won't quit," says Bill Didley.

The tooth fairy is here to stay.

'Fly' sets Big Apple buzzing; fine reduced

The "human fly" who scaled the World Trade Center in New York City had the city buzzing again Friday.

Mayor Abraham Beame and other city officials agreed to change a $250,000 lawsuit against George Willig, to a fine of $1.10 — a penny for every story he climbed.

The 27-year-old toy designer took 3½ hours to climb the world's second tallest building Thursday, and he has been mobbed by well-wishers ever since.

Willig still faces a June 22 court date on criminal charges of trespassing, disorderly conduct and reckless endangerment, but most observers believe the charges will be dismissed.

What's next for him?

"I'm so dazzled right now I really haven't had a chance to think of it seriously," he said.

GEORGE WILLIG HAPPILY paid up with the city of New York Friday. Mayor Abe Beame accepted his $1.10 fine in the form of a single bill and a thin dime.

Speeding truck rams Amtrak train

A speeding cement truck rammed broadside into an Amtrak passenger train at a rural crossing Friday, ripping open a dining car like a tin can and knocking four cars off the rails. Only the truck driver was killed. Five train passengers and three Amtrak employes were taken to a hospital for treatment of broken bones, bruises and possible back injuries. The impact demolished the cement truck, scattering pieces over a wide area, flattening the giant mixing barrel and leaving only the back wheels intact. Conductor Jim Rauen estimated the train was traveling about 75 miles per hour about 25 miles south of the Canadian border when it was struck by the truck between the second and third passenger cars.

Explosion destroys Mass. home

A gas leak from a newly installed main apparently caused an explosion that literally blew Herbert Arbo, 58, and his wife Ann, 51, out of bed and onto their front lawn. "They were blown right out of their house along with the walls, windows and doors," Fire Chief Norman Clough said Thursday. "They were very lucky indeed. They both landed on the lawn outside their house. "There's nothing left of the house. It was completely destroyed," Clough said. "The front door was in the middle of the street and interior draperies from the house were on a tree about 40 or 50 feet away. The place was literally blown apart." Arbo, unharmed by the 12:46 a.m. blast, rushed back into the burning home and rescued his son Edward, 16. The couple's 18-year-old daughter manager to jump to safety from a second-floor window.

Singlaub named chief of staff

Maj. Gen. John Singlaub, ousted from his South Korean post in a personal showdown with President Carter last week, got a plum reassignment Friday as chief of staff of the biggest American army command in the world. Singlaub, 55, was named chief of staff of the U.S. Army Forces Command, which stretches over 10,000 miles and includes 296,000 active personnel. As chief of the staff headquarters, not a command post, Singlaub will be outranked by the commanding general and some half dozen other senior officers. A Pentagon spokesman described the transfer as "lateral." Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, Army chief of staff, announced that Singlaub will assume the command at Ft. McPherson in Atlanta effective June 27.

British won't let Idi Amin visit

British Prime Minister James Callaghan said Friday Ugandan President Idi Amin would not be invited to Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee celebrations in June. "It is not customary with guests from a country with which we do not have diplomatic relations," Callaghan said, replying to a question in Parliament. The government said, however, Uganda would be invited to send a delegation to the June 8-16 Commonwealth conference.

Dayan amenable to any decision

Former Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said Friday he will accept with "no complaints" any decision by Menahem Begin's rightwing Likud bloc to cancel his nomination as foreign minister in a new coalition Government. But Dayan told a nationwide television audience he will not turn down the cabinet post on his own accord. Dayan said he thought over Begin's offer for four days and finally accepted only after he was assured that a Likud-led government would go to a renewed Geneva conference and would make no formal moves to annex the West Bank of Jordan.

Fighting near Luanda reported

Angolan forces backed by Cuban troops Friday crushed a mutiny by anti-Soviet rebels within the Marxist government in heavy fighting around Luanda, Radio Luanda said. Residents of the capital said fighting broke out overnight and heavy shooting was heard around the presidential palace and army headquarters. The fighting spread as dawn broke but halted around mid-afternoon, they said. No casualty reports were released. Residents said tanks and Cubans in armored cars patrolled the capital's streets, nearly empty of civilians, but it was not known if the Cubans actually engaged in the fighting. The mutineers, members of a radical black nationalist faction within the ruling Angolan Popular Liberation Movement, tried to force the release of two leaders jailed for anti-Soviet and anti-Cuban remarks.

Kidnaped heiress buried alive

GRAHAMSVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Murder charges were filed Friday against a former mental patient who allegedly abducted a niece of the late U.S. Rep. Joseph Resnick and buried here alive in a wood-covered hole near this remote Catskill Mountain town.

State police said the murder charge was added to a kidnaping count against Ronald Harrison Krom, 25, of Grahamsville, after an autopsy revealed that Gertrude Resnick Farber of Monticello had died of suffocation.

The 30-year-old Mrs. Farber's body was found Thursday night when Krom, who authorities said had demanded a $1 million ransom, led police to her burial site, an area once used to store dynamite.

The hole, seven-feet deep, five to six-feet long and three-to-four-feet wide, was covered with a bullet-punctured wooden cover secured by a padlock and hasp, Ulster County District Attorney Francis J. Vogt said.

VOGT SAID Mrs. Farber was still alive when placed in the hole.

Krom lives with his parents in Grahamsville and is a self-employed real estate broker.

State police said he had spent time last year in the Middletown Psychiatric Center and that he had apparently known the victim. He was being held without bail in the Sullivan County Jail in Monticello.

Mrs. Farber was the daughter of television antenna magnate Harry Resnick of Ellenville, the niece of Joseph Resnick, the late millionaire Democratic congressman who represented New York's 25th Congressional District in Dutchess and Ulster counties from 1964 to 1968.

AUTHORITIES SAID Mrs. Farber, who was a therapist in a mental health facility, was abducted at gunpoint from her home Tuesday evening after returning home from work.

A man armed with a gun gained access to the Farber residence during the day, overpowered and bound Mrs. Farber's husband, Roger, and his business partner, Harvey Kornblau, then abducted Mrs. Farber when she entered, authorities said.

The kidnaper demanded $1 million for her return and Vogt said Mrs. Farber's family was willing to pay the ransom to ensure her safety but Krom was apprehended during the course of the negotiations.

The victim's father was an officer in Channel Master, the television antenna company founded by his brother. He was also an officer of Avnet Inc., a conglomerate that bought Channel Master in 1967 for $50 million.

Joseph Resnick started the antenna business on a $7,000 loan and when he died in a Las Vegas hotel in 1969, his fortune was thought to be worth about $13.5 million. However, it was reported last year that only $1.5 million remained in the estate and the family faced debts of $2.7 million.

Girl 'jailed' since 4—dad gets same

PRINCESS ANNE, Md. (UPI) — Billy Floyd Burchfie ld was sentenced to 40 years in prison Friday for imprisoning his 8-year-old stepdaughter in a closet for nearly half her life. Patty Saunders' mother was given 32 years.

During their trials on child abuse charges, witnesses said Patty had been imprisoned in the closet amid her own filth for several periods as early as four years before police found her.

Somerset County Circuit Court Judge Lloyd L. Simpkins told the Burchfields they deserved "a good thorough whipping from the community over a prolonged period of time — but the government doesn't permit that." He also suggested "confinement in a small closet."

SIMPKINS SAID Burchfield drew a stiffer penalty because he had told his probation officer that "given the opportunity under the same circumstances, I would do the same thing again."

He told Burchfield, "If you serve the sentence I am going to give you, you will be an old man before you abuse the next child."

Burchfield made no comment.

Burchfield and his wife, Linda, were convicted April 25 of child abuse, conspiracy to commit child abuse, false imprisonment and assault.

They were arrested last July 5 after Baltimore County police, alerted by a relative, found Patty locked in a closet, a chest of drawers shoved against the door.

THE JUDGE TOLD Mrs. Burchfield, "You and your husband have all but destroyed the child's life . . . She was denied most of the things most of us take for granted — including things most of us give our dog."

As Mrs. Burchfield wept, her attorney told the judge, "She wants to tell you she needs help."

Trial testimony indicated Burchfield had had sexual relations for four years with another stepdaughter, Donna, who was in the hospital having an abortion when the arrests occurred.

Court testimony indicated Patty's prison was bare and dark and contained only a spoon and human feces. Her first words to a policeman when she left the closet were, "I'm hungry."

A PHYSICIAN testified at the trial that she weighed 23 pounds, was suffering from severe malnutrition, had the bone structure of a 4-year-old child and the face of an old woman.

Mrs. Burchfield, 30, pleaded insanity and blamed Patty's plight on her husband. She was conviced by a jury and her husband, 38, who was convicted by Simpkins, accepted the blame.

Mrs. Burchfield testified that Patty was conceived by rape and reminded her of the stranger who raped her. But Mrs. Burchfield's mother testified that Patty was the product of a love affair with another man.

Patty, Donna and Susan, another sister, are in foster homes. Patty's weight has doubled and visitors say she appears to be improving rapidly. The other two girls are reported to be healthy.

Speeding truck rams Amtrak train

A speeding cement truck rammed broadside into an Amtrak passenger train at a rural crossing Friday, ripping open a dining car like a tin can and knocking four cars off the rails. Only the truck driver was killed. Five train passengers and three Amtrak employes were taken to a hospital for treatment of broken bones, bruises and possible back injuries. The impact demolished the cement truck, scattering pieces over a wide area, flattening the giant mixing barrel and leaving only the back wheels intact. Conductor Jim Rauen estimated the train was traveling about 75 miles per hour about 25 miles south of the Canadian border when it was struck by the truck between the second and third passenger cars.

Explosion destroys Mass. home

A gas leak from a newly installed main apparently caused an explosion that literally blew Herbert Arbo, 58, and his wife Ann, 51, out of bed and onto their front lawn. "They were blown right out of their house along with the walls, windows and doors," Fire Chief Norman Clough said Thursday. "They were very lucky indeed. They both landed on the lawn outside their house. "There's nothing left of the house. It was completely destroyed," Clough said. "The front door was in the middle of the street and interior draperies from the house were on a tree about 40 or 50 feet away. The place was literally blown apart." Arbo, unharmed by the 12:46 a.m. blast, rushed back into the burning home and rescued his son Edward, 16. The couple's 18-year-old daughter manager to jump to safety from a second-floor window.

Singlaub named chief of staff

Maj. Gen. John Singlaub, ousted from his South Korean post in a personal showdown with President Carter last week, got a plum reassignment Friday as chief of staff of the biggest American army command in the world. Singlaub, 55, was named chief of staff of the U.S. Army Forces Command, which stretches over 10,000 miles and includes 296,000 active personnel. As chief of the staff headquarters, not a command post, Singlaub will be outranked by the commanding general and some half dozen other senior officers. A Pentagon spokesman described the transfer as "lateral." Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, Army chief of staff, announced that Singlaub will assume the command at Ft. McPherson in Atlanta effective June 27.

British won't let Idi Amin visit

British Prime Minister James Callaghan said Friday Ugandan President Idi Amin would not be invited to Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee celebrations in June. "It is not customary with guests from a country with which we do not have diplomatic relations," Callaghan said, replying to a question in Parliament. The government said, however, Uganda would be invited to send a delegation to the June 8-16 Commonwealth conference.

Dayan amenable to any decision

Former Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said Friday he will accept with "no complaints" any decision by Menahem Begin's rightwing Likud bloc to cancel his nomination as foreign minister in a new coalition Government. But Dayan told a nationwide television audience he will not turn down the cabinet post on his own accord. Dayan said he thought over Begin's offer for four days and finally accepted only after he was assured that a Likud-led government would go to a renewed Geneva conference and would make no formal moves to annex the West Bank of Jordan.

'Fly' sets Big Apple buzzing; fine reduced

The "human fly" who scaled the World Trade Center in New York City had the city buzzing again Friday.

Mayor Abraham Beame and other city officials agreed to change a $250,000 lawsuit against George Willig, to a fine of $1.10 — a penny for every story he climbed.

The 27-year-old toy designer took 3½ hours to climb the world's second tallest building Thursday, and he has been mobbed by well-wishers ever since.

Willig still faces a June 22 court date on criminal charges of trespassing, disorderly conduct and reckless endangerment, but most observers believe the charges will be dismissed.

What's next for him?

"I'm so dazzled right now I really haven't had a chance to think of it seriously," he said.

GEORGE WILLIG HAPPILY paid up with the city of New York Friday. Mayor Abe Beame accepted his $1.10 fine in the form of a single bill and a thin dime.

Graymoor first step toward vital dialogue

David E. Anderson

World of religion

Graymoor Institute, the Ecumenical center of the Atonement Friars, has been struggling with the issue of religious unity for the last 75 years.

But nowhere in its history has it had a program quite like the one it held early in May: a dialogue between Christians, Jews and Muslims.

While all three of those religions share a common heritage — they are all "People of the Book" and of one God — relations between them through time have been fraught with tension, misunderstanding and, perhaps, even mutual hatred.

IN WASHINGTON, in March, a group of Hanafi Muslims took over three buildings, including the headquarters of B'nai B'rith. The release of the hostages was aided by the intervention of three Muslim ambassadors.

The second flap came when Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, compared Arab hatred of Israel to Ku Klux Klan hatred of blacks.

Twenty Arab ambassadors shot back a reply differentiating between Judaism and Zionism (the movement to create a Jewish homeland) and said they considered Judaism a "sacred" religion.

American Jewish leaders responded to the Arab assertion by calling it a "deceit" and "hypocrisy."

IT IS WITHIN this kind of context that the Graymoor Institute held its tri-faith dialogue.

The Rev. Arthur F. Gouthro, director of the Institute, however, suggested that it is precisely because of that kind of context and because the world is increasingly interdependent that the dialogue must be pursued.

"Because of this new situation for humanity it is not either safe nor practical any longer to ignore one another," he said. "Conflagration is on the immediate horizon otherwise."

Monika Hellwig, associate professor of theology at Georgetown University, underlined four "common points of departure": "our shared understanding of the One God," the assumption that history has a goal in the salvation not only of the human spirit but the world, the vocation or choseness of the community, and the common heritage of "biblical lore and spiritual ancestors."

"Inasmuch as all three traditions own and understand this language of the covenant, it seems to provide an appropriate arena for an exchange of the alternative interpretations of the history of salvation," she said.

There were no theological breakthroughs at Graymoor. Tensions and misunderstandings still remain.

It is significant, however, that the long overdue dialogue has been initiated.

Battered wives need shelter, legal protection

The woman sounded shy. She had never telephoned a newspaper before this week.

"I just wanted you to know that I'm so glad someone has written about wife abuse." She faltered, then continued, "You just wouldn't believe how many women around here have that problem."

She spoke quietly about the beatings she suffered from her husband throughout the last 10 years of her 23-year marriage. About the broken nose, bruises, blood.

Now divorced, she knows other women who are beaten by their husbands. She and those she knows are proof that wife abuse is not a problem confined to other places and other socio-economic groups. It exists in the Northwest suburbs. Area police departments estimate they each receive about 15 wife beating calls a month.

Because wife beating remains a hidden crime, there are few sources of help available in this area. Help is needed, and a shelter operating in Elgin could provide a useful model for this area.

In Elgin, the shelter is funded by donations and township revenue sharing funds. It provides professional counseling, food and beds to women in crisis. In a 10-month period, 152 battered wives sought help at the shelter.

The Northwest suburbs already have social service agencies such as The Bridge, Crossroads Clinic and Shelter which are funded by township revenue sharing and focus on the problems of youth. Similar help ought to be available to battered wives. Township support for such a program would provide a useful service.

Another attempt to help abused women is now pending in the legislature. The proposal would give all wives the right to seek an injunction against an abusive husband which could be enforced by the court. Presently, only women willing to seek a divorce can obtain such a court order.

Last week the state House of Representatives passed this legislation with a 141 to 0 vote. The Senate is expected to act within the next few weeks.

It may seem incredible that there are women who would be willing to go to court for an injunction against abusive husbands who would not also want a divorce. But women exist who for religious, financial or other reasons do not consider divorce an option.

For these women the law should offer protection. And social service agencies can offer both a place to escape and understanding of the woman's plight.

Teens anti-cancer heroes

A Conant High School science class has found a way to make a positive contribution through their high school education by visiting Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 sixth-graders to teach the ill-effects of smoking.

The group of 10 seniors is participating in an American Cancer Society program called Teens Against Cancer and is getting a first-hand look at how a learning experience can be put to practical use to help others.

Of course the results of the project won't be known unless the sixth-graders are polled in later years to determine whether they heeded the advice of the high-schoolers.

The chances are the lesson will sink in for at least some of the youngsters. For years, 11- and 12-year-olds have been influenced by the smoking habits of the "big guys" in high school.

Now they are meeting a new brand of hero — the nonsmoker.

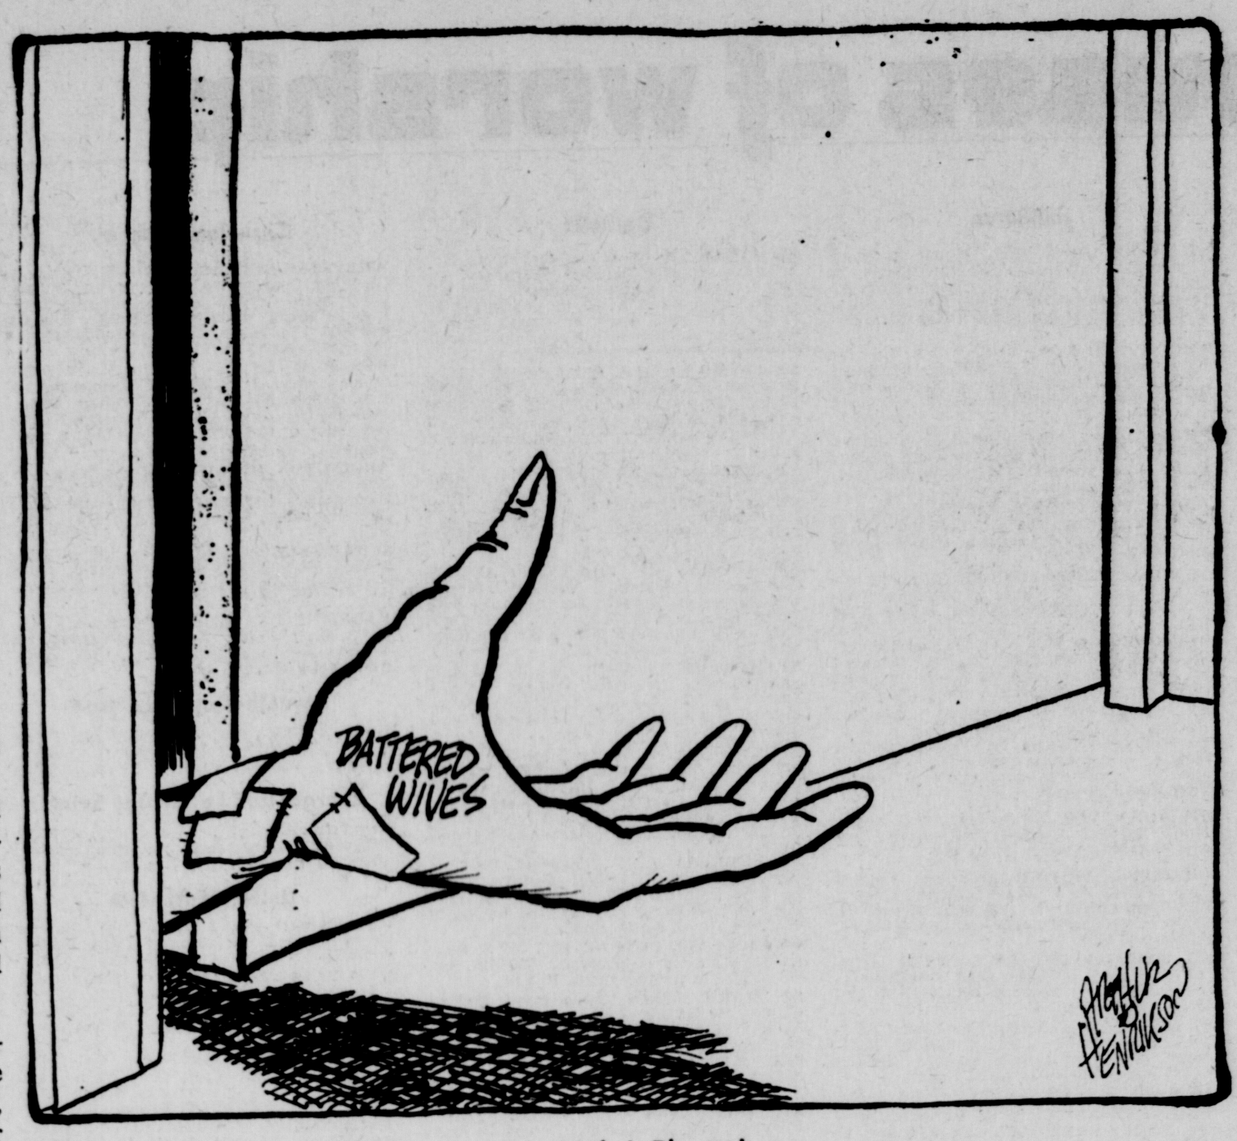
"OK! Who left the TV set on? You wouldn't do that if Jimmy Carter was around here!"



Help! Please!

Jimmy's faith: few people worry about it any more

by TRACY EARLY

Hardly anybody is talking about Jimmy Cater's religion now. That is a point worth noting, given the sometimes obsessive interest in the topic during last year's presidential campaign.

The quantity of talk during those months refuted the widespread opinion that President John Kennedy had eliminated religion as an issue in presidential politics.

Carter's public references to his evangelical Christian faith astonished many people, and with endless fascination they sought to foresee the good or ill of having an evengelical as president.

BUT ATTEMPTS to connect Carter's religion with his political direction have virtually all stopped. Apparently people now realize that evangelical Christianity entails no necessary conclusions about devising energy policy, handling foreign affairs, balancing budgets or administering a bureaucracy — no more than does any other religious belief.

This does not mean that Carter's religious commitment is any less than it appeared to be. People in a position to know report that his faith is deeply and earnestly held. And on moving to Washington, he immediately affiliated with the First Baptist Church there. He attends Sunday School there as in Plains, and reportedly takes an active part in class discussions. He has taught the class a time or two.

A President who would find it normal to teach a Sunday school class does stand out as someone a little different from many American presidents. Before Carter, perhaps Woodrow Wilson was the last who could easily be imagined in the role.

Jimmy Carter

BUT RELIGIOUS faith operates in such diverse and individual ways that no direct correlations can be drawn between a particular religious commitment and a pattern of political decisions or style of political leadership.

It is a matter of common observation that most any church will include people of widely divergent political views, just as a political party will draw supporters from many different churches. Even if surveys show a majority of some religious group sharing a common political outlook, voters cannot assume a candidate from that group will conform to the majority view, and particularly not when under the pressures of public office.

A Roman Catholic president will not necessarily support legislative goals of the Catholic Church; a Quaker president will not necessarily dismantle the armed forces. President Harry Truman, a Southern Baptist, tried to appoint an ambassador to the Vatican, although Southern Baptists as a denomination bitterly opposed the idea.

NONE OF this denies the importance of religious faith as a personal resource for politicians, or even as an influence on their thinking about issues and leadership. The mistake is to suppose that by use of logic analysts can predict political results from religious beliefs. Neither politics nor religion operates so mechanically.

Even in secular political theory, people operating from the same premises may arrive at opposite decisions on a particular program, while people may come to the same decision from diverse theoretical standpoints.

A deeply held religious faith will presumably influence a president as much as it will anyone else. But voters cannot prejudge on this basis, and still must examine personality, record, commitments and political ties. "By their fruits" remains the only safe rule.

CAMPAIGN ANALYSES of what it would mean to have an evangelical in the White House were also skewed by lack of awareness that in Gerald Ford the nation already had a president openly committed to essentially the same evangelical faith as Jimmy Carter's. Not a Sunday School teacher, perhaps, but a prayer group participant.

Since Carter's inauguration, however, it has become doubly evident that most of the controversy about his religion was pointleess. Criticism of his actions and manner of acting has been full and frank, but not based on his religion.

The Founding Fathers well understood this when they wrote into the Constituion an absolute prohibition: "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

'Mount Prospect needs planning pro'

Something has got to be done about planning in Mount Prospect. The downtown with its mix of quick-food vendors, pinball wizards and odds-and-ends merchants will never attract a large contingent of shoppers unless a more thorough job of planning is done. Access to the downtown shops is limited by the more physical tangibles — a train station along Rt. 83 which ties up traffic and a dearth of coordinated parking areas. This is not meant as a criticism of the current or past planning commissions. Although these people are not professional planners, they are conscientious citizens trying to solve huge problems.

We were gladened when we noticed that the village board had budgeted for a full-time professional planner. Now, however, the planner's job is in jeopardy.

The past administration applied for and received a grant from the federally administered (no string attached) community development funds, part of that grant going to the first year salary of a planner. Now the mayor and some members of the village board are seriously considering turning back that part of the grant and in effect eliminating the position of village planner.

For the first time Mount Prospect citizens would be able to get back money that they had for years been sending off to Washington in the form of various kinds of taxes. Rarely does a community as affluent as Mount Prospect receive any kind of assistance from the federal government. When it does get a grant for something it needs, does it make sense to turn the money back?

Another thing to consider is the very expensive comprehensive plan and downtown economic study which village residents paid for last year. Without a full-time planner, the study will sit on a shelf gathering dust and the money we paid for it with will be wasted.

The time is right in Mount Prospect for a professional planner. If we wait much longer, our village's downtown will be an economic nonentity. It seems doubly sad when we consider that the planner's first year salary would cost Mount Prospect citizens nothing. We urge citizens to immediately verbalize their concerns about this issue to the mayor and trustees.

'Bike thieves prowl'

Kids beware! Bicycle thieves are on the prowl! Even so brazen as to go behind your fence and pick out which ten speed bike they want.

My son gets up at 5:30 a.m. every weekday to deliver the Arlington Heights Herald. He paid for this bike himself. It must make you, the thief feel good having gotten a ten-speed bike with such little effort. Mom or dad, does your child have a "new" ten speed he "found?" Check your consciences as well as your garage.

He hits lifeline

The Herald on May 19 proclaims that consumers suffered a blow with the defeat of the Lifeline Rate Bill. On the contrary, consumers should rejoice that there are enough sensible people representing us in Springfield to reject the farce. Unfortunately, there are a number of liberal extremists embarrassing the Democratic Party with this type of deceptive social legislation. It has been said before and it is worth repeating, "There is no free lunch." Even if utility costs are shifted to business and industry, we consumers still have to pay the bill. Only we would pay more because we would have to support the bureaucracy required to administer the mess. It is better for each class of user to pay a fair rate.

If you want to help the consumers, teach them how to cut down on the use of electricty. As an electrical engineer, I continue to be amazed at the waste of this valuable form of energy. Excessive lighting, electrical heating and unnecessary appliances are typical.

Just who is this Illinois Public Action Council? As a consumer, I may wish to sue them for misrepresenting my best interests before the Illinois Commerce Commission.

McGovern's moral fervor needs issue

Jimmy Carter's honeymoon period is over. Not his honeymoon with the American public, but with George McGovern. Senator McGovern is back making critical speeches and headlines. One would think he might have learned better after his experience in 1972.

Anybody who was the alternative to Richard Nixon in a presidential election ought to look pretty good by now. But George McGovern, through considerable effort, escapes that fate. How does he do it? Mainly by dwelling on his own virtue compared to whoever is president at the time. The senator's fascination with his own politics greatly exceeds mine and, I suspect, that of the American people.

On this occasion, he was addressing the Americans for Democratic Action with the complaint that, under Carter's leadership, "a strange silence has descended on our political life." But if this be silence, it's a mighty wordy one.

IN THE first hundred days of the Carter Administration, the country has been presented with its first full-blown energy program and an array of statements on the welfare mess, southern Africa, the Mideast, the arms race, the reorganization of the executive branch and Social Security.

What George McGovern must mean, given the political nature of George McGovern, is that none of these actions has brought on the kind of bitter ideological divisions — and divisiveness — that marked American politics when he had his brief moment in the spotlight. Unlike '72, there is not the same questioning of motives, the refusal to compromise, the name-calling, the clear divisions on unclear issues, and in general the same kind of hatred and contempt for those with whom one disagrees. The strange silence that Senator McGovern perceives in American politics may be civility.

Although the still new President may display Harry Truman's old sign ("The Buck Stops Here") Jimmy Carter is proving adept at the consensual politics of the Eisenhower years. Hard decisions may be put off or compromised: The dispute with the Europeans over nuclear proliferation is passed on to an international commission, landing rights for the Concorde get shuttled to a port authority, a blue-ribbon commission is assigned the blame for ever higher executive salaries. The actual issues begin to seem less important than the public's faith that its President will do the right thing.

OF COURSE GEORGE McGovern would not feel easy with any presidential style so free of ideological rigidity. The senator sounds almost nostalgic for the "good" old days when Vietnam was The Issue and everybody knew or assumed where everybody else stood, and those with whom one disagreed were not to be trusted — on any issue.

Senator McGovern may yet become this era's William Jennings Bryan, still preaching the same old sermon long after his subject had faded from the public consciousness. At the moment, the senator seems a bundle of moral outrage in search of an issue, any issue. Like Bryan forever searching for an adequate substitute for the Free Coinage of Silver after the monetary crisis at the turn of the century had passed.

Addressing the ADA, George McGovern sounded like The Great Commoner right down to the biblical imagery: "But we will not be a cheering section for tinkling cymbals that may signify nothing. We will not agree to substitute cold technocracy for compassionate values." Or to crucify mankind upon a cross of gold. Bryan's imagery may have been better, but eventually it too inspired tedium.

SENATOR MCGOVERN gave the ADA just the kind of simplistic fare upon which it has grown thin as an influence in American politics. At one point, he attacked Carter's cutting federal expenditures: "Retreats from the President's original economic plan have reduced it from $16 billion to $4 billion this year." Senator McGovern meant that as an accusation, and he didn't have to explain to the ADA why such a cut was bad. But for most Americans, the time has long since passed when either goodness or effectiveness could be measured in direct ratio to the size of the federal deficit. Inflation has become too real, and the fear of it even realler.

George McGovern, however, goes on talking to his dwindling band, which wasn't that big to begin with. What he seems to hold most against Carter, apart from being a winner, is the President's compromising his way to victory. To some, it is sweeter to go down to defeat in a clear cause than suffer victory by hedging here and there. George McGovern sounded very comfortable before the ADA, as though he were at home in protest and wouldn't be in power. For an ideologue, perhaps there can be no substitute for defeat.

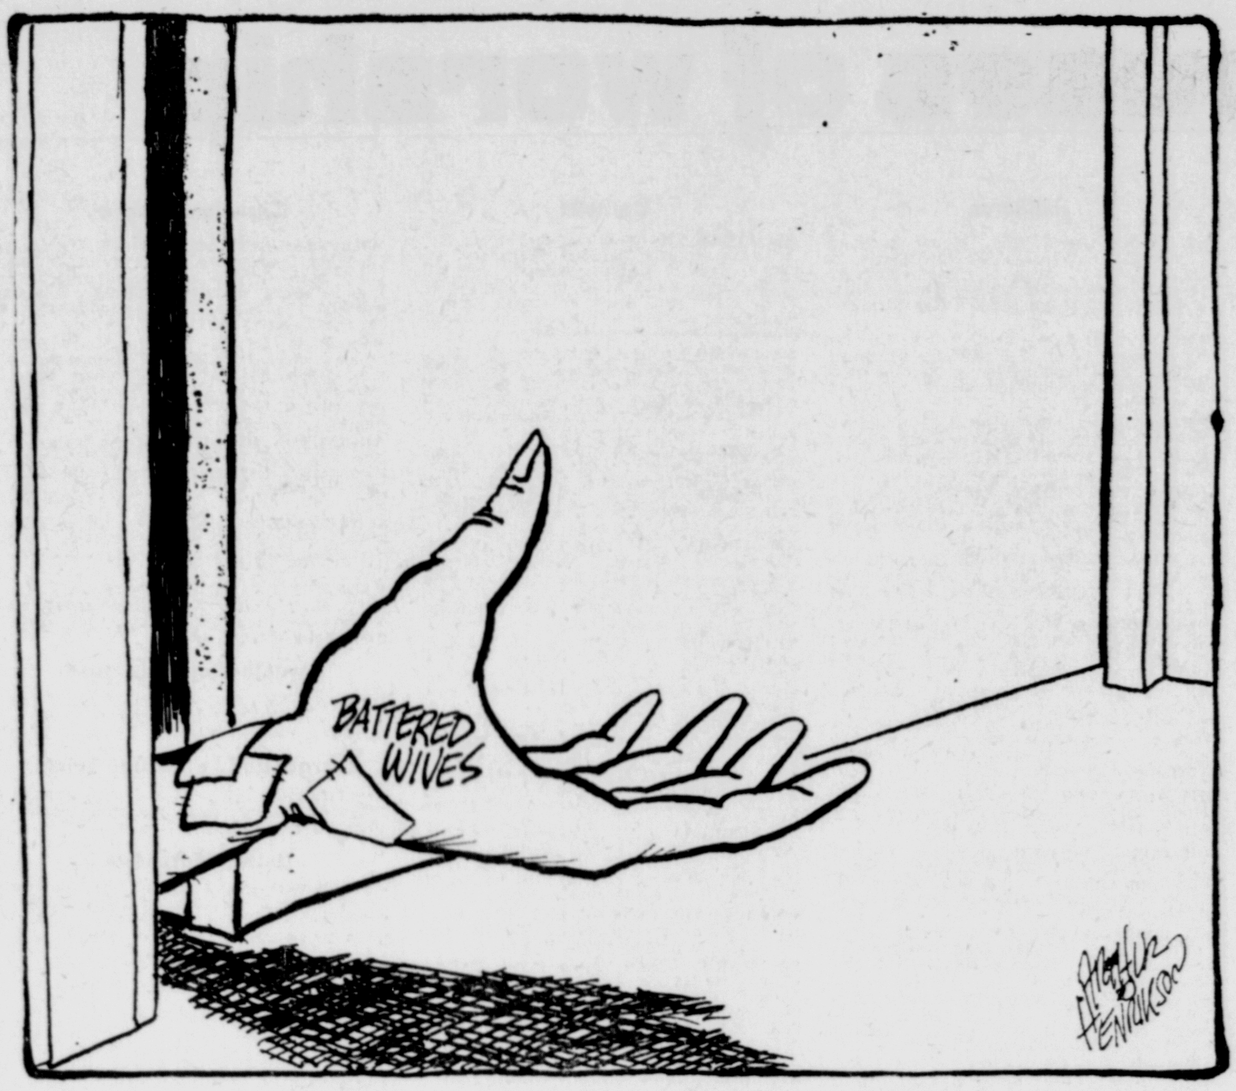
"OK! Who left the TV set on? You wouldn't do that if Jimmy Carter was around here!"



Help! Please!

Jimmy's faith: few people worry about it any more

by TRACY EARLY

Hardly anybody is talking about Jimmy Cater's religion now. That is a point worth noting, given the sometimes obsessive interest in the topic during last year's presidential campaign.

The quantity of talk during those months refuted the widespread opinion that President John Kennedy had eliminated religion as an issue in presidential politics.

Carter's public references to his evangelical Christian faith astonished many people, and with endless fascination they sought to foresee the good or ill of having an evengelical as president.

BUT ATTEMPTS to connect Carter's religion with his political direction have virtually all stopped. Apparently people now realize that evangelical Christianity entails no necessary conclusions about devising energy policy, handling foreign affairs, balancing budgets or administering a bureaucracy — no more than does any other religious belief.

This does not mean that Carter's religious commitment is any less than it appeared to be. People in a position to know report that his faith is deeply and earnestly held. And on moving to Washington, he immediately affiliated with the First Baptist Church there. He attends Sunday School there as in Plains, and reportedly takes an active part in class discussions. He has taught the class a time or two.

A President who would find it normal to teach a Sunday school class does stand out as someone a little different from many American presidents. Before Carter, perhaps Woodrow Wilson was the last who could easily be imagined in the role.

Jimmy Carter

BUT RELIGIOUS faith operates in such diverse and individual ways that no direct correlations can be drawn between a particular religious commitment and a pattern of political decisions or style of political leadership.

It is a matter of common observation that most any church will include people of widely divergent political views, just as a political party will draw supporters from many different churches. Even if surveys show a majority of some religious group sharing a common political outlook, voters cannot assume a candidate from that group will conform to the majority view, and particularly not when under the pressures of public office.

A Roman Catholic president will not necessarily support legislative goals of the Catholic Church; a Quaker president will not necessarily dismantle the armed forces. President Harry Truman, a Southern Baptist, tried to appoint an ambassador to the Vatican, although Southern Baptists as a denomination bitterly opposed the idea.

NONE OF this denies the importance of religious faith as a personal resource for politicians, or even as an influence on their thinking about issues and leadership. The mistake is to suppose that by use of logic analysts can predict political results from religious beliefs. Neither politics nor religion operates so mechanically.

Even in secular political theory, people operating from the same premises may arrive at opposite decisions on a particular program, while people may come to the same decision from diverse theoretical standpoints.

A deeply held religious faith will presumably influence a president as much as it will anyone else. But voters cannot prejudge on this basis, and still must examine personality, record, commitments and political ties. "By their fruits" remains the only safe rule.

CAMPAIGN ANALYSES of what it would mean to have an evangelical in the White House were also skewed by lack of awareness that in Gerald Ford the nation already had a president openly committed to essentially the same evangelical faith as Jimmy Carter's. Not a Sunday School teacher, perhaps, but a prayer group participant.

Since Carter's inauguration, however, it has become doubly evident that most of the controversy about his religion was pointleess. Criticism of his actions and manner of acting has been full and frank, but not based on his religion.

The Founding Fathers well understood this when they wrote into the Constituion an absolute prohibition: "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

'Mount Prospect needs planning pro'

Something has got to be done about planning in Mount Prospect. The downtown with its mix of quick-food vendors, pinball wizards and odds-and-ends merchants will never attract a large contingent of shoppers unless a more thorough job of planning is done. Access to the downtown shops is limited by the more physical tangibles — a train station along Rt. 83 which ties up traffic and a dearth of coordinated parking areas. This is not meant as a criticism of the current or past planning commissions. Although these people are not professional planners, they are conscientious citizens trying to solve huge problems.

We were gladened when we noticed that the village board had budgeted for a full-time professional planner. Now, however, the planner's job is in jeopardy.

The past administration applied for and received a grant from the federally administered (no string attached) community development funds, part of that grant going to the first year salary of a planner. Now the mayor and some members of the village board are seriously considering turning back that part of the grant and in effect eliminating the position of village planner.

For the first time Mount Prospect citizens would be able to get back money that they had for years been sending off to Washington in the form of various kinds of taxes. Rarely does a community as affluent as Mount Prospect receive any kind of assistance from the federal government. When it does get a grant for something it needs, does it make sense to turn the money back?

Another thing to consider is the very expensive comprehensive plan and downtown economic study which village residents paid for last year. Without a full-time planner, the study will sit on a shelf gathering dust and the money we paid for it with will be wasted.

The time is right in Mount Prospect for a professional planner. If we wait much longer, our village's downtown will be an economic nonentity. It seems doubly sad when we consider that the planner's first year salary would cost Mount Prospect citizens nothing. We urge citizens to immediately verbalize their concerns about this issue to the mayor and trustees.

'Bike thieves prowl'

Kids beware! Bicycle thieves are on the prowl! Even so brazen as to go behind your fence and pick out which ten speed bike they want.

My son gets up at 5:30 a.m. every weekday to deliver the Arlington Heights Herald. He paid for this bike himself. It must make you, the thief feel good having gotten a ten-speed bike with such little effort. Mom or dad, does your child have a "new" ten speed he "found?" Check your consciences as well as your garage.

He hits lifeline

The Herald on May 19 proclaims that consumers suffered a blow with the defeat of the Lifeline Rate Bill. On the contrary, consumers should rejoice that there are enough sensible people representing us in Springfield to reject the farce. Unfortunately, there are a number of liberal extremists embarrassing the Democratic Party with this type of deceptive social legislation. It has been said before and it is worth repeating, "There is no free lunch." Even if utility costs are shifted to business and industry, we consumers still have to pay the bill. Only we would pay more because we would have to support the bureaucracy required to administer the mess. It is better for each class of user to pay a fair rate.

If you want to help the consumers, teach them how to cut down on the use of electricty. As an electrical engineer, I continue to be amazed at the waste of this valuable form of energy. Excessive lighting, electrical heating and unnecessary appliances are typical.

Just who is this Illinois Public Action Council? As a consumer, I may wish to sue them for misrepresenting my best interests before the Illinois Commerce Commission.

McGovern's moral fervor needs issue

Jimmy Carter's honeymoon period is over. Not his honeymoon with the American public, but with George McGovern. Senator McGovern is back making critical speeches and headlines. One would think he might have learned better after his experience in 1972.

Anybody who was the alternative to Richard Nixon in a presidential election ought to look pretty good by now. But George McGovern, through considerable effort, escapes that fate. How does he do it? Mainly by dwelling on his own virtue compared to whoever is president at the time. The senator's fascination with his own politics greatly exceeds mine and, I suspect, that of the American people.

On this occasion, he was addressing the Americans for Democratic Action with the complaint that, under Carter's leadership, "a strange silence has descended on our political life." But if this be silence, it's a mighty wordy one.

IN THE first hundred days of the Carter Administration, the country has been presented with its first full-blown energy program and an array of statements on the welfare mess, southern Africa, the Mideast, the arms race, the reorganization of the executive branch and Social Security.

What George McGovern must mean, given the political nature of George McGovern, is that none of these actions has brought on the kind of bitter ideological divisions — and divisiveness — that marked American politics when he had his brief moment in the spotlight. Unlike '72, there is not the same questioning of motives, the refusal to compromise, the name-calling, the clear divisions on unclear issues, and in general the same kind of hatred and contempt for those with whom one disagrees. The strange silence that Senator McGovern perceives in American politics may be civility.

Although the still new President may display Harry Truman's old sign ("The Buck Stops Here") Jimmy Carter is proving adept at the consensual politics of the Eisenhower years. Hard decisions may be put off or compromised: The dispute with the Europeans over nuclear proliferation is passed on to an international commission, landing rights for the Concorde get shuttled to a port authority, a blue-ribbon commission is assigned the blame for ever higher executive salaries. The actual issues begin to seem less important than the public's faith that its President will do the right thing.

OF COURSE GEORGE McGovern would not feel easy with any presidential style so free of ideological rigidity. The senator sounds almost nostalgic for the "good" old days when Vietnam was The Issue and everybody knew or assumed where everybody else stood, and those with whom one disagreed were not to be trusted — on any issue.

Senator McGovern may yet become this era's William Jennings Bryan, still preaching the same old sermon long after his subject had faded from the public consciousness. At the moment, the senator seems a bundle of moral outrage in search of an issue, any issue. Like Bryan forever searching for an adequate substitute for the Free Coinage of Silver after the monetary crisis at the turn of the century had passed.

Addressing the ADA, George McGovern sounded like The Great Commoner right down to the biblical imagery: "But we will not be a cheering section for tinkling cymbals that may signify nothing. We will not agree to substitute cold technocracy for compassionate values." Or to crucify mankind upon a cross of gold. Bryan's imagery may have been better, but eventually it too inspired tedium.

SENATOR MCGOVERN gave the ADA just the kind of simplistic fare upon which it has grown thin as an influence in American politics. At one point, he attacked Carter's cutting federal expenditures: "Retreats from the President's original economic plan have reduced it from $16 billion to $4 billion this year." Senator McGovern meant that as an accusation, and he didn't have to explain to the ADA why such a cut was bad. But for most Americans, the time has long since passed when either goodness or effectiveness could be measured in direct ratio to the size of the federal deficit. Inflation has become too real, and the fear of it even realler.

George McGovern, however, goes on talking to his dwindling band, which wasn't that big to begin with. What he seems to hold most against Carter, apart from being a winner, is the President's compromising his way to victory. To some, it is sweeter to go down to defeat in a clear cause than suffer victory by hedging here and there. George McGovern sounded very comfortable before the ADA, as though he were at home in protest and wouldn't be in power. For an ideologue, perhaps there can be no substitute for defeat.

Dorothy loses her zip— zapped by 4 a.m. gabfest

Dorothy Meyer

One night this past week I didn't get to bed until morning. Four o'clock in the morning, yet.

You may think that at my age the only possible reason for such a late beddy-bye time would be the discomfort of arthritis, or maybe sitting up with a sick cat or just plain insomnia.

Certainly not a romantic interlude with a midnight supper and dancing until dawn, right? Right right right, it certainly was not a romantic interlude that kept me up.

ON THE BRIGHT side, however, neither was it arthritis, a sick cat or insomnia. It was a plain old-fashioned gabfest, the likes of which I haven't had for almost as long as I haven't had a romantic interlude.

Like all good gabfests it had a few unspoken ground rules. Friend and I took turns being the gabber and the gabbee and the main beverage was coffee until we realized how late it was and decided on a single nightcap so we'd have a fighting chance to get to sleep after all that coffee. The final rule was no gossip-mongering.

That morning I was the only thing in the house with a power failure.

What we did was solve the problems of our neighbors, friends, relatives, the nation and, finally, the whole world.

At 4 a.m. it is remarkably easy to solve the problems of the world — a lot easier than it is getting up three hours later to face the problems of same.

AMONG THE problems was, "How am I going to turn off the alarm clock without getting out of bed" and "Oh boy, I sure don't want to get out of bed." I have a radio-alarm and it never runs down, but just keeps buzzing a rotten raucous buzz until I turn it off or there is a power failure.

That morning I was the only thing in the house with a power failure. My feet didn't work right, my head didn't work right and my eyes figured why should they do anything if nothing else was working.

When I finally remembered where the bathroom was, I couldn't remember if the handle of the toothbrush was the plain end or the fuzzy end. In the kitchen, I couldn't figure out why I was there instead of back in bed, and in the bedroom standing in front of the clothes closet I dozed off among the hangers while wondering what to wear to work.

WORK! Suddenly it was the dirtiest four-letter word ending in "k" that I could think of and I decided to take an early retirement. But in order to do that I'd have to go to the office and tell the boss of my retirement decision, and in order to do that I'd have to get dressed.

So I did. And at work when I spoke to the boss of my plans he said, "Don't be ridiculous" and "Ye gods, what happened, you look awful."

I can't remember looking that bad after a romantic interlude. But then, I can't remember my last romantic interlude either.

Air Force cover-up tied to huge computer plan

Watch on Washington

WASHINGTON, D.C. — While President Carter and others are appropriately shocked at Richard Nixon's declaration that a president is above the law, there are comparable cases of disregard of federal laws by high officials in the Carter administration.

One case involves Air Force disregard of a federal law directing termination of an $800 million computer program and present efforts of most people in the top echelon of the Air Force to cover up evidence of the law violation. The program "terminated," known as the Advanced Logistic Systems, is continuing as more than a dozen projects under a variety of names.

Those in the Air Force currently engaged in a continuing effort to change, distort or hide evidence of willful illegal actions are a part of a criminal obstruction of justice.

FOR THE MOMENT we must assume that President Carter is unaware that high officials of his administration are engaged in law violations and obstructions of justice.

If the President does not know the facts, it is not because there have not been clear warnings from responsible members of the Democratic Party in Congress.

Senator Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., U.S. Representatives John E. Moss, D-Calif., and Charles E. Rose, D-N.C., have registered the sharpest protest in letters to Defense Sec. Harold Brown and to the White House.

FOLLOWING IS A chronological record of Air Force actions on the revival of the controversial computer program:

- On Dec. 10, 1975, a joint congressional committee report directed termination of the Air Force computerized logistics program that carried an over-all price tag of more than $775 million. However, in seeking to avoid waste of money already expended, Congress provided that spending could be continued on "mission essential" parts of the project.
- The Air Force division dealing with logistics and computer resources divided the congressional-rejected project into more than a dozen smaller projects, characterizing each part "mission essential."
- From Dec. 10, 1975, until Nov. 4, 1976, the Air Force generals continued spending on all of the parts of the project with no approval from the civilian Air Force Secretary or any of his assistant secretaries.
- ON THE DAY after the 1976 election Air Force generals obtained the signatures of two assistant Air Force secretaries giving the first "approval" for continuation of "mission essential" projects that described them only in the vaguest terms.
- On Feb. 24, 1977, Harold Foster, a senior computer analyst at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, finally could take no more on what he considered work on a useless and illegal project. Foster wrote memorandums and letters on his views, and sent them to the Senate and House appropriations committees and others.
- Senate and House committees asked for the record of the entire project, and Moss launched a private probe. Moss reviewed the record, concluded it was evidence of a contempt for Congress, and possible violations of the law, and fired off a letter to President Carter and to a number of his interested colleagues.
- After receiving evidence indicating that an Air Force cover-up was in progress, Moss directed that his information file on the case be made public.

IN A LETTER to Defense Sec. Harold Brown, Moss characterized the episode as "a classic exhibition of contempt on the part of the Air Force for Congress."

David Jones, Air Force Chief of Staff, contends that three vague reports to Congress were a sort of notice of the continuation of various aspects of the computer project, but he conceded: "Our reporting was anything but timely and exhaustive."

'Do you remember how the Mother Hubbard story came out?'

Is the squeeze on to limit women in medicine?

BY MARY ROTH WALSH

What are the chances that your next doctor may be a woman?

Many commentators believe that if current trends continue at least half of this country's doctors will be women by 1990.

This may be an overoptimistic view. There is no question that women have made significant progress in recent years. The number of women enrolled in medical school has increased more than 300 per cent since 1969. An article earlier this year in The New York Times even suggested that women now have a better chance of getting into medical school than men.

What few people realize is that women experienced a similar breakthrough in the late 19th century. And, just as the recent gains owe a great deal to the women's liberation movement, much of the 19th-century progress can be credited to the women's rights crusade.

IT IS NO COINCIDENCE that the current increase in the number of women physicians parallels the development of the women's liberation movement.

A century ago, the rise of the women's rights movement provided aspiring female physicians with a similar boost.

Rejected by the more prestigious medical schools and denied appointments to internships and hospital staffs, nineteenth-century women opened their own medical schools and training hospitals.

At the end of the century, there were only seven hospitals in the United States where women could count on securing internships! All of these institutions were owned and operated by women.

WOMEN ALSO WAGED a carefully planned campaign to gain entrance into the elite medical schools. In 1892, taking advantage of Johns Hopkins University's financial problems, a group of women donated $500,000 to the school after reaching an agreement with officials that women would be admitted on the same terms as men.

By the turn of the century, a major role for women in medicine seemed assured. In 1894, women represented a significant portion of the student body at a growing number of medical schools in the country: 19 per cent at the University of Michigan; 25 per cent at Tufts University; and 37 per cent at Boston University.

The turn-of-the-century period was a "golden age" for women doctors. In 1900, 18.2 per cent of Boston's physicians were women, a figure which has not been surpassed to the present day.

Convinced that the battle for sexual equality in medicine had been won, woman's rights advocates shifted their attention to other battles.

SIMILARLY, CONVINCED that they had outlived their usefulness, 19 separate women's medical colleges closed their doors.

In 1900, 18.2 per cent of Boston's physicians were women, a figure which has not been surpassed to the present day.

At that point, a male backlash developed in medical circles. Concerned over what they believed to be a surplus of physicians, medical leaders sought to reduce the number of practitioners.

Not surprisingly, in an early version of last-hired first-fired, women were hard hit by the retrenchment. Quotas were established that successfully limited the number of women to four or five per cent of each medical class.

CAN HISTORY repeat itself?

I think that such a possibility is a real one if government pressure is relaxed. Affirmative action programs have come under increasing fire in the past few years. Charges of favoritism, reverse discrimination and decreasing standards have raised serious questions about the advisability of federal interference with the admissions and hiring process.

Equally significant is the fact that medical women are still vulnerable to the dictates of the male leaders of medicine.

Although there have been substantial gains in medical school admissions in recent years, the number of women in influential positions remains unchanged. The percentage of women faculty is the same today as it was in 1971. Similarly, medical schools and hospitals have refused to appoint women to key leadership positions.

Until women have a real voice in decision-making, their future in medicine remains uncertain.

Auto insurance becoming a very difficult item to buy

by ROBERT TAYLOR

Being denied auto insurance despite a good driving record is an old story to many residents of poor, crowded, crime-ridden neighborhoods. Now even the relatively affluent are experiencing the humiliation of being turned down.

Example: Career woman, 38, who lives in a suburb of Hartford Conn., "The Insurance City," receives notice that her policy won't be renewed. No reason given. Angered, but comforted by the knowledge that she has a spotless driving record, she calls her friendly, reliable agent of 10 years.

"Why?" she asks.

"You have a Porsche," he replies, "and the company no longer is underwriting Porsches or other sports cars."

For the first time, many drivers are finding that you can't always buy auto insurance like a loaf of bread — or an auto. You may put down your money but the seller — the insurance company — may not want to sell you a policy. It thinks it may lose money on the deal.

Rejected, the irate motorist can turn to the so-called assigned risk pools set up for drivers who can't get insured through regular channels. Chances are he or she will pay more and be restricted to limited coverage.

Sometimes make of car is a factor. Other times it is the age of the driver. But often the safest risks in terms of auto make, age, place of residence and other criteria are turned away.

A RECENT SURVEY by a brokers group in New York found nine out of 10 people seeking coverage for the first time or to renew with another company unable to buy insurance readily in the open market. In New Jersey a crisis is shaping up as more and more companies refuse to take on new business.

Rebuffed motorists often see themselves as tiny Davids pitted against the insurance Goliaths. Some complain to their state insurance commissions. If they're old customers, companies often are forced by law to give them renewals.

No matter how just or unjust the refusal of a company to do business, it is a fact of life that auto insurance has become bad business. Simply put, insurance companies in the past several years have ended up paying out more than they've taken in in premiums.

The year 1975 was declared by the property and casualty insurance industry as the worst in its 225-year history. Losses added up to $4.5 billion, according to industry spokesmen. Auto insurance accounted for more than one-half of that total. Another $2.2 billion loss was recorded for the first nine months of 1976.

LOOKED AT ANOTHER way, during the first half of 1976 auto insurers paid out $108 for claims and expenses for every $100 they received in premiums. In New York, the figures were $100 taken in, $116 shelled out.

What are the causes? Inflation is the major one. Insurance rates have gone up but the cost of the things insurance pays for — crash repairs and hospital bills, for example — have gone up even higher.

Accidents have increased. Auto thefts have soared. Awards in court suits have jumped. In September 1963, a jury in New York Supreme Court broke the million-dollar barrier by awarding that sum to a 13-year-old boy. Since then the million-dollar milestone has been surpassed many times.

No-fault plans, adopted by 16 states, were supposed to solve lots of problems. They have lived up to many promises — among them, prompt payment of medical expenses, reductions in expensive suits — but costs have risen in "no-fault" states as well as "fault" states. One reason has been the type of no-fault legislation approved in some states.

In New Jersey, for instance, accident victims can sue for "pain and suffering" if their medical expenses exceed $200. Study has shown collusion among accident victims, doctors and "ambulance chasing" lawyers to get expenses up and cases into court.

• From Dec. 10, 1975, until Nov. 4, 1976, the Air Force generals continued spending on all of the parts of the project with no approval from the civilian Air Force Secretary or any of his assistant secretaries.

• ON THE DAY after the 1976 election Air Force generals obtained the signatures of two assistant Air Force secretaries giving the first "approval" for continuation of "mission essential" projects that described them only in the vaguest terms.

• On Feb. 24, 1977, Harold Foster, a senior computer analyst at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, finally could take no more on what he considered work on a useless and illegal project. Foster wrote memorandums and letters on his views, and sent them to the Senate and House appropriations committees and others.

• Senate and House committees asked for the record of the entire project, and Moss launched a private probe. Moss reviewed the record, concluded it was evidence of a contempt for Congress, and possible violations of the law, and fired off a letter to President Carter and to a number of his interested colleagues.

• After receiving evidence indicating that an Air Force cover-up was in progress, Moss directed that his information file on the case be made public.

IN A LETTER to Defense Sec. Harold Brown, Moss characterized the episode as "a classic exhibition of contempt on the part of the Air Force for Congress."

David Jones, Air Force Chief of Staff, contends that three vague reports to Congress were a sort of notice of the continuation of various aspects of the computer project, but he conceded: "Our reporting was anything but timely and exhaustive."

'Do you remember how the Mother Hubbard story came out?'

Is the squeeze on to limit women in medicine?

BY MARY ROTH WALSH

What are the chances that your next doctor may be a woman?

Many commentators believe that if current trends continue at least half of this country's doctors will be women by 1990.

This may be an overoptimistic view. There is no question that women have made significant progress in recent years. The number of women enrolled in medical school has increased more than 300 per cent since 1969. An article earlier this year in The New York Times even suggested that women now have a better chance of getting into medical school than men.

What few people realize is that women experienced a similar breakthrough in the late 19th century. And, just as the recent gains owe a great deal to the women's liberation movement, much of the 19th-century progress can be credited to the women's rights crusade.

IT IS NO COINCIDENCE that the current increase in the number of women physicians parallels the development of the women's liberation movement.

A century ago, the rise of the women's rights movement provided aspiring female physicians with a similar boost.

Rejected by the more prestigious medical schools and denied appointments to internships and hospital staffs, nineteenth-century women opened their own medical schools and training hospitals.

At the end of the century, there were only seven hospitals in the United States where women could count on securing internships! All of these institutions were owned and operated by women.

WOMEN ALSO WAGED a carefully planned campaign to gain entrance into the elite medical schools. In 1892, taking advantage of Johns Hopkins University's financial problems, a group of women donated $500,000 to the school after reaching an agreement with officials that women would be admitted on the same terms as men.

By the turn of the century, a major role for women in medicine seemed assured. In 1894, women represented a significant portion of the student body at a growing number of medical schools in the country: 19 per cent at the University of Michigan; 25 per cent at Tufts University; and 37 per cent at Boston University.

The turn-of-the-century period was a "golden age" for women doctors. In 1900, 18.2 per cent of Boston's physicians were women, a figure which has not been surpassed to the present day.

Convinced that the battle for sexual equality in medicine had been won, woman's rights advocates shifted their attention to other battles.

SIMILARLY, CONVINCED that they had outlived their usefulness, 19 separate women's medical colleges closed their doors.

In 1900, 18.2 per cent of Boston's physicians were women, a figure which has not been surpassed to the present day.

At that point, a male backlash developed in medical circles. Concerned over what they believed to be a surplus of physicians, medical leaders sought to reduce the number of practitioners.

Not surprisingly, in an early version of last-hired first-fired, women were hard hit by the retrenchment. Quotas were established that successfully limited the number of women to four or five per cent of each medical class.

CAN HISTORY repeat itself?

I think that such a possibility is a real one if government pressure is relaxed. Affirmative action programs have come under increasing fire in the past few years. Charges of favoritism, reverse discrimination and decreasing standards have raised serious questions about the advisability of federal interference with the admissions and hiring process.

Equally significant is the fact that medical women are still vulnerable to the dictates of the male leaders of medicine.

Although there have been substantial gains in medical school admissions in recent years, the number of women in influential positions remains unchanged. The percentage of women faculty is the same today as it was in 1971. Similarly, medical schools and hospitals have refused to appoint women to key leadership positions.

Until women have a real voice in decision-making, their future in medicine remains uncertain.

Auto insurance becoming a very difficult item to buy

by ROBERT TAYLOR

Being denied auto insurance despite a good driving record is an old story to many residents of poor, crowded, crime-ridden neighborhoods. Now even the relatively affluent are experiencing the humiliation of being turned down.

Example: Career woman, 38, who lives in a suburb of Hartford Conn., "The Insurance City," receives notice that her policy won't be renewed. No reason given. Angered, but comforted by the knowledge that she has a spotless driving record, she calls her friendly, reliable agent of 10 years.

"Why?" she asks.

"You have a Porsche," he replies, "and the company no longer is underwriting Porsches or other sports cars."

For the first time, many drivers are finding that you can't always buy auto insurance like a loaf of bread — or an auto. You may put down your money but the seller — the insurance company — may not want to sell you a policy. It thinks it may lose money on the deal.

Rejected, the irate motorist can turn to the so-called assigned risk pools set up for drivers who can't get insured through regular channels. Chances are he or she will pay more and be restricted to limited coverage.

Sometimes make of car is a factor. Other times it is the age of the driver. But often the safest risks in terms of auto make, age, place of residence and other criteria are turned away.

A RECENT SURVEY by a brokers group in New York found nine out of 10 people seeking coverage for the first time or to renew with another company unable to buy insurance readily in the open market. In New Jersey a crisis is shaping up as more and more companies refuse to take on new business.

Rebuffed motorists often see themselves as tiny Davids pitted against the insurance Goliaths. Some complain to their state insurance commissions. If they're old customers, companies often are forced by law to give them renewals.

No matter how just or unjust the refusal of a company to do business, it is a fact of life that auto insurance has become bad business. Simply put, insurance companies in the past several years have ended up paying out more than they've taken in in premiums.

The year 1975 was declared by the property and casualty insurance industry as the worst in its 225-year history. Losses added up to $4.5 billion, according to industry spokesmen. Auto insurance accounted for more than one-half of that total. Another $2.2 billion loss was recorded for the first nine months of 1976.

LOOKED AT ANOTHER way, during the first half of 1976 auto insurers paid out $108 for claims and expenses for every $100 they received in premiums. In New York, the figures were $100 taken in, $116 shelled out.

What are the causes? Inflation is the major one. Insurance rates have gone up but the cost of the things insurance pays for — crash repairs and hospital bills, for example — have gone up even higher.

Accidents have increased. Auto thefts have soared. Awards in court suits have jumped. In September 1963, a jury in New York Supreme Court broke the million-dollar barrier by awarding that sum to a 13-year-old boy. Since then the million-dollar milestone has been surpassed many times.

No-fault plans, adopted by 16 states, were supposed to solve lots of problems. They have lived up to many promises — among them, prompt payment of medical expenses, reductions in expensive suits — but costs have risen in "no-fault" states as well as "fault" states. One reason has been the type of no-fault legislation approved in some states.

In New Jersey, for instance, accident victims can sue for "pain and suffering" if their medical expenses exceed $200. Study has shown collusion among accident victims, doctors and "ambulance chasing" lawyers to get expenses up and cases into court.

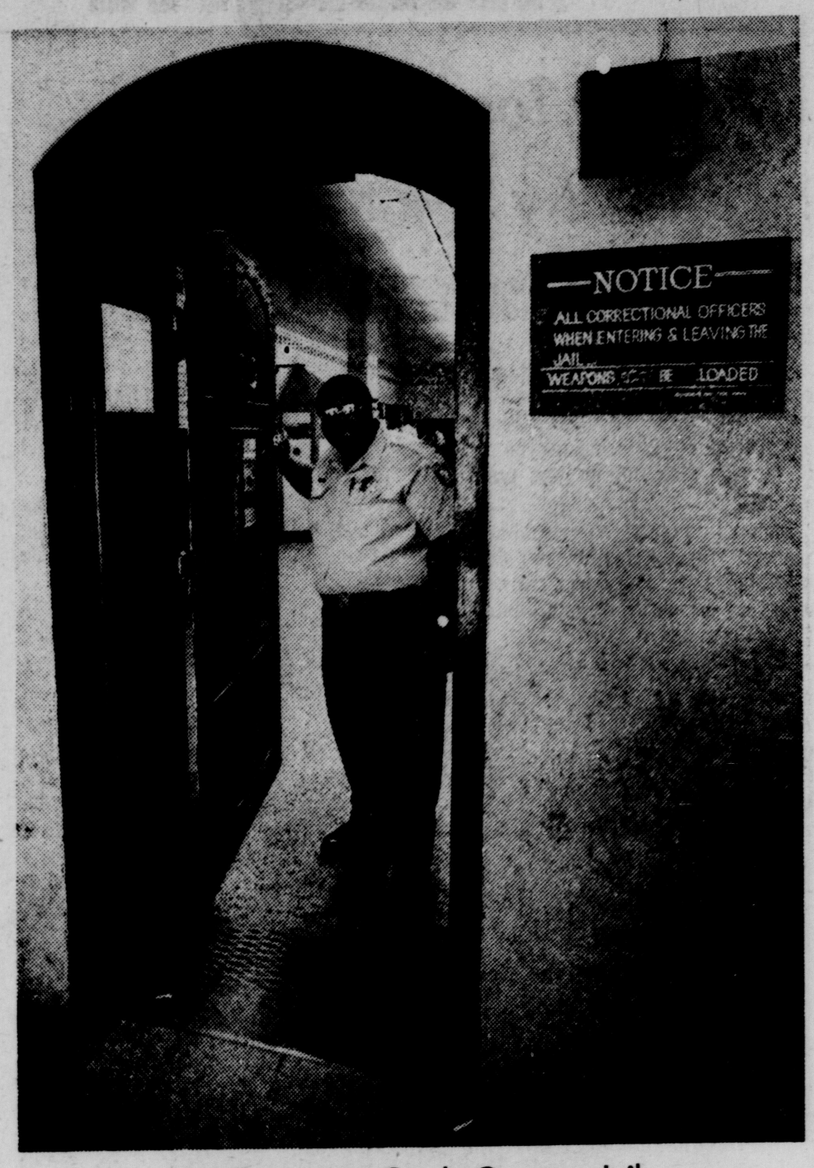
Cells face an inmates' lounge in the new jail.



Welcome to Cook County Jail.

County jail losing its 'cruel' look

by BY KURT BAER

Cook County Jail casts a shadow that tells a man it's for real.

The jailhouse is only 48-years-old, but it looks as if it may have stood forever at 26th Street and California Avenue on Chicago's southwest side.

Its 1,320 cells are just 8 feet long and little more than 4 feet wide. Inside, there is barely room for one man. Yet each cell houses two.

A SOLID STEEL door locks one end; a wall of iron bars closes the other.

The U.S. Justice Dept. has called conditions at County Jail "cruel and unusual punishment." Last Dec. 29, former Atty. Gen. Edward Levi brought suit against Cook County to force improvements.

Whether a result of the federal lawsuit or not, old County Jail apparently will be changed. The county board recently approved a plan that calls for making one cell out of every two. Block-by-block, the quarter-inch steel walls that now separate cells will be cut out. The resulting 64-square-foot cell will house just one inmate.

The conversion will start this summer, although a timetable and cost estimate for the work has not yet been determined.

IMPROVEMENTS TO the jail's fire alarms, firefighting equipment and plumbing also are planned.

The following buildings are either recently opened, under construction, or soon to be started:

A woman's dormitory built at a cost of $5.25 million and opened in 1973.

• A men's dormitory for work release prisoners and a gymnasium-recreation center, built at a combined cost of $8.25 million and opened two years ago.

• A new kitchen which can prepare up to 50,000 meals a day. Built and equipped at a cost of $4.9 million.

• A criminal courts administration building currently under construction and expected to cost $40 million.

• A reception, classification and diagnostic center that will receive, screen and house 1,000 inmates. Under construction and expected to cost $34 million.

• Another men's dormitory for 1,000 inmates. Expected to open in August 1978 and cost $30 million.

The building program is an "economic necessity," Robert E. Glotz, Superintendent at County Jail, said, that will meet the needs of Cook County for decades. "Instead of steel bars we are creating an atmosphere more like a residence," he said.

The inmate population at County Jail actually has been declining in recent years, a reflection of additional criminal court rooms and judges. Two years ago, some 5,000 persons were being held at County Jail on any given day. Now the figure is down to 4,000 inmates or less.

Inside the work release dormitory, inmates are housed in noticeably larger cells. Each of which has an outside window as well as a window in the door. The building is air conditioned and each cluster of 48 cells opens into an activity area that has radio, color television and checker boards.

COUNTY JAIL has always had its recreation yard. But only in the last two years have inmates been able to use a fully-equipped modern gymnasium.

Cook County has spent $92 million on the corrections complex since planning started in 1969, making it one of the largest of the county's projects.

Bonds to pay for the work are being issued in intervals. As old bonds are paid off, new ones are taken out and, as a result, the county's property tax has not had to be increased, Igoe says.

In his 1977 budget message, County Board Pres. George W. Dunne said that "the major factor in the increased cost of government is the steady increase of crime." A full 75 per cent of the county's corporate budget is spent for the protection of people and property, he said.

FIRST-TIME gardeners may dream of glorious vegetables, like this summer squash, for the price of a little water and minimum weed plucking. The fact is, gardening is hard, hot work for novices.

Work, not magic, makes first-time garden grow

by MARY B. GOOD

Imagine this scene: I go to my magic garden. I have never before held a spade in my hand. Visions of harvesting every leafy vegetable I crave dance in my head.

I drag my new tools and 26 packages of seeds to the spot I have singled out for planting my garden. I rake the spot gently, so as not to bruise the soil. With my finger, I etch a horizontal line down the length of the plot. I scoop, I plunk, I cover . . . again and again, until I fill the area with seed.

It's all over now. I am done. A little water now and then, and I'll pluck an errant weed, waiting for my bounty. I will have no need to visit the supermarket produce counter this growing season.

DAY DREAMER! You're in for a big shock — the shock of the first-time, don't-know-much-about-it-gardener. But that first attempt at gardening is crucial to your survival in the garden. It can mean the difference between the will to do it again, if you have any beginner's luck at all, or the inclination to forget it, if nothing comes up.

First-time gardeners need all the support and encouragement they can get from friends and relatives — not ridicule, no matter how bumbling that initial try. Lucky is the neophyte who has a gardening next-door neighbor who extends growing tips with friendship.

The National Garden Bureau believes that fear of failure keeps people from gardening — or from trying again if their first effort bombs.

If I were tackling my very first garden this year, I'd buy an easy-to-follow garden manual written especially for beginners, such as Derek Fell's "How to Plant a Vegetable Garden" (Countryside Books, Barrington $3.95).

NEXT I'D pick a sunny spot away from trees where the water doesn't sit, and the sun shines six hours each day.

I'd limit the size of my first garden to no more than 100 feet square — maybe smaller. New recruits to gardening often fall victim to the "big plot you-can't-handle" syndrome. A postage stamp size garden, well-tended, will produce more than a farm field neglected.

On paper plan four or five vegetables that you and your family like best. Easiest to grow are tomatoes, beans, zucchini squash, bell peppers, loose-leaf lettuce and pumpkins. Check seed packet labels to verify disease-resistant varieties.

WORK THE SOIL thoroughly to a depth of at least a foot, removing stones, weed roots, breaking up clods. Roto-till it, disk it, fork it, till it, until it is so worked over, Rocky couldn't have done a better job on the champ.

After the soil is fluffy, mix in peat moss — a two-cubic-foot bale, or a 40-pound bag of store-bought cattle manure for a 100-square-foot plot. (Garden compost is the best fertilizer, but it wouldn't be ready to use for a first garden effort.)

Arrange rows to run north and south to get most benefit from the sun, with taller plants at rear, rambling plants near the edges or trained to grow onto a fence or trellis.

Plant some flowers among your vegetables for color and variety, and also to repel destructive insects. Dwarf French marigolds contain a substance called terthienyl, which kills soil eelworms (nematodes), white geraniums kill Japanese beetles, petunias protect beans, painted daisies and nasturtium repel aphids, calendulas deter tomato worms.

DON'T MULCH small seedlings, especially those in very moist soil, or they may damp-off and die. But when the plants are well-established (probably late June), apply dry grass clippings or straw between the rows as a mulch to save yourself a lot of weeding and watering.

Most important — never consider failing. Think positive; think green! Your first tomato or bean will be your badge of success.

Climbing roses a good cover-up

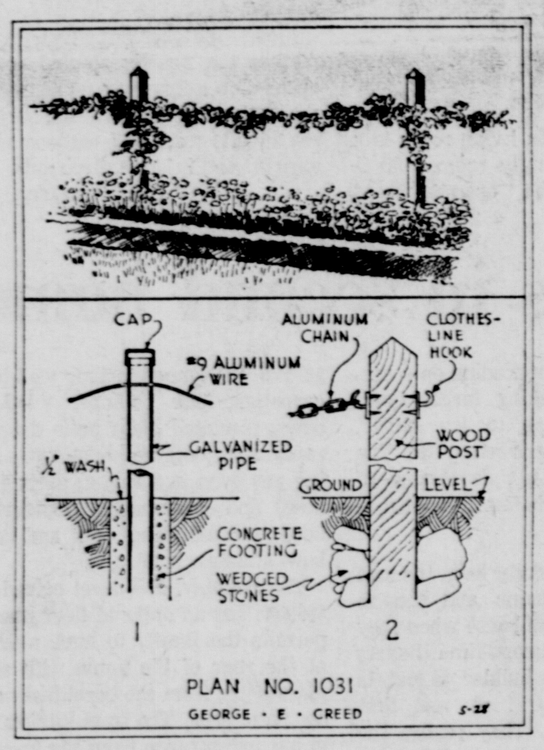
George Creed

It's your landscape

Because of their diversity in size, form, blooming characteristics and growth habits, roses are the most versatile of plants. And of the many different kinds of roses, those that have the ability to climb probably are the most versatile.

With climbing roses, you can make an arbor, decorate a pillar or fence, cover a wall or even disguise part of a telephone pole. But one of the most common ways to grow climbing roses is on a trellis.

Still another way is shown in the plan: use them in conjunction with wire or chain suspended from posts to form a garland effect. This is attractive and, at the same time, effective when you want a dividing line between two areas or an open barrier on a property line.



FENCES ON PROPERTY lines sometimes cause hard feelings between neighbors. But no one could complain about a flowery barrier like this.

Sketch 1 shows a post made of galvanized steel piping. Use at least three-inch (nominal pipe size) pipes and space them eight feet apart on centers. When setting any kind of post, be sure to set it in a vertical position.

To do this firmly, but temporarily, prop the post up with two by four-inch boards and make sure it's straight before preparing its footing. You can use wedged stones for setting posts, but a concrete footing is more permanent and secure and does not allow water to collect at the ground level where rusting of pipe posts or rotting of wood posts usually occurs.

You will need to drill holes for threading the aluminum wire through the pipes. Since galvanized pipe is not attractive, paint it to make it inconspicuous.

Sketch 2 shows a wood post that is fitted to aluminum support chains. If you want to install wood posts, you would do well to chose locust, cedar or redwood for their rot-resistant properties.

Q. What is your opinion of gravel paths?

A. They are all right if their edges are confined and they are well-maintained.

Q. Is it possible to grow plants in pure sand?

A. You can, but to succeed with most plants, you will have to supply them with plant nutrients and moisture.

Advice for painters: fight for flatwork

by NICK GREGORY

As the weather warms up and paint sales perk up, decorating consultant Susan Barna has this advice for do-it-yourself exterior house-painters lucky enough to have a helper: fight for the flatwork.

"The flatwork takes about a third as long to paint as the trim," says Miss Barna, one of about 1,000 decorating consultants for a large Chicago paint manufacturer who also operates paint centers throughout the United States.

Miss Barna's advice begins with the brush:

"Use one about 9 inches long, 4- or 5-inch wide bristles for flatwork, narrower for trim.

"MOST DO-IT-YOURSELFERS, about 80 per cent, prefer latex (water soluble) paints. Brushes for latex paint can be of natural or snythetic fibers.

"But for the best results in oil-base paints, natural fibers must be used."

A good quality exterior paint runs $12 and $16 per gallon, she said.

"Try to buy in the spring, because there are lots of sales. Sometimes prices are reduced by as much as one-third.

"A top-grade paint is usually good for seven years; the bottom-of-the-line product, four or five."

Surface preparation is probably the hardest job, she said, much harder than applying paint.

" . . . if you don't remove old blistered paint and moisture from the interior of your surfaces as well as the exterior, you're going to have trouble."

SHE EMPHASIZED that trouble pops up on any surface that hasn't been thoroughly cleaned and smoothed down.

"Amateurs tend to over-spread or

Arrange rows to run north and south to get most benefit from the sun, with taller plants at rear, rambling plants near the edges or trained to grow onto a fence or trellis.

Plant some flowers among your vegetables for color and variety, and also to repel destructive insects. Dwarf French marigolds contain a substance called terthienyl, which kills soil eelworms (nematodes), white geraniums kill Japanese beetles, petunias protect beans, painted daisies and nasturtium repel aphids, calendulas deter tomato worms.

DON'T MULCH small seedlings, especially those in very moist soil, or they may damp-off and die. But when the plants are well-established (probably late June), apply dry grass clippings or straw between the rows as a mulch to save yourself a lot of weeding and watering.

Most important — never consider failing. Think positive; think green! Your first tomato or bean will be your badge of success.

Climbing roses a good cover-up

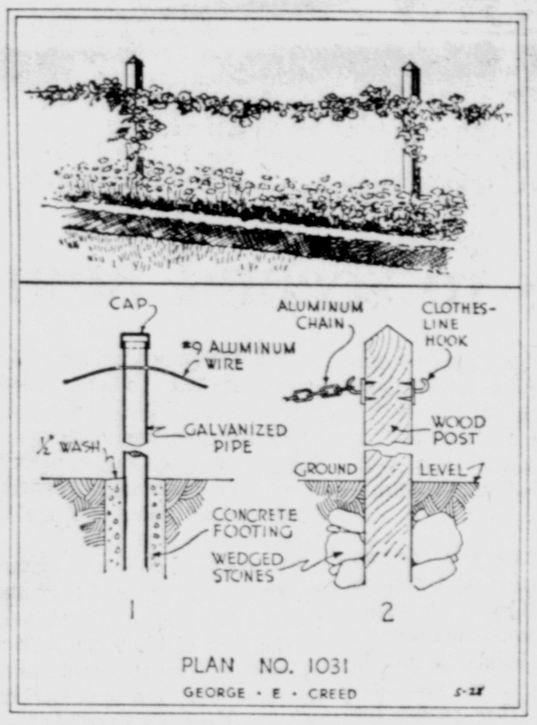
George Creed

It's your landscape

Because of their diversity in size, form, blooming characteristics and growth habits, roses are the most versatile of plants. And of the many different kinds of roses, those that have the ability to climb probably are the most versatile.

With climbing roses, you can make an arbor, decorate a pillar or fence, cover a wall or even disguise part of a telephone pole. But one of the most common ways to grow climbing roses is on a trellis.

Still another way is shown in the plan: use them in conjunction with wire or chain suspended from posts to form a garland effect. This is attractive and, at the same time, effective when you want a dividing line between two areas or an open barrier on a property line.



FENCES ON PROPERTY lines sometimes cause hard feelings between neighbors. But no one could complain about a flowery barrier like this.

Sketch 1 shows a post made of galvanized steel piping. Use at least three-inch (nominal pipe size) pipes and space them eight feet apart on centers. When setting any kind of post, be sure to set it in a vertical position.

To do this firmly, but temporarily, prop the post up with two by four-inch boards and make sure it's straight before preparing its footing. You can use wedged stones for setting posts, but a concrete footing is more permanent and secure and does not allow water to collect at the ground level where rusting of pipe posts or rotting of wood posts usually occurs.

You will need to drill holes for threading the aluminum wire through the pipes. Since galvanized pipe is not attractive, paint it to make it inconspicuous.

Sketch 2 shows a wood post that is fitted to aluminum support chains. If you want to install wood posts, you would do well to chose locust, cedar or redwood for their rot-resistant properties.

Q. What is your opinion of gravel paths?

A. They are all right if their edges are confined and they are well-maintained.

Q. Is it possible to grow plants in pure sand?

A. You can, but to succeed with most plants, you will have to supply them with plant nutrients and moisture.

Advice for painters: fight for flatwork

by NICK GREGORY

As the weather warms up and paint sales perk up, decorating consultant Susan Barna has this advice for do-it-yourself exterior house-painters lucky enough to have a helper: fight for the flatwork.

"The flatwork takes about a third as long to paint as the trim," says Miss Barna, one of about 1,000 decorating consultants for a large Chicago paint manufacturer who also operates paint centers throughout the United States.

Miss Barna's advice begins with the brush:

"Use one about 9 inches long, 4- or 5-inch wide bristles for flatwork, narrower for trim.

"MOST DO-IT-YOURSELFERS, about 80 per cent, prefer latex (water soluble) paints. Brushes for latex paint can be of natural or snythetic fibers.

"But for the best results in oil-base paints, natural fibers must be used."

A good quality exterior paint runs $12 and $16 per gallon, she said.

"Try to buy in the spring, because there are lots of sales. Sometimes prices are reduced by as much as one-third.

"A top-grade paint is usually good for seven years; the bottom-of-the-line product, four or five."

Surface preparation is probably the hardest job, she said, much harder than applying paint.

" . . . if you don't remove old blistered paint and moisture from the interior of your surfaces as well as the exterior, you're going to have trouble."

SHE EMPHASIZED that trouble pops up on any surface that hasn't been thoroughly cleaned and smoothed down.

"Amateurs tend to over-spread or

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Little Egypt on the lake, the stunning art treasures of King Tut exhibited at the Field Museum, is luring people by the thousands who are willing to wait hours. (Tip: pay the $15 membership fee for the no-wait, head-of-the-line membership privilege if your time is valuable.)

With interest in Egyptology, the latest rage, comes the current fascination with pyramid power on plants. Gardeners are buying and making pyramid models to see for themselves if the pyramid shape is a resonator of energy.

Russ Waters, 1014 Hillside Drive, Bensenville, is a soft-spoken, easy-going man who sells pyramids, and constructed his first pyramid over his vegetable garden last year. He reported huge, delicious cabbages and a bountiful crop of tomatoes. This year he put up two 10-foot pyramid frames. He now plans to keep detailed records of his growth and yield, and take photos comparing the crop that grows beneath the pyramids to those vegetables planted outside the frames.

The Potting Shed will follow up on Waters' results come harvest time.

WATERS SAID THE big energy comes in germination. Don't expect to see a big difference in already-started plants, he said, the pyramid simply keeps those plants healthy.

One who attended a Waters lecture now tends her plants with water energized under a model pyramid, and says her sweet peas sprouted faster under the pyramid than ones she started without benefit of pyramid power.

A commercial application of pyramid power could be the ability to ship fresh fruits and vegetables long distances from grower to consumers without expensive refrigeration by putting layers of produce beteen rows of pyramid grids, according to Pat Flanagan, a physicist from Glendale, Calif., and author of "Pyramid Powar." Flanagan patented a device that duplicates the energy field within the pyramid, used to make brackish water potable.

CAMPGROUNDS MAY see Cheops meditation tents popping up this summer: pyramid-shaped houses appearing on the scene.

Some scientists call pyramid power "hogwash." Others are treating it seriously, like scientists at Fairleigh Dickinson University, where pyramid structures are being used for research experiments. If scientists are dragging their heels in investigating the controversial pyramid power, average people are jumping right in, using models for sprouting begonias, keeping the kitty litter box smelling like a rose, preserving cut flowers, and much more.

If you're handy, you can make your own pyramid. For example, a pyramid to fit over a 10-foot garden would require four nine and one-half foot ridge poles. It is important that the two edges be parallel to the north/south axis of the earth. (Use a compass to line it up.)

Readymade model pyramids are available locally. You can find them at specialty shops, in addition to Russ Waters' operation. They can be mail ordered through the Edmund Scientific catalog, 55 Edscorp Building, Barrington, N.J., 08021. This company carries supplies for gardeners and items used in school science projects. There is also a plant and pyramid store at 212 Main St., Crown Point, Ind.

GAMES TO PLAY experimenting with pyramid energy follow:

Fill a small bucket with one-third gallon of water and put it under a 20-inch model pyramid for 24 hours. Water plants for at least a week with this energized water. See if houseplants, patio plants, transplants and root cuttings respond well to the energized water.

WHEN PLACING items under a pyramid, it's important not to overfill. For most effective energy concentration, Russ Waters says the simplified formula for establishing how much can be put under a pyramid is the base dimension cubed, multiplied by .0106, which equals the volume. So a 20-inch pyramid could handle 84.8 cubic inches or a shade over one-third gallon. (Hope you're up on your mathematics!)

Cut a steak in two pieces. Put one piece under a pyramid for an hour. Cook the two pieces together and compare flavor. Take a glass of cheap, dry wine or less expensive gin, vodka, brandy or whiskey and energize it under a pyramid for an hour. Does the liquor that sat under the pyramid taste smoother? Put an egg under a pyramid for two weeks. Will it spoil and rot or mummify?

If you've got curiosity and a pyramid, more power to you!

RUSS WATERS, Bensenville, has erected two 10-foot pyramids over his proposed vegetable garden site to experiment with pyramid "energy" on plants. Waters plans to compare the growth of his vegetables grown under the pyramids with those outside the perimeter.

Jean-Paul Saint-Michel

Home of your own

The A-frame deeign has always been considered a static one, but here it changes in spots to prove that every one need not be a look-alike.

The big change in this home is the front — usually mostly glass from top to bottol. We've bricked up the front to a height of eight feed. Actually, the wall projects beyond the structure in both directions, creating the illusion that the roof is balanced on top of it. The wall then turns toward the rear and encloses an outdoor garden. What is achieved by this unusual approach is privacy, especially designed for areas where vacation homes are likely to be close to one another.

ANOTHER DEFINITE change is that the main entrance is on the side. Actually, there are four entrances. One leads into a foyer and could be termed a "normal" entrance. The other three doors provide access to and from the living room and garden and are unusual. They tie directly into three dormer windows above which rise to a height of 20 feet from the ground, making a display of sawtooth roof and 15 glass panels.

The carport has been located to the rear, and the contemporary theme is carried out by the flat, deck roof over it.

Inside, the foyer has a five-foot-wide closet, providing ample guest coat-hanging space. To the left and on the right is the multi-direction access to the living, service and sleeping areas.

THE LIVING ROOM is sunken two steps (the foundation is a slab) and the steps curve around the fireplace, forming the outer hearth, and end up at the bar on the right. The sawtooth window-dormer roof is repeated in the slanted ceiling, not only bringing in daylight but an outdoor view as well. The eight-foot-wide sculptured brick chimney pierces the slanted roof 22 feet above at the center. The bar, which is attached to the chimney, is open to the kitchen although a grill above acts as a screen.

To the rear of the living room is a large kitchen - family room, and it backs against the open-balconied staircase. Beyond that, two bedrooms are served by a hall bath, and 10 feet of closets provide abundant hanging space. In addition to other standard-type windows on the first floor, there are three, projected bay dormers. They are located in the living room, kitchen and bath and their deep sills provide excellent places for planters.

Up the balconied staircase is a studio, with three five-foot-high windows at the rear, providing an excellent spot for an artist, writer or for the person wanting an office at home. It could be used as a third bedroom, if needed.

Along the balcony hall, a door pierces the acutely slanted roof and opens onto a luxurious sundeck, above the carport. An iron railing surrounds the livable area and outdoor view is unrestricted in three directions.

Extras in second home

Buyers who are upgrading on a second home are making larger down payments, according to Irv Miller, vice president of marketing for The Partridge Group Ltd., developers of Partridge Hill single-family homes in Hoffman Estates.

"They have the equity from the sale of their present home and they're putting it all into the house when they buy. These are second-time buyers and they want the builder to put in the basement, central air and fireplace, for example. They realize the builder can do it for less at this point and that if they wait, costs will be higher."

Three models, a ranch, bi-level and colonial, are presently offered at Partridge Hill. Pirced from $59,900 to $67,900, the homes include wall-to-wall carpeting, oak railings, wood windows, insulated glass patio doors, ceramic tile floors and continuous-cleaning gas oven and range, garbage disposal and dishwasher, exhaust fan hood, stainless steel sink and double-bowl stainless steel sink.

The Barclay, a bi-level priced from $66,900, has an optional floor plan that permits the family to have a kitchen at the rear of the home with sliding glass doors from the breakfast area to the patio area. The front kitchen model has an entrance from the foyer into the bay-windowed breakfast area.

The home is also available with a basement.

Partridge Hill single-family homes are located on Bode Road west of Roselle Road.

Two new models introduced

Two new home models, one which has optional first-floor design plans, have been announced by the developers of Lake Barrington Shores, the 510-acre residential recreational community in Barrington.

The addition of the new Kent and Windsor models was designed "to give shoppers a more complete spectrum of sizes and prices without compromising the quality and design integrity that have earned us numerous design awards in the last three years," said sales manager Bill Enyart.

"These new homes are aimed at a specific gap in our marketplace," said Enyart, of J.S. James & Co., sales and marketing agent. "A number of our prospects have been looking for homes with less space. Some have other residences and don't need our larger homes because they are only here seasonally."

THE WINDSOR, with 1,640 square feet of living area, exclusive of the basement, has two optional first-floor plans and ranges in price from $88,500 to $87,200. The Kent offers 1,440 square feet of living space, not including basement, and starts at $76,800.

Previously, prospects for smaller homes at Lake Barrington Shores only had the option of buying into a Manor House, which offers four-ranch-style residences in a single building. These will continue to be offered. In fact, new Manor House designs were recently introduced.

"The purchaser now has a choice of six Manor House models priced from $65,900 to $82,200 and seven Garden Country Homes from $76,800 to $149,700. Considering the environment and recreational amenities equally available to all owners, we provide a wide opportunity range," Enyart said.

underspread, depending on whether they're running low or trying to make sure they slap on enough paint to cover a surface with one coat," she said.

A good quality exterior paint runs $12 and $16 per gallon, she said.

"Try to buy in the spring, because there are lots of sales. Sometimes prices are reduced as much as one-third.

Miss Barna recommends light colored paint for larger houses, darker hues for small ones. She said older homes look better in soft, gray colors, while modern homes are more attractive in bright, contrasting colors.

Although most amateurs favor latex over oil base paint, the two are on a par for quality, Miss Barna said: "but the trend is toward latex. It's easier to apply and easier to clean up."

Talking with a consultant and studying the painting manual isn't enough, Miss Barna said. Before you take paint brush or roller in hand, "read the directions on the can and follow them carefully."

The doctor says

Hives on face caused by allergic reaction

My problem is that I am constantly getting hives on my face. They vary in size from a pea to as large as a quarter. They itch and greatly resemble mosquito bites in appearance.

I am 20 years old and have had these for several years. There is rarely a day that I don't get one and have had as many as three in one day.

The problem is that I have no idea what causes them although I have tried to switch make-up and shampoos. I have also tried to keep track of a particular food substance without much success, as I still get them even if I haven't eaten for hours.

I frankly don't know how or where I can go to be rid of this problem. I would be terribly grateful for any advice you can give me as it is so frustrating as well as embarrassing.

Hives are allergic reactions. The most common cause is a food allergy. Finding out what the food is that causes the problem is not always easy. Some doctors put patients on a rigid diet with unseasoned foods least likely to cause allergies. If the patient gets along all right then foods such as milk and milk products are added one at a time to be sure it is not the offending agent. In the course of time the foods that a person is allergic to will be identifield. Often it is some spice that is used in foods that is really the offending agent.

If you really want relief I would suggest that you see an allergist and let him start you on a program. Some hives are caused by contact with the offending animal may cause hives. People who

Less commonly a person may be allergic to animal dander and contact with the affending animal may cause hives. People who are allergic to bees may not be able to eat honey without the lips and mouth developing hives.

An insect bite may cause a hive at the site of the bite and also may cause generalized hives all over the body — a condition doctors call generalized urticaria. Infections of all types can induce an allergic reaction with hives. So can the medicines used to treat infections. A rash induced by an allergic reaction to a medicine is nothing more than generalized hives.

Still other patients develop hives in response to cold and others to heat and sun exposure. Screening compounds used to prevent sunburning often help to prevent solar hives. For information on screening compounds I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer.

Not all of the so-called screening compounds work and a person sensitive to the sun needs year around protection. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your request to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The hive is caused by a release of a chemical substance in the body called histamine. For that reason treatment of the actual urticaria (hives) usually employs one of the antihistamine medicines. These can also be used in prevention, for example, immediately after you have eaten something that you know causes an allergic reaction.

The drawback to anithistamines is the side effect of feeling drowsy. In severe intractable cases the adrenal cortex hormone, prednisone, may be used for immediate relief.

Home gardens produce old-fashioned tomatoes

Dear Dorothy: I'm outraged by what the commercial growers have done to tomatoes. By the time they're through I suspect the whole strain of tomatoes as we knew them will be gone. Isn't there anything that can be done before that sorry day comes? — Susan R. Gerbner

Bill Titus, one of Cornell University's top extension agents, says it isn't so. He says those who have home gardens produce tomatoes just as good as "the old days," and that this applies to those in apartments who have terraces on which they can have a few pots or cans. Bill also says there are still private farmers around most cities and he has good things to report about their tomatoes. Just remember that the best tomato-growing time is from July to October.

Dear Dorothy: If you are going to use an electric mixer to make the sweet potatoes, don't make them the day before and refrigerate them. I tried it. Thought the potatoes were soft enough to beat in the mixer and got the motor stopped just in time to keep the beaters from being seriously bent. — Renee Gallatin

Dear Dorothy: Others may like to know how I've discouraged my children from putting too much sugar on cereals and so on. A tiny demitasse spoon in the sugar bowl has helped markedly. — Janet Kroll

Dear Dorothy: I'm thinking of covering my bathroom walls with fabric and have been unable to find a liquid or powdered starch containing a mildew inhibitor. Would using a disinfectant retard mildew growth on the fabric? — K.N.

The expert I checked says you're asking for trouble. He says that with all the moisture present in bathrooms it's entirely possible the fabric would come loose. Further, he added, moisture and fabric are an invitation to mildew, no matter what's used. He recommends fabric for every room in a house expect the bathrooms. While we're on the subject of mildew inhibitors, he said a mildew additive can be added to cellulose paste which is not only nonstaining but vermin-proof.

Divide to conquer space problem

Carolyn Murray

Your home

There's nothing new about space dividing. Walls have been doing the job for centuries. But since our generation enjoys the gentle divide, rather than the total block-out, it's good to see new ways to handle the room divider.

We've enjoyed the see-through storage walls, with the etagere taking precedence, for a few years. But now there's an energy crunch and much of the free flow of water and power is being curtailed so the fewer housekeeping chores we have to repeat the better.

Open storage units allow us to use possessions as art objects, letting their color and texture add personality to a room. But dust and grease do circulate, and the open systems need to be supplemented with areas of closed-door storage.

THE PHOTOGRAPH today makes the point. In the sleep/seating area of this divided space, there is handy open shelving for books and plants. Yet the shelf area is related to a cupboard and a two-drawer chest section on each side of the sofa. Meanwhile, the divider system is heavily concentrated in closed storage cupboards, with some recesses for serving pieces for dining.

Designer Ginny Gray, currently associate editor of the Los Angeles Times Home magazine, conceived this solution for a city apartment. She used the floating "wall" as a place to stow anything from china, linen, clothing to stereo equipment and bar needs.

The cabinets and high-rise shelf/cupboard in the rear of this setting are part of the "Circa 2000" series by Schoolfield Furniture Industries of Mullins, S.C.

THE ENTIRE SYSTEM shown here is surfaced in all-white practical Formica, but Schoolfield offers the same components in a dapple elm Formica for those who lean toward woodsy interiors.

Ginny chose a muted color scheme of peach, gray and white. Then she selected fairly ornamental Chippendale-type dining chairs and reed and rattan pull-up chairs.

The printed fabrics reflect the lattice motif of the dining chairs, and there's a nice come-and-go quality about the floor coverings, where deep pile shag interacts with flatter pile carpeting.

(c) 1977, Los Angeles

NO NEED TO PASS up style, even in a space that forces you to share. Here designer Ginny Gray divides a room with Schoolfield's "Circa 2000" components. Low-key colors also make the space seem bigger than it is.

Weddings

Mari Haugsness–Scott Rood

Edison Park Lutheran Church, Chicago, was the setting for the wedding April 29 which united Mari Haugsness of Morton Grove and Scott Rood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray J. Rood of Arlington Heights.

Scott and his bride are living in Schaumburg after spending a week's honeymoon in Galena, Ill. He is facility manager for Palwaukee Industries, Wheeling, and Mari is a nurse at Mill View Nursing Center, Niles.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Haugsness, wore an ecru voile and lace gown and carried a nosegay of white roses, carnations, Starburst mums and stephanotis for the 5 p.m. ceremony.

HER SISTER, Mrs. Edward Sanders of Palatine, was matron of honor, gowned in an ecru floral printed voile and carrying apricot roses, blue daisies, Starburst mums and bachelor buttons.

There were two flower girls, both nieces of the bride, who were attired identically to the matron of honor. They were Kirsten St. Croix, Roseville, Mich., and Rachel Aronowski, Niles.

The groom's two attendants were his brother, Mark, as best man and Gregory Johnson, Schaumburg, groomsman.

A reception for 175 guests followed at the Wilmette Park District Country Club.

Mari is a graduate of Niles North High and Minneapolis School of Nursing. Scott attended Lane Tech and is now studying at Illinois Institute of Technology.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Rood

Kathy Popple–Steven Leipold

In a wedding May 21 at Malstrom Air Force Base Chapel at Great Falls, Mont., Steven Leipold of Buffalo Grove took Kathy Marie Popple of Great Falls as his bride.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Leipold and is a '75 graduate of Buffalo Grove High School. He is stationed at Malstrom AFB in the transportation division.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Kraft

Louise Berra–Michael J. Kraft

Usually it's the bride who is inclined to forget something, but for the wedding of Louise Berra and Michael J. Kraft, it was Michael.

When he arrived at St. Raymond's Church in Mount Prospect for his and Louise' wedding, he had left his tux in Wheaton. A call to the rental store produced another tux, but Mike and his best man, Rick Hud, of Clarendon Hills, had to meet the delivery man half way between the store and the church.

Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Berra, and Mike, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Kraft, Wheaton, met at a spaghetti dinner last August and their wedding was April 16. Because Louise is employed nights and Mike is employed days, the couple never found time to order wedding rings, so were married with gold friendship rings lent by Mike's parents.

MAID OF HONOR for the 1 p.m. service was the bride's sister, Kathy, and bridesmaids were her sister, Julie Anne, and Maureen Rausch and Jean Wisniewski, both of Arlington Heights. John Wilson, Bolingbrook, and Craig Wisniewski and Tom Donlon of Arlington Heights, were ushers.

The service was followed by a reception for 175 at Allegretti's in Rosemont, after which the newlyweds honeymooned a week in Hawaii. A graduate of Forest View High and Eastern Illinois University, Louise is now back on her job at Continental Airlines, and Mike, a graduate of Illinois Benedictine College in Lisle, is back with Bolingbrook Police Department.

Gale E. Lloyd– Bruce C. Horton

Free Spirit and Nova met over their CB radios while traveling to work in the mornings, and on April 30 were married in Community Church of Rolling Meadows.

Free Spirit is the handle of Gale E. Lloyd, who works at Schwinn Sales Midwest, Inc., in Elk Grove Village, and Nova is the handle of Bruce C. Horton, who works at Standard Conveyor in Schaumburg.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lloyd Sr., Rolling Meadows, Gale and Bruce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Horton Jr., Maywood, honeymooned in Daytona Beach and are now living in a Hoffman Estates apartment.

Gale is a '72 graduate of Forest View High. She studied at Eastern Illinois University and her bridegroom at Triton College.

FOR THE 5:30 p.m. candlelight, double ring service Gale chose a gown of peau de soie trimmed in beading and a veil trimmed in the same bead trim. She carried white carnations, roses and stephanotis with baby's breath.

Her only attendant was Debi Deadmond of Fulton, Ill., who wore a white chiffon gown with blue flowers and a picture hat with yellow ribbons. She carried yellow Starburst mums and roses with baby's breath and greens.

Attending the groom was Edward Youngerman of Elmhurst as best man, and the couple's brothers, Clayton Horton and Paul and Jack Lloyd, as ushers.

A reception for 120 guests was held in Indian Lakes County Club, Bloomingdale.

Palatine pair wed 50 years

Fifty years to the day they were married in Washburn, Wis., Leonard and Alma Mitchell of Palatine were dining and dancing at their golden anniversary party at Inverness Country Club.

And joining them in the receiving line at the May 7 festivities was Leonard's mother, Mrs. Christine Mitchell of Evanston, who is 95 years old.

Also greeting the guests were the couple's son James and wife Barbara of Columbus, Ohio, and their daughter Barbara and husband Roger Sellstrom of Western Springs.

JUST BEFORE THE luncheon, which preceded tea dancing, the Mitchells' seven grandchildren stood in a group to sing "The Lord's Prayer." The invocation was given by the Rev. Wayne Tellekson, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, where Leonard and Alma are members.

Among the party guests were Leonard's brothers, Charles of Clearwater, Fla., and Bill of Chicago, and their sister, Mrs. Beatrix Masko of Evanston.

Married May 7, 1927 in the Norwegian Lutheran Church of Washburn, the anniversary pair have lived in Palatine for 25 years. Leonard is retired from the E. & I. Du Pont Co. and now manages a Mayberrys' Ice Cream & Candy Shoppe in the Golf Mill area.

Ask Andy

Soccer games first played by the Greeks

WHERE DID SOCCER ORIGINATE?

Long ago the Greeks played a kicking game with an air-filled ball called follis. From this came a game called foote balle, which was played in England more than 800 years ago. The idea, as it is with today's game of soccer, was to kick a ball through the other team's goal.

The one rule that has been common to soccer since its earliest days in ancient Greece is that you have to kick the ball, not carry it. But in 1823 a student at Rugby College in England, anxious for his team to score, picked up the ball and ran with it. From this came the game we now call rugby football.

For a time the older form of the game was simply called the kicking game, to distinguish it from rugby. Then in 1863 the London Football Assn. drew up a new set of rules for the game that came to be known as association football. In time the word association was shortened to soccer.

Soccer was brought to North America by the English colonists. Many thought of it as a rowdy game played by mobs of men on village greens. In time it became popular in American and Canadian colleges. the first intercollegiate game was played between Princeton and Rutgers in 1869.

Today even though American-style football draws bigger crowds, soccer continues to be played by many school and recreation teams. It is the most widely played football game in the world.

Most physical education leaders agree that soccer has fine body-building values for both boys and girls. The game calls for good control of the body and the swiftness of the action is an excellent exercise for the body.

Rules keep soccer from being too rough. No one may hold, push, shove, kick, strike or trip any opponent. To get possession of the ball, a player may charge an opponent by nudging him shoulder to shoulder. When two players are rushing down the field after the ball, they must keep their hands and arms close to their sides.

Only the goalkeeper may touch the ball. He may catch it on the fly but must at once kick, throw or bat it away from the goal area.

WHAT CAUSES BLOOD TO CLOT?

It's a serious problem if blood clots within the bloodstream. Two substances, antithromboplastin and antiprothrombin, are contained in the blood to prevent internal clotting.

In addition, there are a number of substances in the blood designed to produce clotting when needed. These include prothrombin, fibrinogen and calcium ions. There are at least 10 other substances involved in the process by which prothrombin is coverted to thrombin, which changes soluble fibrinogen into the insoluble strand of fibrin.

Clotting action occurs when there is external bleeding. Warm towels are sometimes used to speed up the chemical action that causes clotting. Ice packs also are used to stop bleeding because cold causes blood vessels to contract.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Win at bridge

All systems are go

In case anyone isn't thoroughly confused by the principle of restricted choice, we will close with a simple hand.

East wins the club lead with the ace and returns the deuce of diamonds. South has a problem at trick two.

He can take the diamond finesse which has a theoretical 50 per cent chance to succeed or he can rise with the ace of diamonds, pull trumps and go after hearts. If hearts break 3-3 (a 36 per cent chance), he can discard his queen and 10 of diamonds and make the slam that way.

Just to make things easy for guessers both plays work this time, but there still had to be a superior play.

It all depends on what you know about your West opponent. If he is the sort of player who likes to attack against a slam contract you assume that he would have opened a diamond if he held the king. In that case the finesse is a certainty.

On the other hand if you are sure he would not lead from a king after the way you reached your slam, restricted choice comes into action. You say to yourself, "If he didn't hold the king of diamonds he might well have led that suit, therefore the odds are that he does have the king and the finesse should be refused."

Ask Andy

Soccer games first played by the Greeks

WHERE DID SOCCER ORIGINATE?

Long ago the Greeks played a kicking game with an air-filled ball called follis. From this came a game called foote balle, which was played in England more than 800 years ago. The idea, as it is with today's game of soccer, was to kick a ball through the other team's goal.

The one rule that has been common to soccer since its earliest days in ancient Greece is that you have to kick the ball, not carry it. But in 1823 a student at Rugby College in England, anxious for his team to score, picked up the ball and ran with it. From this came the game we now call rugby football.

For a time the older form of the game was simply called the kicking game, to distinguish it from rugby. Then in 1863 the London Football Assn. drew up a new set of rules for the game that came to be known as association football. In time the word association was shortened to soccer.

Soccer was brought to North America by the English colonists. Many thought of it as a rowdy game played by mobs of men on village greens. In time it became popular in American and Canadian colleges. the first intercollegiate game was played between Princeton and Rutgers in 1869.

Today even though American-style football draws bigger crowds, soccer continues to be played by many school and recreation teams. It is the most widely played football game in the world.

Most physical education leaders agree that soccer has fine body-building values for both boys and girls. The game calls for good control of the body and the swiftness of the action is an excellent exercise for the body.

Rules keep soccer from being too rough. No one may hold, push, shove, kick, strike or trip any opponent. To get possession of the ball, a player may charge an opponent by nudging him shoulder to shoulder. When two players are rushing down the field after the ball, they must keep their hands and arms close to their sides.

Only the goalkeeper may touch the ball. He may catch it on the fly but must at once kick, throw or bat it away from the goal area.

WHAT CAUSES BLOOD TO CLOT?

It's a serious problem if blood clots within the bloodstream. Two substances, antithromboplastin and antiprothrombin, are contained in the blood to prevent internal clotting.

In addition, there are a number of substances in the blood designed to produce clotting when needed. These include prothrombin, fibrinogen and calcium ions. There are at least 10 other substances involved in the process by which prothrombin is coverted to thrombin, which changes soluble fibrinogen into the insoluble strand of fibrin.

Clotting action occurs when there is external bleeding. Warm towels are sometimes used to speed up the chemical action that causes clotting. Ice packs also are used to stop bleeding because cold causes blood vessels to contract.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

A moderate index increase of 0.5% portends economic growth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government's barometer of future economic activity rose a moderate 0.5 per cent in April, an indication that the economy will show continued growth this summer, the Commerce Department said today.

The April rise in the Composite Index of Leading Indicators was considerably below the revised increases for February and March when the economy was recovering from the effects of severe winter weather.

However, a Commerce Department spokesman said the advance was still healthy.

"IT IS A PRETTY good increase," department economist Feliks Tamm said. He said the index for April would probably be revised upward when more complete data is available.

The department also said it had revised its increase for March from 1.4 per cent to 1.9 per cent, the biggest climb since a 2.3 per cent increase in July, 1975.

With the exception of 0.2 per cent declines in both April and September of last year and a 1.2 per cent decrease in January, the index has increased in each month since February, 1975.

The index is supposed to foretell which direction the economy will move in the next three or four months. An increase suggests rising production at factories, mines and utilities and more promising opportunities for job seekers.

THE INDEX WAS put at 130.7 in April, 0.5 per cent higher than the revised March index of 130.0. The base year for figuring the gains is 1967, which is assigned the value of 100.

Four of the 10 indicators available for April increased, five declined and one was unchanged, the department said.

The biggest contributor to the increase was changes in sensitive prices, which advanced 0.5 per cent. Vendor performance, contracts and orders for plant and equipment and money balance also climbed.

The five areas showing declines were average workweek, total liquid assets, stock prices, new orders and building permits. The layoff rate was unchanged.

Wage keeping teens unemployed?

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK—An open letter to a teen-ager in search of a summer job:

Dear Friend: First, my condolences. You don't need me to tell you how tough it is to find a job this summer. There has been a lot of talk about the economy improving, but what good do upward squiggles on a graph do if you still can't find a job?

If it's any consolation, it's not some character defect of yours that keeps you from finding a job as easily as your folks think you should. In most of the country, teenagers are having problems finding not just summer jobs, but any job. You hear adults complain how "intolerable" the current national rate of unemployment is, but, in fact, the unemployment rate for teenagers is about three times as high (and twice that again if your skin is the wrong color). Let's face it: Teen-agers looking for jobs belong to a severely oppressed minority.

So you'll have to exercise your ingenuity — and perseverance — and you still may be out of luck for an aggravatingly long part of the season. In that case, what can you do, other than vowing to complete your education and establish the kind of vocational credentials that might help you avoid this hassle in the future?

Well, you can get all kinds of advice in this matter. Some parents may just get on your back and stay there; they were able to get jobs when they were teen-agers, they'll tell you. (And so they were: the unemployment rate for youths wasn't anywhere near as high a generation ago.) Some professors, or fellow students, may tell you that your job problem is symptomatic of a general failure of our economic system, and that the only answer is to picket and protest and demand radical changes in the way our society operates.

Well, sorry, but that's not the answer. The answer, I respectfully suggest, lies in what is different now from a generation ago: namely, the minimum wage. Until Congress started kicking the minimum wage geometrically upward two decades ago, there wasn't nearly as much difference between the unemployment rate for adults and the unemployment rate for teen-agers. And practically every time Congress increases the minimum, that gap grows.

So, what I am suggesting is that you demand to be allowed to work for less money. Am I heartless, or crazy? I don't think so. But to understand what I'm saying, you have to comprehend the difference between the minimum wage rate set by Congress and the actual wage you receive. If the former is so high that the latter becomes zero, you really haven't gained much, have you?

And your interest in finding a job is, both economically and humanly, the national interest, too.

What I suggest is that you write your Congressman and say something like this: "Hey, man, I'd rather be working at $2 an hour than unemployed at $2.30. And I know I'm not worth $2.30 yet in many of the jobs I might get. Please cut out this talk about making the situation worse by raising that $2.30 even higher, and think about giving us ambitious kids a break. Give us, at least, a lower minimum. Someday, I expect to be worth a heck of a lot more than $2.30 an hour, but I can't prove that if you keep me from finding a job now."

These Congressmen think you're pretty naive: that you won't realize that, in the guise of keeping wages high, they're actually keeping you unemployed. Let them know you really do want a job, and you're not as gullible as they think.

Good luck,
Louis Rukeyser

Soft drink drivers out on strike

Teamsters union members handling the most popular bottled soft drinks distributed around the Chicago area went on strike Friday at the beginning of the long Memorial Day weekend. The weekend is considered one of the most popular picknickers' weekends of the year and comes during a lengthening heat wave. On strike were 1,200 drivers and helpers of Teamsters Local 744 who rejected an offer on commissions for each case delivered, made by the Chicago Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages Thursday. The Teamsters immediately established picket lines that were expected to be honored by inside workers at local bottling plants.

CitiBank raises interest rate

CitiBank raised its interest rate for prime business loans again Friday — up one quarter of 1 per cent to 6.75 per cent. CitiBank led the way in raising the prime rate to 6.5 from 6.25 May 13. Most major banks followed suit in the succeeding days. The new increase in the prime had been expected because CitiBank sets its rate 1.5 percentage points above the latest three-week average of the commercial paper rate set by the Federal Reserve.

New fare on St. Louis flight

Delta Air Lines announced that it has filed a discounted $50 round-trip excursion fare for travel between Chicago's Midway Airport and St. Louis. The new fare, subject to Civil Aeronautics Board Approval, will be effective July 11. It would be a 39 per cent reduction from current coach fares between the two points.

Arabs threaten blacklisting U.S.

Ina clear reference to the United States, the Arab boycott of Israel head office Friday vowed to blacklist countries passing anti-boycott legislation and replace their products with those of Japan and West Europe. "Chambers of commerce, industry and agriculture in Kuwait, Syria, and Jordan have started to implement resolutions taken at the conference of Arab chambers of commerce, industry and agriculture held in Damascus May 15-21, said Mohammed Mahjoub, spokesman for the Syrian-based boycott office.

Japan business leaders to visit

Japan's top business leaders will seek a meeting with U.S. President Jimmy Carter to discuss energy, monetary and other economic issues during their scheduled trip to Washington next month, officials said Friday. Japan Federation of Economic Organization (Keidanren) Pres. Toshio Doko will lead Japan's delegation to the annual United States-Japan economic council meeting scheduled to be held June 15-18 in Washington.

A U.S. House bill to continue federal "war risk" insurance for airlines and to expand it to cover losses due to highjackings, riots and other perils was passed Friday by the Senate. The legislation was sent back to the House after it was amended to permit the Civil Aeronautics Board to pay a $240,172 subsidy to Air Midwest for an experimental local air service in cooperation with Frontier Airlines. A federal court, while not questioning the subsidy, held recently that the CAB handled it improperly by paying it to Air Midwest through Frontier. The bill, approved by routine voice vote, would extend an existing aviation war risk insurance program through Sept. 30, 1982. The insurance may be extended to air carriers for up to 60 days at a time during periods when commercial insurance is not available on "reasonable terms and conditions."

Peach crop cut in half

This year's Illinois peach crop will be only about half of a normal harvest because of last winter's extreme cold, according to Dr. Daniel Meader, University of Illinois fruit specialist. "A normal peach crop in the state is around 500,000 bushels and if I were guessing, I'd say we'll have about half of that this year," Meador said in an interview. He said reports from and visits to peach growing areas in Illinois indicate many peach trees will not survive last winter's severe cold. The state had an estimated 227,000 peach trees in 1973.

Stocks plunge below 900 level

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones industrial average fell below the 900 level Friday for the first time in 16 months as the stock market suffered its fifth loss in six sessions. The trading pace was the second slowest of the year.

The Dow average dropped 9.24 points to 898.83, the lowest level since it finished at 898.69 on Jan. 7, 1976. The setback brought the Dow's loss for the week to 31.63 points, the second worst setback of the year. The closely watched average gained 4.83 points Thursday, snapping a five-day, 38.67-point slide.

Many analysts said the Dow's fall through the 900 level has jolted investors psychologically. The fall could produce further selling next week, much in the same way the Dow's climb through 1,000 last year produced some added buying.

TRENDSETTING Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, triggered the selloff when it boosted its prime a quarter point to 6¾ per cent. Many other major banks followed suit.

The Federal Reserve Board's recent credit tightening to stem a money supply surge in the past two months has led to the higher interest rates. The basic money supply climbed $1.4 billion in the latest week.

The prime is charged to top corporate borrowers, and many economists fear the increases in the benchmark rate could produce a third-quarter economic pause.

The 0.5 per cent rise in Commerce Department's April index of leading economic indicators was down from the gains of the previous two months.

THE NYSE COMMON stock index lost 0.37 to 52.68 and the average price of a common share decreased by 22 cents.

Declines topped advances by an eight-to-five margin among the 1,849 issues crossing the tape.

Big Board volume totaled 15,730,000 shares, down from the 18,620,000 traded Thursday. It was the second slowest turnover of the year. The market will be closed Monday for the Memorial Day holiday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. EDT totaled 17,463,900 shares, compared with 21,013,048 Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index lost 0.18 to 112.51 and the average price of a share shed three cents. Declines topped advances, 284 to 227, among the 818 issues traded. Volume at 4 p.m. EDT totaled 1,980,000 shares, compared with 1,950,000 Thursday.

A moderate index increase of 0.5% portends economic growth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government's barometer of future economic activity rose a moderate 0.5 per cent in April, an indication that the economy will show continued growth this summer, the Commerce Department said today.

The April rise in the Composite Index of Leading Indicators was considerably below the revised increases for February and March when the economy was recovering from the effects of severe winter weather.

However, a Commerce Department spokesman said the advance was still healthy.

"IT IS A PRETTY good increase," department economist Feliks Tamm said. He said the index for April would probably be revised upward when more complete data is available.

The department also said it had revised its increase for March from 1.4 per cent to 1.9 per cent, the biggest climb since a 2.3 per cent increase in July, 1975.

With the exception of 0.2 per cent declines in both April and September of last year and a 1.2 per cent decrease in January, the index nas increased in each month since February, 1975.

The index is supposed to foretell which direction the economy will move in the next three or four months. An increase suggests rising production at factories, mines and utilities and more promising opportunities for job seekers.

THE INDEX WAS put at 130.7 in April, 0.5 per cent higher than the revised March index of 130.0. The base year for figuring the gains is 1967, which is assigned the value of 100.

Four of the 10 indicators available for April increased, five declined and one was unchanged, the department said.

The biggest contributor to the increase was changes in sensitive prices, which advanced 0.5 per cent. Vendor performance, contracts and orders for plant and equipment and money balance also climbed.

The five areas showing declines were average workweek, total liquid assets, stock prices, new orders and building permits. The layoff rate was unchanged.

Wage keeping teens unemployed?

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK—An open letter to a teen-ager in search of a summer job:

Dear Friend: First, my condolences. You don't need me to tell you how tough it is to find a job this summer. There has been a lot of talk about the economy improving, but what good do upward squiggles on a graph do if you still can't find a job?

If it's any consolation, it's not some character defect of yours that keeps you from finding a job as easily as your folks think you should. In most of the country, teenagers are having problems finding not just summer jobs, but any job. You hear adults complain how "intolerable" the current national rate of unemployment is, but, in fact, the unemployment rate for teenagers is about three times as high (and twice that again if your skin is the wrong color). Let's face it: Teen-agers looking for jobs belong to a severely oppressed minority.

So you'll have to exercise your ingenuity — and perseverance — and you still may be out of luck for an aggravatingly long part of the season. In that case, what can you do, other than vowing to complete your education and establish the kind of vocational credentials that might help you avoid this hassle in the future?

Well, you can get all kinds of advice in this matter. Some parents may just get on your back and stay there; they were able to get jobs when they were teen-agers, they'll tell you. (And so they were: the unemployment rate for youths wasn't anywhere near as high a generation ago.) Some professors, or fellow students, may tell you that your job problem is symptomatic of a general failure of our economic system, and that the only answer is to picket and protest and demand radical changes in the way our society operates.

Well, sorry, but that's not the answer. The answer, I respectfully suggest, lies in what is different now from a generation ago: namely, the minimum wage. Until Congress started kicking the minimum wage geometrically upward two decades ago, there wasn't nearly as much difference between the unemployment rate for adults and the unemployment rate for teen-agers. And practically every time Congress increases the minimum, that gap grows.

So, what I am suggesting is that you demand to be allowed to work for less money. Am I heartless, or crazy? I don't think so. But to understand what I'm saying, you have to comprehend the difference between the minimum wage rate set by Congress and the actual wage you receive. If the former is so high that the latter becomes zero, you really haven't gained much, have you?

And your interest in finding a job is, both economically and humanly, the national interest, too.

What I suggest is that you write your Congressman and say something like this: "Hey, man, I'd rather be working at $2 an hour than unemployed at $2.30. And I know I'm not worth $2.30 yet in many of the jobs I might get. Please cut out this talk about making the situation worse by raising that $2.30 even higher, and think about giving us ambitious kids a break. Give us, at least, a lower minimum. Someday, I expect to be worth a heck of a lot more than $2.30 an hour, but I can't prove that if you keep me from finding a job now."

These Congressmen think you're pretty naive: that you won't realize that, in the guise of keeping wages high, they're actually keeping you unemployed. Let them know you really do want a job, and you're not as gullible as they think.

Good luck,
Louis Rukeyser

Soft drink drivers out on strike

Teamsters union members handling the most popular bottled soft drinks distributed around the Chicago area went on strike Friday at the beginning of the long Memorial Day weekend. The weekend is considered one of the most popular picknickers' weekends of the year and comes during a lengthening heat wave. On strike were 1,200 drivers and helpers of Teamsters Local 744 who rejected an offer on commissions for each case delivered, made by the Chicago Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages Thursday. The Teamsters immediately established picket lines that were expected to be honored by inside workers at local bottling plants.

CitiBank raises interest rate

CitiBank raised its interest rate for prime business loans again Friday — up one quarter of 1 per cent to 6.75 per cent. CitiBank led the way in raising the prime rate to 6.5 from 6.25 May 13. Most major banks followed suit in the succeeding days. The new increase in the prime had been expected because CitiBank sets its rate 1.5 percentage points above the latest three-week average of the commercial paper rate set by the Federal Reserve.

New fare on St. Louis flight

Delta Air Lines announced that it has filed a discounted $50 round-trip excursion fare for travel between Chicago's Midway Airport and St. Louis. The new fare, subject to Civil Aeronautics Board Approval, will be effective July 11. It would be a 39 per cent reduction from current coach fares between the two points.

Arabs threaten blacklisting U.S.

Ina clear reference to the United States, the Arab boycott of Israel head office Friday vowed to blacklist countries passing anti-boycott legislation and replace their products with those of Japan and West Europe. "Chambers of commerce, industry and agriculture in Kuwait, Syria, and Jordan have started to implement resolutions taken at the conference of Arab chambers of commerce, industry and agriculture held in Damascus May 15-21, said Mohammed Mahjoub, spokesman for the Syrian-based boycott office.

Japan business leaders to visit

Japan's top business leaders will seek a meeting with U.S. President Jimmy Carter to discuss energy, monetary and other economic issues during their scheduled trip to Washington next month, officials said Friday. Japan Federation of Economic Organization (Keidanren) Pres. Toshio Doko will lead Japan's delegation to the annual United States-Japan economic council meeting scheduled to be held June 15-18 in Washington.

A U.S. House bill to continue federal "war risk" insurance for airlines and to expand it to cover losses due to highjackings, riots and other perils was passed Friday by the Senate. The legislation was sent back to the House after it was amended to permit the Civil Aeronautics Board to pay a $240,172 subsidy to Air Midwest for an experimental local air service in cooperation with Frontier Airlines. A federal court, while not questioning the subsidy, held recently that the CAB handled it improperly by paying it to Air Midwest through Frontier. The bill, approved by routine voice vote, would extend an existing aviation war risk insurance program through Sept. 30, 1982. The insurance may be extended to air carriers for up to 60 days at a time during periods when commercial insurance is not available on "reasonable terms and conditions."

Peach crop cut in half

This year's Illinois peach crop will be only about half of a normal harvest because of last winter's extreme cold, according to Dr. Daniel Meader, University of Illinois fruit specialist. "A normal peach crop in the state is around 500,000 bushels and if I were guessing, I'd say we'll have about half of that this year," Meador said in an interview. He said reports from and visits to peach growing areas in Illinois indicate many peach trees will not survive last winter's severe cold. The state had an estimated 227,000 peach trees in 1973.

Stocks plunge below 900 level

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones industrial average fell below the 900 level Friday for the first time in 16 months as the stock market suffered its fifth loss in six sessions. The trading pace was the second slowest of the year.

The Dow average dropped 9.24 points to 898.83, the lowest level since it finished at 898.69 on Jan. 7, 1976. The setback brought the Dow's loss for the week to 31.63 points, the second worst setback of the year. The closely watched average gained 4.83 points Thursday, snapping a five-day, 38.67-point slide.

Many analysts said the Dow's fall through the 900 level has jolted investors psychologically. The fall could produce further selling next week, much in the same way the Dow's climb through 1,000 last year produced some added buying.

TRENDSETTING Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, triggered the selloff when it boosted its prime a quarter point to 6¾ per cent. Many other major banks followed suit.

The Federal Reserve Board's recent credit tightening to stem a money supply surge in the past two months has led to the higher interest rates. The basic money supply climbed $1.4 billion in the latest week.

The prime is charged to top corporate borrowers, and many economists fear the increases in the benchmark rate could produce a third-quarter economic pause.

THE NYSE COMMON stock index lost 0.37 to 52.68 and the average price of a common share decreased by 22 cents.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. EDT totaled 17,463,900 shares, compared with 21,013,048 Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index lost 0.18 to 112.51 and the average price of a share shed three cents. Declines topped advances, 284 to 227, among the 818 issues traded. Volume at 4 p.m. EDT totaled 1,980,000 shares, compared with 1,950,000 Thursday.

RTA expects U.S. funds in July for rail program

Regional Transportation Authority officials expect federal funds to be available by early July for a $47-million railroad rehabilitation program.

Area railroad officials, including those from the Chicago and North Western Ry. and the Milwaukee Road, turned out Friday to testify for the program. They said the rehabilitation work is desparately needed to avoid further deterioration of commuter rail services.

Testifying at a hearing for a federal grant, Harold Lensky of the North Western said the funds "are urgently required to maintain our existing level of service."

THE PROGRAM includes major track work and car renovation for the North Western as well as renovation of support facilities. The Milwaukee Road is slated for new commuter cars, major track repair and renovation of equipment.

The RTA hopes to get $37 million from the federal government for the project, with about $6 million coming from the state and $3 million from the RTA itself.

Railroad and transit officials also testified in favor of the RTA's plan to purchase the North Western's commuter cars and locomotives at a cost of nearly $21 million. The RTA also plans to purchase some equipment from the Rock Island R.R. as well as the assets of four privately owned suburban bus companies.

Barney Cunningham, head of the RTA's governmental grants department, said the purchase will remove the equipment from the tax rolls and will provide for regionwide control over equipment.

The RTA hopes to get $24 million from the federal government for the equipment purchase, matched by nearly $6 million in state funds and $118,000 in RTA money. The entire purchase will cost $30 million.

Foster named to MSD board

Unsuccessful Metropolitan Sanitary District Board candidate Delores Foster Thursday was appointed to that board to replace Joan Anderson.

Ms. Foster, who was defeated in her bid for a board seat last year, was named to the panel by Gov. James R. Thompson. The appointment was necessary because Thompson appointed Mrs. Anderson director of the Illinois Dept. of Registration and Education.

An aide to former Comptroller George Lindberg, Ms. Foster moved to Chicago in 1972 where she has been active in the Chicago Urban League and the NAACP.

In announcing the appointment, Thompson said he hoped Ms. Foster would seek to retain the post in the next election.

Suburban officials had been boosting the candidacy of another unsuccessful MSD candidate, William Griffith of Arlington Heights. They voiced concerns over the lack of suburban representation on the MSD board which now has only one suburban member.

Tom Alesia wins Herald contest

Tom Alesia of Mount Prospect submitted the most accurate guess of 30,849. Other winners included Gordon Bayless, Arlington Heights; Tom Carter, Arlington Heights; Matt Caviolo, Palatine; Larry Eldred, Elk Grove Village; John Franson, Mount Prospect; Allen Jacobs, Arlington Heights; Ed Hinrichs, Arlington Heights; Kris Knack, Buffalo Grove; Duane Peterson, Arlington Heights; J. R. Radzik, Palatine; and Irwin Schwartz, Rolling Meadows.

The numbers on several contest entries were extreme. One entrant decided 3,000 fans would come out to the park, while other predictions ran into the 60,000s.

RTA expects U.S. funds in July for rail program

Regional Transportation Authority officials expect federal funds to be available by early July for a $47-million railroad rehabilitation program.

Area railroad officials, including those from the Chicago and North Western Ry. and the Milwaukee Road, turned out Friday to testify for the program. They said the rehabilitation work is desparately needed to avoid further deterioration of commuter rail services.

Testifying at a hearing for a federal grant, Harold Lensky of the North Western said the funds "are urgently required to maintain our existing level of service."

THE PROGRAM includes major track work and car renovation for the North Western as well as renovation of support facilities. The Milwaukee Road is slated for new commuter cars, major track repair and renovation of equipment.

The RTA hopes to get $37 million from the federal government for the project, with about $6 million coming from the state and $3 million from the RTA itself.

Railroad and transit officials also testified in favor of the RTA's plan to purchase the North Western's commuter cars and locomotives at a cost of nearly $21 million. The RTA also plans to purchase some equipment from the Rock Island R.R. as well as the assets of four privately owned suburban bus companies.

Barney Cunningham, head of the RTA's governmental grants department, said the purchase will remove the equipment from the tax rolls and will provide for regionwide control over equipment.

The RTA hopes to get $24 million from the federal government for the equipment purchase, matched by nearly $6 million in state funds and $118,000 in RTA money. The entire purchase will cost $30 million.

Foster named to MSD board

Unsuccessful Metropolitan Sanitary District Board candidate Delores Foster Thursday was appointed to that board to replace Joan Anderson.

Ms. Foster, who was defeated in her bid for a board seat last year, was named to the panel by Gov. James R. Thompson. The appointment was necessary because Thompson appointed Mrs. Anderson director of the Illinois Dept. of Registration and Education.

An aide to former Comptroller George Lindberg, Ms. Foster moved to Chicago in 1972 where she has been active in the Chicago Urban League and the NAACP.

In announcing the appointment, Thompson said he hoped Ms. Foster would seek to retain the post in the next election.

Suburban officials had been boosting the candidacy of another unsuccessful MSD candidate, William Griffith of Arlington Heights. They voiced concerns over the lack of suburban representation on the MSD board which now has only one suburban member.

Tom Alesia wins Herald contest

Tom Alesia of Mount Prospect submitted the most accurate guess of 30,849. Other winners included Gordon Bayless, Arlington Heights; Tom Carter, Arlington Heights; Matt Caviolo, Palatine; Larry Eldred, Elk Grove Village; John Franson, Mount Prospect; Allen Jacobs, Arlington Heights; Ed Hinrichs, Arlington Heights; Kris Knack, Buffalo Grove; Duane Peterson, Arlington Heights; J. R. Radzik, Palatine; and Irwin Schwartz, Rolling Meadows.

The numbers on several contest entries were extreme. One entrant decided 3,000 fans would come out to the park, while other predictions ran into the 60,000s.

At 6, Jason is just learning to live

by ROBERT CAREY

TEXARKANA, Ark. (UPI) — Jason White, 6, handsome, husky and blue-eyed with brown cornsilk hair, looks out his bedroom window, thinking, probably, how nice it would be to play outside in the sunshine again.

But for now he must wait. He sits in his chair in front of his little desk, his hands folded, patient and resigned. His eyes, made bluer and more luminous by recent tears, are calm now.

His cheeks, so round, are tinged with pink, flushed from outdoor play in the fort they built for him in the front yard, from riding his bike and from throwing and catching the ball that swings from a rope tied to a limb on his old maple tree.

Above him in his room, on a metal stand partially obscured by the headboard on his bed, the clear plastic bag of golden parential hyperalimentation fluid has been reattached once more. Soon he must leave the unrestrained world of play and hook up to his life-supporting tube.

THE TUBE, connected to the base of the bag, drains slowly into the unit which forces it through an extension tubing about 6 feet long. The extension tubing fastens to a third tube in turn connected to the silicone elastomer central venous catheter protruding about three inches from an incision in Jason's chest.

Tubing an eighth of an inch in diameter is inserted into Jason's subclavion vein, threaded into the superior vena cava and finally rests in the right atrium of his heart.

The total hyperalimentation solution of amino acids, sugars, vitamins and minerals ingested into him in this way has sustained life for Jason White since infancy when a rare syndrome refused to let his body digest food taken orally. Each time he tried to digest even the smallest bit of cracker, it would trigger hours of wracking vomiting and diarrhea.

He was literally starving to death when the hyperalimentation process was begun. For three and a half years he was on it 24 hours a day. He practiced walking with the ever present golden bag of fluids swinging above him, affixed to a stand equipped with rollers. He could even ride a tricycle with it attached.

"He really should not be alive," said one doctor familiar with the case. And, indeed, many times death was near.

TODAY HE IS in the best health ever, attends kindergarten, can eat small amounts of most any food with usually no bad consequences, stays off the apparatus for hours at a time, and in a recent IQ test scored 137, denoting superior intelligence.

There is growing hope that Jason the child will live to be Jason the man.

"We're still not out of the woods," said Dr. Jon Hall, a pediatrician, who has been Jason's main doctor since initiating the intravenous feeding when Jason was 2. "But it has been an exciting year. He is just a little miracle child."

But medical miracles cost enormous amounts of money and can financially devastate a family.

Such is the case of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. White, the parents of Jason, who likely will never in their lifetimes, short of massive public charity, climb out of the debt into which Jason's illness dug and continues to dig them.

"That's a fair observation," said Dr. Hall, who long since quit charging them for his services. "It is," he said, pausing to think of the right words, "not fair.

"There's something wrong with a system that forces people into bankruptcy before they can get free medical care."

JASON WHITE was born Oct. 14, 1970, at Hope, Ark., the first and only child of Ed and Cindy White. There was little unusual to note at the time except Jason was bigger (9 lbs. 1 oz.) and better looking than most babies.

A proud father's first words recorded in his baby book were, "He's a beautiful boy." And the first thing his mother wanted to know was if he had all his fingers and toes.

Those were all there but another problem developed slowly, one that was not to become fully apparent until Jason was more than a year old. It went all but unnoticed in the first few months of his life.

Jason kept spitting up his formula, not unusual in infants, and was having trouble with diarrhea. Still, he gained weight and grew normally. But the trouble persisted and gradually worsened.

When Jason was 18 months old, it was recommended a pediatrician take a look at him and since there were none in Hope, Mrs. White picked the name of Dr. Hall out of the Texarkana phone book. Texarkana, 30 miles southwest of Hope, was the closest city that had a pediatrician.

Dr. Hall found Jason to be hypersecreting digestive fluids which were potentially so acid they might eat through his stomach walls. As it was, intake of the slightest amount of food orally set off vomiting and diarrhea. Sometimes the symptoms appeared without eating.

JASON'S CONDITION deteriorated. "Skin and bones," Dr. Hall said. So it was decided to insert the catheter and begin full-time intravenous feeding. Dr. Robert Bransford, a Texarkana surgeon, with Dr. Hall assisting, performed the operation and on March 29, 1973, Jason was placed on hyperalimentation. He was not quite 2½ years old.

"For the first nine months he grew faster and was larger than most children his age," Dr. Hall said. "He thrived on it." Then, inexplicably, Jason began to slide downhill again, beginning a familiar pattern that continues moderately to this day.

Periods of good health would be followed by periods of bad; he would lose weight, his system seemingly rejecting the hyperalimentation solution. He would gradually grow more and more listless, sleep more, become almost comatose and near death.

Then, just as mysteriously, he would begin to recover, gain weight, become livelier and soon be, as Mrs. Norman Cochran, Dr. Hall's nurse, described him, "so full of energy he just bubbles."

Otherwise healthy, Jason is an engaging, adorable child. He has an almost political knack of remembering everybody's name, and simply charms whomever he meets, including all the doctors and nurses who have worked with him.

IN FEBRUARY 1974 after extensive testing at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston, Jason underwent a gastrectomy, removal of most of his stomach. The medical thinking was that if food could bypass the stomach and go straight to the small intestine, then maybe the destructive hyperacidity could be circumvented. Jason might subsist on several small meals a day and be weaned, for the most part, from the hyperalimentation.

The operation, initially at least, seemed to make little difference in Jason's boom and bust cycles. Jason returned from Houston to his room at Wadley and they continued.

The nadir arrived in July 1975 when Jason lay semi-comatose for days, his bones actually showing some of the signs of deterioration found in the very elderly. Twice the family made funeral preparatinns. But Jason lingered on, refusing to die.

Dr. Hall said it became so hopeless and Jason was in such pain that they unhooked him from the hyperalimentation "to let him die in peace." But, Dr. Hall said, "he began to realize something was wrong, that he was not getting what he was supposed to. He started crying, wanting to be put back on. It is one thing to let a child die in peace, but . . ." He shakes his head slowly. There are no words. They hooked him back up.

Jason rallied again. This time improvement was steady and the bad spells less frequent and less severe. In February 1976 they decided to send Jason home, hyperalimentation apparatus, bags, pump, medication and all. And that's where he is today.

In 1973, the Hope Lions Club raised $27,598.20, much of it contributions of $10, $20 and $50, according to Royce Pendergrass, Lions Club president. The last of that money was spent this year.

In January 1974, after the Whites moved to Texarkana, the Commercial National Bank of Texarkana opened a Jason White fund. Contributions, most of them in the beginning, totaled $4,351.43 as of April 1. The bank balance on that date was $4.82.

One bag of the hyperalimentation fluid costs $36.50 from the pharmacy at Wadley Hospital. Jason averages about one a day (down from three a day when he was on it full-time) during the week and sometimes two bags a day on the weekend when he is resting or on bad days when he is sick. These costs average close to $1,400 per month.

Jason is prescribed 21 separate medications, many of them antibiotics because the incision in his chest makes him susceptible to infection. The three main antibiotics and their monthly costs are: straphcillin, $504; polycillin, $252; and erthromycin, $171. Those alone total more than Ed White's salary for the period.

BRIGHT SUNSHINE dapples the maple trees along Locust Avenue and budding maple seedlings pull loose in the light breeze, spinning down on winglike leaves. Yellow jonquil beds are in bloom, and purple hyancinths spring wild in patches along the curbing.

A small face appears in the window facing the front porch at 1106 Locust following a knock on the door.

The door bolts open and the little fellow doing the opening speaks right up. "Come on in," he says, "My mom will be here in a minute."

He claps his hands together briskly several times. "Come on and sit down," he says. He is excited, happy to see company. He darts into his room and out again with an armful of stuffed animals.

He introduces the menagerie, laying them in the visitor's lap: "That's Croaky the frog. This one is Cheetah (a monkey), and Tom (a dog), and this one's Barney (a rabbit). They all sleep with me."

Cindy White comes in, smiles and says hello. "He won't go to bed without them," she says.

BUT JASON WANTS to talk.

"I used to be real sick," he says "Did you know that?" Yes, the visitor knew. Jason strikes a body-building pose, flexing and making a muscle in his right arm. "My muscles haven't formed up yet."

If they haven't it doesn't show. For here stands as bright and bubbly a 6-year-old as one is apt to find anywhere.

Jason strides to the front door where a miniature bicycle with training wheels attached is parked. He peddles it across the living room. "Be careful," his mother warns. Jason wants to go outside. O.K., says his mother and he is out the door and gone.

"He's just hyper when we take him off the tube," she says. "I took him off just before you got here. He didn't have a very good night and he didn't go to school today."

Outside Jason clambers over to the fort, built something like a bunk bed, a sandbox on the lower deck and wood flooring on the second story set behind 12-inch high wooden walls. He climbs his stepladder. Plenty of room up there for a fellow to crouch down and watch out for Indians or enemy soldiers.

He climbs down again and bounds away down the sidewalk, stopping by a bed of clover blossoms to pick some. If his movements seem only the slightest bit rusty, it's because the visitor knows.

BACK COMES Jason. He presents his mom with a bouquet and then climbs into a thick-limbed scrub bush growing by the maple tree. He is humming and singing a little tuneless song, words and music by Jason White.

"You can't find me," he calls out from inside the bush. And sure enough the visitor has a hard time, his efforts drawing barrages of giggles from the object of his search.

"Sometimes he gets to feeling a little sorry for himself, but he does pretty well, Cindy says. "I never think that he may actually grow up some day. I just take it on a day-to-day basis. That's the only way you can take it. We really enjoy having him at home."

In the six years of her son's life, Mrs. White has spent the night away from his once, when her own father died. This includes all the time Jason was in the hospital. She had a bed made up in his room.

Later, Ed comes home from work. It gets late and it's time for the visitor to leave. He wants to say goodby to Jason. All three go inside to where the little fellow is seated at his desk.

"I'm working very, very hard," he says. "I'm making a bracelet for my teacher." He holds up a scalloped paper ring. Very nice, says the visitor. Beautiful, says his mother.

Jason reaches behind him for a second and then tells the visitor, "I've got a surprise for you." What is it? "Come over here close by me." The visitor complies. "Shake hands," he says. The visitor spots the little toy buzzer Jason is trying to conceal in his palm and solemnly reaches out his hand anyway.

"Holy smoke," cries the visitor in mock terror, shaking his hand and blowing on it. Jason doubles up with giggles, the laughter filling the small bedroom.

And there it is again, that word, in everybody's eyes: love.

Sweden offers more than sympathy

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — When illness strikes a family in Sweden they receive more than sympathy. They get help.

Bengt and Hannie Orne are typical

The Ornes' youngest child, Hanneke, 15, was born with severe physical handicaps and has required extraordinary medical attention all her life. But because of Sweden's comprehensive system of social insurance and health care benefits, Haneke's medical care has not even made a dent in the family budget.

"No one in Sweden today has gone bankrupt because of a handicapped child," Mrs. Orne said.

"You get help in every way."

Hanneke has no thumbs, the muscles controlling lateral movement of her eyes as well as the part of the middle ear that regulates baiance have been paralyzed since birth. Her forearms are weaker than normal.

HANNEKE, LIKE all Swedish-born children, is entitled to free state medical and dental care. County authorities pay for her eyeglasses. The maximum charge each time she must go to a pharmacist for drugs prescribed by a doctor, no matter what the quantity, is $5 (20 kronor).

Until she was 18 months old, Hanneke had to sleep with corrective braces on her arms. She needed a helmet — "like those used by ice hockey players," her father said — to protect herself from falls until she learned how to balance. She needed a training bicycle and two special bicycles. They were all free.

National Health insurance also paid for the manual typewriter she uses to strengthen ner fingers.

Hanneke was offered a free electric typewriter to use at school, but she refused because she did not want to use something different from the other children in the classroom.

A state handicap allowance pays for the physical therapist who visits Hanneke at home.

THE ORNES know a couple whose house had to be remodeled to accommodate their child who was born without legs. The total cost was paid from public funds.

The state pays every mother in Sweden the equivalent of $429 a year as "child allowance" for each child under 17.

In addition to their own paid sick leave, Swedish parents employed outside the home are entitled to 12 days paid leave of absence to stay home and care for a sick child, 15 days for two children and 18 for three or more.

Special assistance is available if the child is chronically ill or requires professional care at home. Good institutional care in public hospitals or nursing homes is free.

But the Swedish health system is not perfect. Mrs. Orne has some minor criticisms.

"There are still some doctors who feel superior, instead of as though they belong to a big team, a service group," she said. "And sometimes you have to wait to see a specialist.

"But 90 per cent of the time, I think it is one of the best systems in the world."

At 6, Jason is just learning to live

by ROBERT CAREY

TEXARKANA, Ark. (UPI) — Jason White, 6, handsome, husky and blue-eyed with brown cornsilk hair, looks out his bedroom window, thinking, probably, how nice it would be to play outside in the sunshine again.

But for now he must wait. He sits in his chair in front of his little desk, his hands folded, patient and resigned. His eyes, made bluer and more luminous by recent tears, are calm now.

His cheeks, so round, are tinged with pink, flushed from outdoor play in the fort they built for him in the front yard, from riding his bike and from throwing and catching the ball that swings from a rope tied to a limb on his old maple tree.

Above him in his room, on a metal stand partially obscured by the headboard on his bed, the clear plastic bag of golden parential hyperalimentation fluid has been reattached once more. Soon he must leave the unrestrained world of play and hook up to his life-supporting tube.

THE TUBE, connected to the base of the bag, drains slowly into the unit which forces it through an extension tubing about 6 feet long. The extension tubing fastens to a third tube in turn connected to the silicone elastomer central venous catheter protruding about three inches from an incision in Jason's chest.

Tubing an eighth of an inch in diameter is inserted into Jason's subclavion vein, threaded into the superior vena cava and finally rests in the right atrium of his heart.

The total hyperalimentation solution of amino acids, sugars, vitamins and minerals ingested into him in this way has sustained life for Jason White since infancy when a rare syndrome refused to let his body digest food taken orally. Each time he tried to digest even the smallest bit of cracker, it would trigger hours of wracking vomiting and diarrhea.

He was literally starving to death when the hyperalimentation process was begun. For three and a half years he was on it 24 hours a day. He practiced walking with the ever present golden bag of fluids swinging above him, affixed to a stand equipped with rollers. He could even ride a tricycle with it attached.

"He really should not be alive," said one doctor familiar with the case. And, indeed, many times death was near.

TODAY HE IS in the best health ever, attends kindergarten, can eat small amounts of most any food with usually no bad consequences, stays off the apparatus for hours at a time, and in a recent IQ test scored 137, denoting superior intelligence.

There is growing hope that Jason the child will live to be Jason the man.

"We're still not out of the woods," said Dr. Jon Hall, a pediatrician, who has been Jason's main doctor since initiating the intravenous feeding when Jason was 2. "But it has been an exciting year. He is just a little miracle child."

But medical miracles cost enormous amounts of money and can financially devastate a family.

Such is the case of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. White, the parents of Jason, who likely will never in their lifetimes, short of massive public charity, climb out of the debt into which Jason's illness dug and continues to dig them.

"That's a fair observation," said Dr. Hall, who long since quit charging them for his services. "It is," he said, pausing to think of the right words, "not fair.

"There's something wrong with a system that forces people into bankruptcy before they can get free medical care."

JASON WHITE was born Oct. 14, 1970, at Hope, Ark., the first and only child of Ed and Cindy White. There was little unusual to note at the time except Jason was bigger (9 lbs. 1 oz.) and better looking than most babies.

A proud father's first words recorded in his baby book were, "He's a beautiful boy." And the first thing his mother wanted to know was if he had all his fingers and toes.

Those were all there but another problem developed slowly, one that was not to become fully apparent until Jason was more than a year old. It went all but unnoticed in the first few months of his life.

Jason kept spitting up his formula, not unusual in infants, and was having trouble with diarrhea. Still, he gained weight and grew normally. But the trouble persisted and gradually worsened.

When Jason was 18 months old, it was recommended a pediatrician take a look at him and since there were none in Hope, Mrs. White picked the name of Dr. Hall out of the Texarkana phone book. Texarkana, 30 miles southwest of Hope, was the closest city that had a pediatrician.

Dr. Hall found Jason to be hypersecreting digestive fluids which were potentially so acid they might eat through his stomach walls. As it was, intake of the slightest amount of food orally set off vomiting and diarrhea. Sometimes the symptoms appeared without eating.

JASON'S CONDITION deteriorated. "Skin and bones," Dr. Hall said. So it was decided to insert the catheter and begin full-time intravenous feeding. Dr. Robert Bransford, a Texarkana surgeon, with Dr. Hall assisting, performed the operation and on March 29, 1973, Jason was placed on hyperalimentation. He was not quite 2½ years old.

"For the first nine months he grew faster and was larger than most children his age," Dr. Hall said. "He thrived on it." Then, inexplicably, Jason began to slide downhill again, beginning a familiar pattern that continues moderately to this day.

Periods of good health would be followed by periods of bad; he would lose weight, his system seemingly rejecting the hyperalimentation solution. He would gradually grow more and more listless, sleep more, become almost comatose and near death.

Then, just as mysteriously, he would begin to recover, gain weight, become livelier and soon be, as Mrs. Norman Cochran, Dr. Hall's nurse, described him, "so full of energy he just bubbles."

Otherwise healthy, Jason is an engaging, adorable child. He has an almost political knack of remembering everybody's name, and simply charms whomever he meets, including all the doctors and nurses who have worked with him.

IN FEBRUARY 1974 after extensive testing at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston, Jason underwent a gastrectomy, removal of most of his stomach. The medical thinking was that if food could bypass the stomach and go straight to the small intestine, then maybe the destructive hyperacidity could be circumvented. Jason might subsist on several small meals a day and be weaned, for the most part, from the hyperalimentation.

The operation, initially at least, seemed to make little difference in Jason's boom and bust cycles. Jason returned from Houston to his room at Wadley and they continued.

The nadir arrived in July 1975 when Jason lay semi-comatose for days, his bones actually showing some of the signs of deterioration found in the very elderly. Twice the family made funeral preparatinns. But Jason lingered on, refusing to die.

Dr. Hall said it became so hopeless and Jason was in such pain that they unhooked him from the hyperalimentation "to let him die in peace." But, Dr. Hall said, "he began to realize something was wrong, that he was not getting what he was supposed to. He started crying, wanting to be put back on. It is one thing to let a child die in peace, but . . ." He shakes his head slowly. There are no words. They hooked him back up.

Jason rallied again. This time improvement was steady and the bad spells less frequent and less severe. In February 1976 they decided to send Jason home, hyperalimentation apparatus, bags, pump, medication and all. And that's where he is today.

In 1973, the Hope Lions Club raised $27,598.20, much of it contributions of $10, $20 and $50, according to Royce Pendergrass, Lions Club president. The last of that money was spent this year.

In January 1974, after the Whites moved to Texarkana, the Commercial National Bank of Texarkana opened a Jason White fund. Contributions, most of them in the beginning, totaled $4,351.43 as of April 1. The bank balance on that date was $4.82.

One bag of the hyperalimentation fluid costs $36.50 from the pharmacy at Wadley Hospital. Jason averages about one a day (down from three a day when he was on it full-time) during the week and sometimes two bags a day on the weekend when he is resting or on bad days when he is sick. These costs average close to $1,400 per month.

Jason is prescribed 21 separate medications, many of them antibiotics because the incision in his chest makes him susceptible to infection. The three main antibiotics and their monthly costs are: straphcillin, $504; polycillin, $252; and erthromycin, $171. Those alone total more than Ed White's salary for the period.

BRIGHT SUNSHINE dapples the maple trees along Locust Avenue and budding maple seedlings pull loose in the light breeze, spinning down on winglike leaves. Yellow jonquil beds are in bloom, and purple hyancinths spring wild in patches along the curbing.

A small face appears in the window facing the front porch at 1106 Locust following a knock on the door.

The door bolts open and the little fellow doing the opening speaks right up. "Come on in," he says, "My mom will be here in a minute."

He claps his hands together briskly several times. "Come on and sit down," he says. He is excited, happy to see company. He darts into his room and out again with an armful of stuffed animals.

He introduces the menagerie, laying them in the visitor's lap: "That's Croaky the frog. This one is Cheetah (a monkey), and Tom (a dog), and this one's Barney (a rabbit). They all sleep with me."

Cindy White comes in, smiles and says hello. "He won't go to bed without them," she says.

BUT JASON WANTS to talk.

"I used to be real sick," he says "Did you know that?" Yes, the visitor knew. Jason strikes a body-building pose, flexing and making a muscle in his right arm. "My muscles haven't formed up yet."

If they haven't it doesn't show. For here stands as bright and bubbly a 6-year-old as one is apt to find anywhere.

Jason strides to the front door where a miniature bicycle with training wheels attached is parked. He peddles it across the living room. "Be careful," his mother warns. Jason wants to go outside. O.K., says his mother and he is out the door and gone.

"He's just hyper when we take him off the tube," she says. "I took him off just before you got here. He didn't have a very good night and he didn't go to school today."

Outside Jason clambers over to the fort, built something like a bunk bed, a sandbox on the lower deck and wood flooring on the second story set behind 12-inch high wooden walls. He climbs his stepladder. Plenty of room up there for a fellow to crouch down and watch out for Indians or enemy soldiers.

He climbs down again and bounds away down the sidewalk, stopping by a bed of clover blossoms to pick some. If his movements seem only the slightest bit rusty, it's because the visitor knows.

BACK COMES Jason. He presents his mom with a bouquet and then climbs into a thick-limbed scrub bush growing by the maple tree. He is humming and singing a little tuneless song, words and music by Jason White.

"You can't find me," he calls out from inside the bush. And sure enough the visitor has a hard time, his efforts drawing barrages of giggles from the object of his search.

"Sometimes he gets to feeling a little sorry for himself, but he does pretty well, Cindy says. "I never think that he may actually grow up some day. I just take it on a day-to-day basis. That's the only way you can take it. We really enjoy having him at home."

In the six years of her son's life, Mrs. White has spent the night away from his once, when her own father died. This includes all the time Jason was in the hospital. She had a bed made up in his room.

Later, Ed comes home from work. It gets late and it's time for the visitor to leave. He wants to say goodby to Jason. All three go inside to where the little fellow is seated at his desk.

"I'm working very, very hard," he says. "I'm making a bracelet for my teacher." He holds up a scalloped paper ring. Very nice, says the visitor. Beautiful, says his mother.

Jason reaches behind him for a second and then tells the visitor, "I've got a surprise for you." What is it? "Come over here close by me." The visitor complies. "Shake hands," he says. The visitor spots the little toy buzzer Jason is trying to conceal in his palm and solemnly reaches out his hand anyway.

"Holy smoke," cries the visitor in mock terror, shaking his hand and blowing on it. Jason doubles up with giggles, the laughter filling the small bedroom.

And there it is again, that word, in everybody's eyes: love.

Cubs win again, close in on Pittsburgh

by JEFF NORDLUND

The Sultans of Swipe, once referred to as the Pittsburgh Pirates, came to Wrigley Field Friday with the advanced billing they'd steal everything but the clubhouse towels.

The trouble was no one told Bill Bonham, who threw eight innings well enough to keep most of the Pirates off the bases, and George Mitterwald, who threw a couple base thieves out.

With some ninth-inning help from Bruce Sutter, the Cubs topped Tanner's Traveling Track Team, 4-2, to move within half a game of the division leaders.

MANNY TRILLO and Bobby Murcer powered solo home runs to account for the go-ahead and eventual winning runs, and Bonham and Sutter stopped the Bucs on six hits.

None other an authority than Cubs manager Herman Franks complimented the 24-year-old Sutter, who is in just his second season in the major leagues.

"He's the best relief pitcher I've seen in my 45 years in baseball," Franks, who has seen a lot of relief pitchers, said. "He's got a forkball that explodes."

A Pittsburgh writer asked Franks if Sutter is even better than the Bucs' all-time great reliever Elroy Face, who also threw the forkball.

"Better," Franks said.

FRIDAY'S CONTEST was the North Siders' first look this season at Pittsburgh. It left several of the Cubs respectful but not in awe.

"They've got some big sticks," conceded Franks. "And they run like rabbits, or deer or gazelles — or whatever you want to call them. You've got to get out the rope with them around."

Franks had the rope in the person of Mitterwald who put the Pirates on a short leash by shooting down the first two would-be base stealers of the game, Phil Garner in the second and Rennie Stennett in the fifth.

FRANK TAVERAS in the sixth finally stole a base, but remembering that the Bucs grabbed six bases against the Dodgers May 22 and that they lead the league with 79 successful heists, the single theft was a Cubs' morale-booster.

"The Pirates really are a different ball club this season," Mitterwald said. "Last year, they never ran. This year, you don't know who's going to run.

"We were told they like to run on the first pitch, so I called about four or five pitch-outs. That was our game plan. We wanted to keep them close to the base, too, so we threw a lot of pick-off throws to first base."

All didn't begin so efficiently for the Cubs when in the second inning Gene Oliver, Stennett and Garner singled off Bonham. The final hit drove in Oliver, leaving men on first and third with one out.

BONHAM AND Mitterwald extricated the Cubs from the tight situation when catcher Duffy Dyer fanned and Garner was nailed trying to steal second on the same pitch.

The Cubs pulled ahead in the fourth when Jerry Morales, who was out trying for second on the play, singled home Larry Biittner. Trillo followed with a homer, his fourth, against the wind.

Oliver doubled in Parker with the tying run in the Pirates' sixth, but Murcer followed with his seventh homer of the season just inside the right field foul pole to push the Cubs ahead in the bottom of the same inning.

That drove Pirate starter John Candelaria from the mound, and the lanky left-hander eventually was tagged for his first loss of the season after six victories.

EX-WHITE SOX Terry Forster, relieving in the eighth, was nicked for the Cubs' final run when Morales tripled home Biittner.

Sutter struck out two Pirates in the ninth while giving up a one-out single to Stennett in earning his 12th save.

Arlington's Wei, doubles team in tennis semifinals

by VIC NOVAK

Arlington High School is not only the site, but also the last hope for area athletes in today's state boys tennis tournament. Arlington's Paul Wei, Bob Pionke and Mike Doering all qualified for the 9 a.m. semifinals. If they win, they'll play in the championship finals at 1 p.m.

The Arlington trio advanced by winning their fourth, fifth, and quarterfinal-round matches at the various Dist. 214 high schools Friday.

Singles competitor Wei beat New Trier East's Niel Golden 6-4 twice, Belleville East's Darrell Smith 7-5, 7-6; and Libertyville's Kreg Yingst 6-1, 6-4. Yingst, like Wei, was one of the top singles seeds.

WEI OPENS TODAY against another high-ranked player, Highland Park's Matt Horwitch. Horwitch, the defending state boys singles champion, was seeded No. 1 for this year's tourney.

Arlington coach Tom Pitchford explained only Paul's best play will move past Horwitch into the finals. "Wei played the best tennis of his life against Yingst and will have to play that way Saturday," said Pitchford.

Teammates Pionke and Doering also won three times Friday. They upended Peoria Richwood's Jim Tinthoff and Randy Rieman, 7-5, 7-5; York's Andy Seils and Bob Erickson 6-2, 5-7, 6-3; and Danville's Alan Krapf and Tom Simpson 6-4, 5-7, and 6-3.

Pitchford believes Doering and Pionke are also playing their best tennis ever and must continue at that level today. "Doering and Pionke are reaching their peak and will have to be at that peak tomorrow (Saturday)," said Pitchford.

THEY'LL HAVE to keep that peak, because the Arlington boys face the No. 1 seeded doubles team — Hinsdale Central's Tom Lockhart and Fritz Ballantine.

No matter what Arlington or any other team does, Hinsdale Central has already clinched its sixth straight state championship and 12th over-all.

After Friday's action, Hinsdale's 23 points topped Oak Park's 17, Arlington's 16½, New Trier East's 14½, Aurora West's 13½, Highland Park's 12½, Forest View's 11, and Homewood-Flossmoor's 9½.

Stevenson singles player Bill Heiser and Forest View doubles team of Steve Calderone and Nick Kekos missed the semifinals.

HEISER LOST his quarterfinal match to Oak Park's second-seeded Bruce Brescia, 7-6, 6-2. Bill was tied at 2-2 in the second match, but then suffered leg cramps. Although he recovered, his play was not the same.

Before that match, Heiser, only a junior, had beaten Maine East's Norm Peterson 6-3, 6-4 and Naperville North's Ron Kowal, 6-2, 6-3.

Calderone and Kekos fell in the quarterfinal title match to Aurora West's Dave Bilstrom and Joe Daw, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

The Forest View pair advanced by defeating Danville's Steve Dindley and Brian McDonald 6-3, 2-6, 6-4. Rich Central's Bruce Wilding and Dave Vergara then lost to Calderone and Kekos, 6-4, 7-6.

Hot weather poses '500' obstacle

by BOB GALLAS

INDIANAPOLIS — Heat, speed and the ability to weave through heavy traffic will be the keys Sunday in the 61st running of the richest automobile race in the world, The Indianapolis 500.

Temperatures in the 90s with high humidity are forecast, meaning a slippery track will be in store here for the 33 drivers whose average speed, 189.488 miles-per-hour, is six miles-per-hour faster than last year.

The battle in heavy traffic for the early lead is expected to be hotter than usual. Six cars were clocked at speeds better than 190-miles-per-hour during the final day of practice Thursday. But the real test of driving skill will come for defending Indy champ Johnny Rutherford, whose car has the speed to win the race. However Rutherford must come from the middle of the pack, starting in the middle of the sixth row.

RUTHERFORD posted the third best qualifying speed, 197.325 miles-per-hour, but failed to qualify on opening day of trials so he was delegated to the sixth row. The popular driver is used to weeding his way through heavy traffic, though.

Rutherford won the 1974 race when he started in the ninth row, passing 22 cars on the first 10 laps and taking the lead on lap 65. Last year, he won the shortest race in Indy history, 255 miles.

There are a number of other favorites for Sunday's classic. Bobby and Al Unser, both former Indy winners, will share the front with polesitter Tom Sneva, who set a one-lap record speed in qualifying of 200.535 miles-per-hour and also posted the best four-lap average speed of 198.884.

Three more former winners hold down the second row, A. J. Foyt, Gordon Johncock and Mario Andretti, with Foyt going for an unprecedented fourth win on the 2½-mile oval.

SEVEN ROOKIES will be in the field tomorrow with Janet Guthrie attracting the most attention. The 39-year-old Miss Guthrie became the first woman ever to make the field by posting a qualifying speed of 188.403, which put her in the middle of the ninth row.

Danny Ongais was the fastest rookie, posting a 193.040 speed that put him on the inside of the third row. Another rookie of note is Clay Regazzoni, a veteran of International Formula I competition from Switzerland, who will be way back in the middle of the 10th row.

An estimated 350,000 are expected to cram the 2½-mile oval to see the drivers vie for more than $1-million in prizes. But few expect to see speeds in the 190s.

EACH CAR IS permitted only 280 gallons of fuel and any driver trying to run flat out could find himself out of gas by the end of the race.

The heat is also expected to take some of the power away from the machines, which run best in cooler temperatures. If temperatures do make the 90s Sunday, the track temperature could reach 130 degrees.

The traditional drivers' meeting will get under way at 11 a.m. (CST) today as race entrants will get their final instructions before the race.

The track will open at 5 a.m. with pre-race festivities scheduled for 8 a.m. and the race itself for 11 a.m. (CST).

The complete '500' lineup for Sunday appears in today's Scoreboard.

THE QUIET of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway will be broken Sunday as the 61st running of the richest race in the world gets underway at 11 a.m. (CST). The starting field, which is six miles-an-hour faster than last year, will be headed by polesitter Tom Sneva. Defending champ Johnny Rutherford will have to battle from the middle of the sixth row.

Swift show for West's track star

by ART MUGALIAN

CHARLESTON — Tony Krainik, Maine West's thoroughbred race horse, sprouted wings here Friday in the IHSA Class AA track and field championships and, like Pegasus, is on the verge of flying clear out of sight.

The fleet Warrior senior turned the AA prelims into a personal sprint to glory, clocking the day's fastest times in the 100-yard dash and the 220. Krainik will attempt to double in both events in the finals today, having chose to pass up the 440 where he had run a 48.9 district time.

After Stan Hawkins of East St. Louis Lincoln had set a new AA record of 21.61 in the first heat of the 220, Krainik rewrote the record book with a 21.60 to win in his heat. Earlier, the Maine West runner ripped off a 9.69 in the 100.

Cubs win again, close in on Pittsburgh

by JEFF NORDLUND

The Sultans of Swipe, once referred to as the Pittsburgh Pirates, came to Wrigley Field Friday with the advanced billing they'd steal everything but the clubhouse towels.

The trouble was no one told Bill Bonham, who threw eight innings well enough to keep most of the Pirates off the bases, and George Mitterwald, who threw a couple base thieves out.

With some ninth-inning help from Bruce Sutter, the Cubs topped Tanner's Traveling Track Team, 4-2, to move within half a game of the division leaders.

MANNY TRILLO and Bobby Murcer powered solo home runs to account for the go-ahead and eventual winning runs, and Bonham and Sutter stopped the Bucs on six hits.

None other an authority than Cubs manager Herman Franks complimented the 24-year-old Sutter, who is in just his second season in the major leagues.

"He's the best relief pitcher I've seen in my 45 years in baseball," Franks, who has seen a lot of relief pitchers, said. "He's got a forkball that explodes."

A Pittsburgh writer asked Franks if Sutter is even better than the Bucs' all-time great reliever Elroy Face, who also threw the forkball.

"Better," Franks said.

FRIDAY'S CONTEST was the North Siders' first look this season at Pittsburgh. It left several of the Cubs respectful but not in awe.

"They've got some big sticks," conceded Franks. "And they run like rabbits, or deer or gazelles — or whatever you want to call them. You've got to get out the rope with them around."

Franks had the rope in the person of Mitterwald who put the Pirates on a short leash by shooting down the first two would-be base stealers of the game, Phil Garner in the second and Rennie Stennett in the fifth.

FRANK TAVERAS in the sixth finally stole a base, but remembering that the Bucs grabbed six bases against the Dodgers May 22 and that they lead the league with 79 successful heists, the single theft was a Cubs' morale-booster.

"The Pirates really are a different ball club this season," Mitterwald said. "Last year, they never ran. This year, you don't know who's going to run.

"We were told they like to run on the first pitch, so I called about four or five pitch-outs. That was our game plan. We wanted to keep them close to the base, too, so we threw a lot of pick-off throws to first base."

All didn't begin so efficiently for the Cubs when in the second inning Gene Oliver, Stennett and Garner singled off Bonham. The final hit drove in Oliver, leaving men on first and third with one out.

BONHAM AND Mitterwald extricated the Cubs from the tight situation when catcher Duffy Dyer fanned and Garner was nailed trying to steal second on the same pitch.

The Cubs pulled ahead in the fourth when Jerry Morales, who was out trying for second on the play, singled home Larry Biittner. Trillo followed with a homer, his fourth, against the wind.

Oliver doubled in Parker with the tying run in the Pirates' sixth, but Murcer followed with his seventh homer of the season just inside the right field foul pole to push the Cubs ahead in the bottom of the same inning.

That drove Pirate starter John Candelaria from the mound, and the lanky left-hander eventually was tagged for his first loss of the season after six victories.

EX-WHITE SOX Terry Forster, relieving in the eighth, was nicked for the Cubs' final run when Morales tripled home Biittner.

Sutter struck out two Pirates in the ninth while giving up a one-out single to Stennett in earning his 12th save.

by VIC NOVAK

Arlington High School is not only the site, but also the last hope for area athletes in today's state boys tennis tournament. Arlington's Paul Wei, Bob Pionke and Mike Doering all qualified for the 9 a.m. semifinals. If they win, they'll play in the championship finals at 1 p.m.

The Arlington trio advanced by winning their fourth, fifth, and quarterfinal-round matches at the various Dist. 214 high schools Friday.

Singles competitor Wei beat New Trier East's Niel Golden 6-4 twice, Belleville East's Darrell Smith 7-5, 7-6; and Libertyville's Kreg Yingst 6-1, 6-4. Yingst, like Wei, was one of the top singles seeds.

WEI OPENS TODAY against another high-ranked player, Highland Park's Matt Horwitch. Horwitch, the defending state boys singles champion, was seeded No. 1 for this year's tourney.

Arlington coach Tom Pitchford explained only Paul's best play will move past Horwitch into the finals. "Wei played the best tennis of his life against Yingst and will have to play that way Saturday," said Pitchford.

Teammates Pionke and Doering also won three times Friday. They upended Peoria Richwood's Jim Tinthoff and Randy Rieman, 7-5, 7-5; York's Andy Seils and Bob Erickson 6-2, 5-7, 6-3; and Danville's Alan Krapf and Tom Simpson 6-4, 5-7, and 6-3.

Pitchford believes Doering and Pionke are also playing their best tennis ever and must continue at that level today. "Doering and Pionke are reaching their peak and will have to be at that peak tomorrow (Saturday)," said Pitchford.

THEY'LL HAVE to keep that peak, because the Arlington boys face the No. 1 seeded doubles team — Hinsdale Central's Tom Lockhart and Fritz Ballantine.

No matter what Arlington or any other team does, Hinsdale Central has already clinched its sixth straight state championship and 12th over-all.

After Friday's action, Hinsdale's 23 points topped Oak Park's 17, Arlington's 16½, New Trier East's 14½, Aurora West's 13½, Highland Park's 12½, Forest View's 11, and Homewood-Flossmoor's 9½.

Stevenson singles player Bill Heiser and Forest View doubles team of Steve Calderone and Nick Kekos missed the semifinals.

HEISER LOST his quarterfinal match to Oak Park's second-seeded Bruce Brescia, 7-6, 6-2. Bill was tied at 2-2 in the second match, but then suffered leg cramps. Although he recovered, his play was not the same.

Before that match, Heiser, only a junior, had beaten Maine East's Norm Peterson 6-3, 6-4 and Naperville North's Ron Kowal, 6-2, 6-3.

Calderone and Kekos fell in the quarterfinal title match to Aurora West's Dave Bilstrom and Joe Daw, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

The Forest View pair advanced by defeating Danville's Steve Dindley and Brian McDonald 6-3, 2-6, 6-4. Rich Central's Bruce Wilding and Dave Vergara then lost to Calderone and Kekos, 6-4, 7-6.

Hot weather poses '500' obstacle

by BOB GALLAS

INDIANAPOLIS — Heat, speed and the ability to weave through heavy traffic will be the keys Sunday in the 61st running of the richest automobile race in the world, The Indianapolis 500.

Temperatures in the 90s with high humidity are forecast, meaning a slippery track will be in store here for the 33 drivers whose average speed, 189.488 miles-per-hour, is six miles-per-hour faster than last year.

The battle in heavy traffic for the early lead is expected to be hotter than usual. Six cars were clocked at speeds better than 190-miles-per-hour during the final day of practice Thursday. But the real test of driving skill will come for defending Indy champ Johnny Rutherford, whose car has the speed to win the race. However Rutherford must come from the middle of the pack, starting in the middle of the sixth row.

RUTHERFORD posted the third best qualifying speed, 197.325 miles-per-hour, but failed to qualify on opening day of trials so he was delegated to the sixth row. The popular driver is used to weeding his way through heavy traffic, though.

Rutherford won the 1974 race when he started in the ninth row, passing 22 cars on the first 10 laps and taking the lead on lap 65. Last year, he won the shortest race in Indy history, 255 miles.

There are a number of other favorites for Sunday's classic. Bobby and Al Unser, both former Indy winners, will share the front with polesitter Tom Sneva, who set a one-lap record speed in qualifying of 200.535 miles-per-hour and also posted the best four-lap average speed of 198.884.

Three more former winners hold down the second row, A. J. Foyt, Gordon Johncock and Mario Andretti, with Foyt going for an unprecedented fourth win on the 2½-mile oval.

SEVEN ROOKIES will be in the field tomorrow with Janet Guthrie attracting the most attention. The 39-year-old Miss Guthrie became the first woman ever to make the field by posting a qualifying speed of 188.403, which put her in the middle of the ninth row.

Danny Ongais was the fastest rookie, posting a 193.040 speed that put him on the inside of the third row. Another rookie of note is Clay Regazzoni, a veteran of International Formula I competition from Switzerland, who will be way back in the middle of the 10th row.

An estimated 350,000 are expected to cram the 2½-mile oval to see the drivers vie for more than $1-million in prizes. But few expect to see speeds in the 190s.

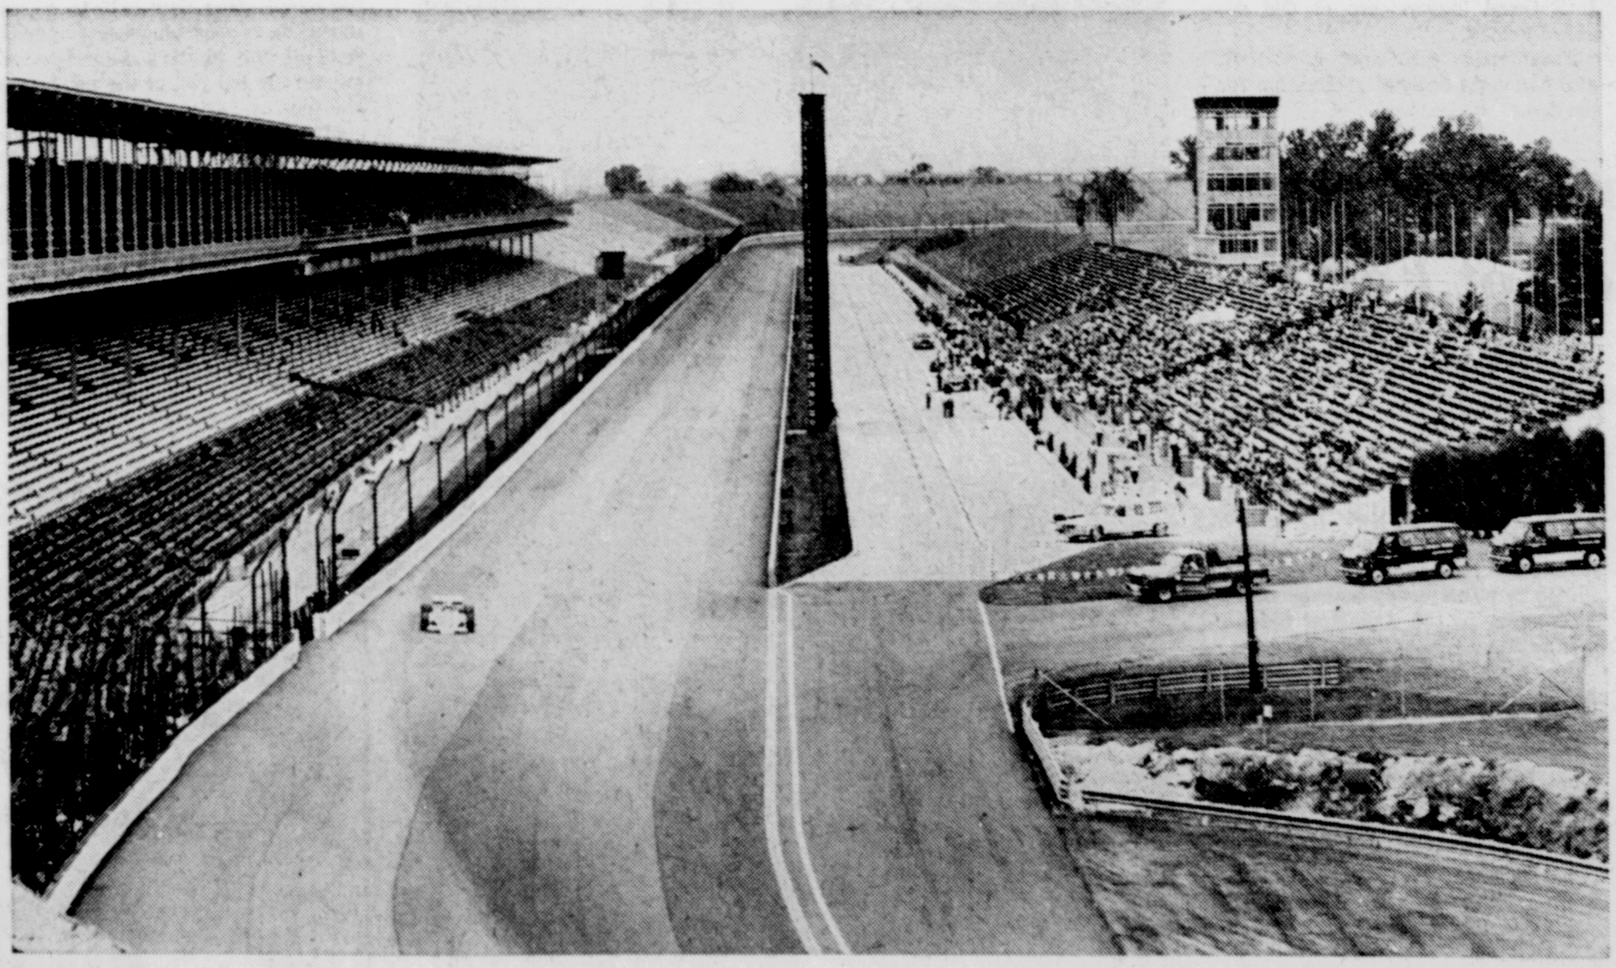
EACH CAR IS permitted only 280 gallons of fuel and any driver trying to run flat out could find himself out of gas by the end of the race.

The heat is also expected to take some of the power away from the machines, which run best in cooler temperatures. If temperatures do make the 90s Sunday, the track temperature could reach 130 degrees.

The traditional drivers' meeting will get under way at 11 a.m. (CST) today as race entrants will get their final instructions before the race.

The track will open at 5 a.m. with pre-race festivities scheduled for 8 a.m. and the race itself for 11 a.m. (CST).

The complete '500' lineup for Sunday appears in today's Scoreboard.



THE QUIET of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway will be broken Sunday as the 61st running of the richest race in the world gets underway at 11 a.m. (CST). The starting field, which is six miles-an-hour faster than last year, will be headed by polesitter Tom Sneva. Defending champ Johnny Rutherford will have to battle from the middle of the sixth row.

Swift show for West's track star

by ART MUGALIAN

CHARLESTON — Tony Krainik, Maine West's thoroughbred race horse, sprouted wings here Friday in the IHSA Class AA track and field championships and, like Pegasus, is on the verge of flying clear out of sight.

The fleet Warrior senior turned the AA prelims into a personal sprint to glory, clocking the day's fastest times in the 100-yard dash and the 220. Krainik will attempt to double in both events in the finals today, having chose to pass up the 440 where he had run a 48.9 district time.

After Stan Hawkins of East St. Louis Lincoln had set a new AA record of 21.61 in the first heat of the 220, Krainik rewrote the record book with a 21.60 to win in his heat. Earlier, the Maine West runner ripped off a 9.69 in the 100.

EIGHT OTHER area qualifiers reached today's finals on a clear, sunny day that saw the temperature climb toward 95. Leading a particularly splendid showing were strong performances by Fremd and Palatine, which each sent two athletes to the finals.

Making it the high jump were Fremd's Brian Schones and Palatine's Tom Digan. Each qualified with 6-5, the same height attained by junior Gail Olson, the favorite from Sycamore.

It was the first time in two months that Olson had been stopped before reaching 6-10. He'll get his chance for a possible record today.

Fremd's Gary Gunderson, in winning his heat of the 120 high hurdles semis in 14.36, will join John McCloughan of Elk Grove in the finals. McCloughan had the day's third fastest time, a 14.08, in his semifinal. Nate Lunday of North Chicago owns the top time of 13.93.

Palatine junior miler Tom Johnson was one of 12 finalists with a 4:15.9, his career best. But overshadowing Johnson was Darryl Robinson of Forest View who ran 4:16.0 to win the first heat, beating New Trier West's Phil Darrow, the top seed. Johnson and Robinson are ranked 9th and 10th in the finals field. Topping the list is John Sullivan of Thornridge at 4:12.5.

ANOTHER AREA runner who barely made the finals was Jeff Ways of Schaumburg. The junior quarter miler had the eighth fastest time out of eight qualifiers, a 49.21, his personal best which was good enough for second in his heat.

Qualifying for Maine West in addition to Krainik was half miler Jeff Brydges, sitting 10th out of 12 finalists with a 1:56.3. Today's finale in the 880 should be a duel between Maine North's Chris Heroux (1:52.2 qualifying) and Dave Ayoub of Peoria Central (1:51.7).

The day's biggest disappointment belonged to Hoffman Estates pole vaulter Paul Major, the top-seeded entrant with a 15-0 district effort. Inexplicably, Major failed to make 13-0 after he had passed 12-6.

"I don't know what happened," said Major. "On my last jump, when I had to make it, I might have been trying too hard." Major said he felt no pressure being seeded No. 1. "That felt good."

KRAINIK'S DECISION to pass up the 440 was based partly on the blistering weather conditions and partly on the fact that the 220 prelims were run right after the 440 heats. "That's just too close," said Krainik "And today it's just too hot."

So the Maine West sprinter took advantage of the sprinter's weather and showed his rivals that he will be a force to contend with in the finals of both events.

"Hawkins will be tough and so will (George) Carter," Krainik said, referring to his chief challengers in the 220. Carter, of Bloom, who will also run the 100, posted 21.8 and 9.75 times in his sprint prelims.

Among those area runners who reached Friday's semis, but got no further were Rick Sutton of Rolling Meadows, Pat O'Brien of Elk Grove, Paul Lippold of Maine West and Schones, who got to the semis in both hurdles races, but failed to advance to the finals.

East St. Louis Sr. leads all teams with nine individual qualifiers and all three relay teams in today's finals.

White Sox fall to Yankees, 8-6

NEW YORK — Sending nine batters to the plate in the second inning, the New York Yankees quickly erased a 5-0 deficit and went on to defeat the White Sox 8-6 Friday night.

Chicago starter Ken Brett was given a big margin to work with at the outset, but he ran into trouble in the second.

Reggie Jackson opened that inning with a booming home run high into the right field seats. Jackson was booed loudly by the New York fans in the first inning when he meandered in deep right field before allowing Richie Zisk's long drive to skip off his glove for a double.

OSCAR GAMBLE followed with a home run to put the Sox ahead 2-0 after one inning.

But Jackson was cheered after sparking the Yankees' rally.

His blast was followed with a walk and two singles wrapped around a fly-out and a fielder's choice. Then Thurman Munson hit a triple into the hole between left and center on a 3-0 pitch.

Sox manager Bob Lemon went to the bullpen for Bruce Dal Canton, who allowed an infield hit which scored Munson to make it 5-5.

THE SOX had expanded their early lead in the second, knocking out Catfish Hunter with nobody out. Hunter was greeted by a walk and two singles. Then Jim Essian's two-run hit to left caused Yankee manager Billy Martin to change pitchers.

His choice of Dick Tidrow proved to be the wisest move of the game.

After giving up a sacrifice fly to Zisk in the second, Tidrow breezed through seven innings to collect the victory. His only mistake was a fat pitch which Zisk belted for his 13th home run.

But it was a solo shot, and the Sox still trailed by two runs. Alan Bannister led off the ninth with a double, and Sparky Lyle replaced Tidrow.

ON JORGE ORTA'S smash up the middle, Bannister was called out for interfering with Yankee shortstop Bucky Dent, who collected three singles against his former teammates.

Lyle then got the next batters on flyouts to pick up his eighth save.

Dal Canton (0-2) suffered the loss. He gave up the go-ahead run in the fifth when Chris Chambliss hit a double that fell just inside the left field foul line. One out later, he scored on Jacson's single up the middle.

In the next inning, Dal Canto gave up a single to Dent and walk to Willie Randolph. On the walk, Dal Canton hurt his elbow and had to leave the game.

BOTH RUNNERS eventually scored when Dave Hamilton, the third pitcher for the Sox, gave up a sacrifice fly by Munson and a single by Chambliss after Mickey Rivers' infield hit had loaded the bases.

Brett, who was long gone at the time, lived through a similar nightmare with the Yankees last year in Comiskey Park. In that game, the Sox spotted Brett with a 7-0 lead after one inning, but New York came back with seven runs in the second and went on to win, 14-9.

But Brett was the only Sox pitcher to gain a victory against the Yankees last season as Chicago dropped 11 of the 12 games played between the teams.

The 28-year-old pitcher defeated the eventual American League champions 4-1 last July, and it also appeared that he would pick up a decision Friday night to improve his 3-5 record this season.

But the Yankees added to his woes.

In 58 innings thus far, Brett has allowed 36 runs on 81 hits.

The Sox, who have now lost five of their last six games, will play the Yankees in single games today and Sunday.

Arlington team shows state class

O'Donnell was victorious against Quincy's Kent Drescher 6-0, 6-3 but a loser against Lake Forest's John Hare, 6-4, 6-4.

Forest View teammates Mark Stiles and Doug Majewski were victors over Mike Stallard and Brian Oler of Harlem, 6-1, 6-2. But New Trier East ended the Falcon pair's season with a 6-4, 6-4 NTE victory.

The other Arlington doubles team of Blair Johnson and Kurt Wiebe lost their first match Friday to Homewood Flossmoor's Brett Swederek and John Singer, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

In the feed-in category, the Maine West doubles team of Bob Wyatt and Tom Gebheart stopped Rochelle's Mic Brooks and Bruce Miller 7-7, 3-6, 6-3.

The Maine West duo then was defeated by Arlington's Johnson and Wiebe 6-3, 6-2. Those Arlington players then were beaten by East St. Louis, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

TWO OTHER AREA doubles teams lost their first feed-in matches. Dick Minardi and Dick Gearhart of Maine West were upended by Granite City South's Mark Krinoki and Jeff Hagopian, 6-4, 6-4. The Schaumburg duo of Scott Wright and Mitch Borske were defeated by O'Fallon's Kip Adkins and Duane Sommer, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

In the feed-in singles category, Palatine's Mike Esenberg beat Centralia's Troy Lewis 6-3, 6-2. Mike lost to Bishop McNamara, 6-0, 6-4.

Kouzmanoff, Frank tie for golf honors

Tommy Kouzmanoff tied Chuck Frank with low gross honors in the 3rd Annual Chicago Area Golf Writers Invitational Tournament at Old Orchard Friday.

Kouzmanoff, who shot a 40-37-77, also had eight one-putt greens, low for the day.

Team Hawaii tips Sting in 3-2 overtime decision

by KEITH REINHARD

Hawaii center back Peter Nover drove up the middle, threw a little fake and then drilled a 15-yard shot that deflected off goalie Mervyn Cawston's hands into the left corner of the net.

A moment later, Bill Jennings of the Chicago Sting and Hawaii goalkeeper Peter Fox repeated the play. The deflection this time, however, carried the ball just an inch or two wider and it rolled harmlessly by the cage ending a marathon overtime soccer contest at Soldier Field Friday night with Team Hawaii on top, 3-2.

The verdict snapped Chicago's two-game win streak and left them still in search of their first home victory which 4,128 had hoped to see Friday night.

THE TWO clubs played scoreless soccer through two 45-minute regulation periods, two more empty 7½-minute overtime sessions and then 10 overtime free kick trials before the game was ultimately decided in phase four.

And Chicago was the obvious aggressor to the bitter end. The play on the field prompted Sting coach Bill Foulkes to aim some rather poignant stings of his own at both the opposition and the officiating.

"Let's face it, this was negative parasite football we were up against tonight. The sport is never going to advance in this country under these kinds of conditions.'

Foulkes' beef was not just over a Hawaii team that favored defensive style and verbal intimidation, but over refs who were constantly whistling and killing Chicago attacks and encouraging the no-offense yawner.

"Our bench is loaded with defense men," Foulkes continued. "We can keep six men back all the time and hang on, but I don't think this is going to encourage the kind of attractive, open-style of play that will appeal to the public."

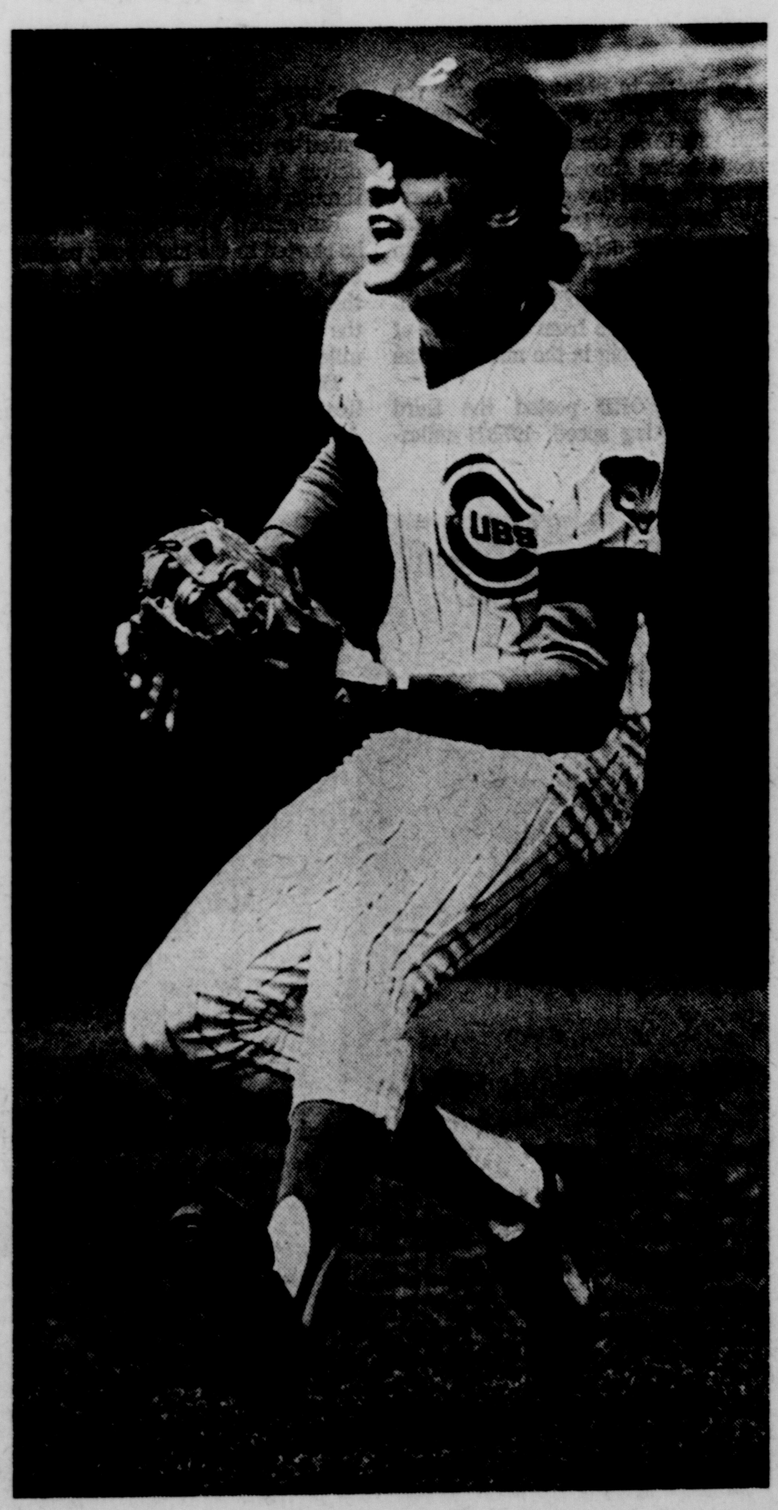
DESPITE THE refs and the guests, Chicago managed to get off 22 shots (to nine for Hawaii) in regulation time and Jennings on a pass from Jimmy Kelly barely missed putting the game away with 7:35 to go. His sharp 30-yarder, however, glanced just off the goalie's fingertips and missed the top rail of the net by one-half foot.

After neither side scored in overtime, each team was alternately allowed five free kicks — a shootout — with only the goalie on defense. Hawaii missed and Jennings hit to put the hosts up 1-0. Hawaii's Tommy Taylor then countered to knot the game at 1-1.

Three misses later, Hawaii went up on Victor Kodelja's 18-yarder but reserve midfielder Benny Alon deadlocked the game once more at 2-2 on the last try of the shootout.

That's when the deflections began.

The Sting is back in action Sunday at Metropolitan Stadium in Bloomington, Minn., against the Kicks.



A HELPING HAND. Manny Trillo of the Cubs moves in to back up a teammate Friday. The Cubs' 4-2 win moved them within half a game of league-leading Pittsburgh.

Arlington Park to feature 50 years in Hall of Fame

A thoroughbred racing Hall of Fame, honoring the finest horses, jockeys and trainers who have appeared at Arlington Park Race Track the past 50 years, will open June 6.

The display of photos, paintings, jockey silks, records and other memorabilia recounting historic moments at the track will be open for free public tours during the track's 103-day racing season.

The 14 horses, three stables and four trainers will be inducted into the Hall of Fame at ceremonies June 6 prior to the first race of the season that afternoon.

Seven jockeys will be honored on Aug. 15.

The horses to be inducted are Round Table, Nashua, Native Dancer, Secretariat, Dr. Fager, Buckpasser, Equipoise, Tom Rolfe, T. V. Lark, Candy Spots, Citation, Armed, Twilight Tear and Coaltown.

Calumet Farm, W. H. Bishop and Hasty House Farm stables will be honored along with trainers Ben and Jimmy Jones, William H. Bishop, Arnold Winick and Harry Trotsek.

The hall of fame also will include jockeys Eddie Arcaro, Steve Brooks, Johnny Sellers, Doug Dodson, Bill Shoemaker, Bill Hartack and Braulio Baeza.

The project is part of the track's 50th anniversary celebration. Other attractions this summer include $8 million in prize money and the re-establishment of the Arlington Classic and the Mid-America Triple.

The Classic, last run in 1970, will be contested Aug. 20 with a $150,000 purse.

The Triple, a popular feature of the 1960s, will consist of the American Derby on July 2, the Round Table on Aug. 13 and the Secretariat on Sept. 17.

The owner of any 3-year-old horse able to capture all three races will be awarded a cup designed and crafted by Tiffany.

Unusual entertainment and giveaways such as rodeos, Frisbee dog contests, square dancing, a fireworks display and picnics also are planned.

Lyle then got the next batters on flyouts to pick up his eighth save.

Dal Canton (0-2) suffered the loss. He gave up the go-ahead run in the fifth when Chris Chambliss hit a double that fell just inside the left field foul line. One out later, he scored on Jacson's single up the middle.

In the next inning, Dal Canto gave up a single to Dent and walk to Willie Randolph. On the walk, Dal Canton hurt his elbow and had to leave the game.

BOTH RUNNERS eventually scored when Dave Hamilton, the third pitcher for the Sox, gave up a sacrifice fly by Munson and a single by Chambliss after Mickey Rivers' infield hit had loaded the bases.

Brett, who was long gone at the time, lived through a similar nightmare with the Yankees last year in Comiskey Park. In that game, the Sox spotted Brett with a 7-0 lead after one inning, but New York came back with seven runs in the second and went on to win, 14-9.

But Brett was the only Sox pitcher to gain a victory against the Yankees last season as Chicago dropped 11 of the 12 games played between the teams.

The 28-year-old pitcher defeated the eventual American League champions 4-1 last July, and it also appeared that he would pick up a decision Friday night to improve his 3-5 record this season.

But the Yankees added to his woes.

In 58 innings thus far, Brett has allowed 36 runs on 81 hits.

The Sox, who have now lost five of their last six games, will play the Yankees in single games today and Sunday.

Team Hawaii tips Sting in 3-2 overtime decision

by KEITH REINHARD

Hawaii center back Peter Nover drove up the middle, threw a little fake and then drilled a 15-yard shot that deflected off goalie Mervyn Cawston's hands into the left corner of the net.

A moment later, Bill Jennings of the Chicago Sting and Hawaii goalkeeper Peter Fox repeated the play. The deflection this time, however, carried the ball just an inch or two wider and it rolled harmlessly by the cage ending a marathon overtime soccer contest at Soldier Field Friday night with Team Hawaii on top, 3-2.

The verdict snapped Chicago's two-game win streak and left them still in search of their first home victory which 4,128 had hoped to see Friday night.

THE TWO clubs played scoreless soccer through two 45-minute regulation periods, two more empty 7½-minute overtime sessions and then 10 overtime free kick trials before the game was ultimately decided in phase four.

And Chicago was the obvious aggressor to the bitter end. The play on the field prompted Sting coach Bill Foulkes to aim some rather poignant stings of his own at both the opposition and the officiating.

"Let's face it, this was negative parasite football we were up against tonight. The sport is never going to advance in this country under these kinds of conditions.'

Foulkes' beef was not just over a Hawaii team that favored defensive style and verbal intimidation, but over refs who were constantly whistling and killing Chicago attacks and encouraging the no-offense yawner.

"Our bench is loaded with defense men," Foulkes continued. "We can keep six men back all the time and hang on, but I don't think this is going to encourage the kind of attractive, open-style of play that will appeal to the public."

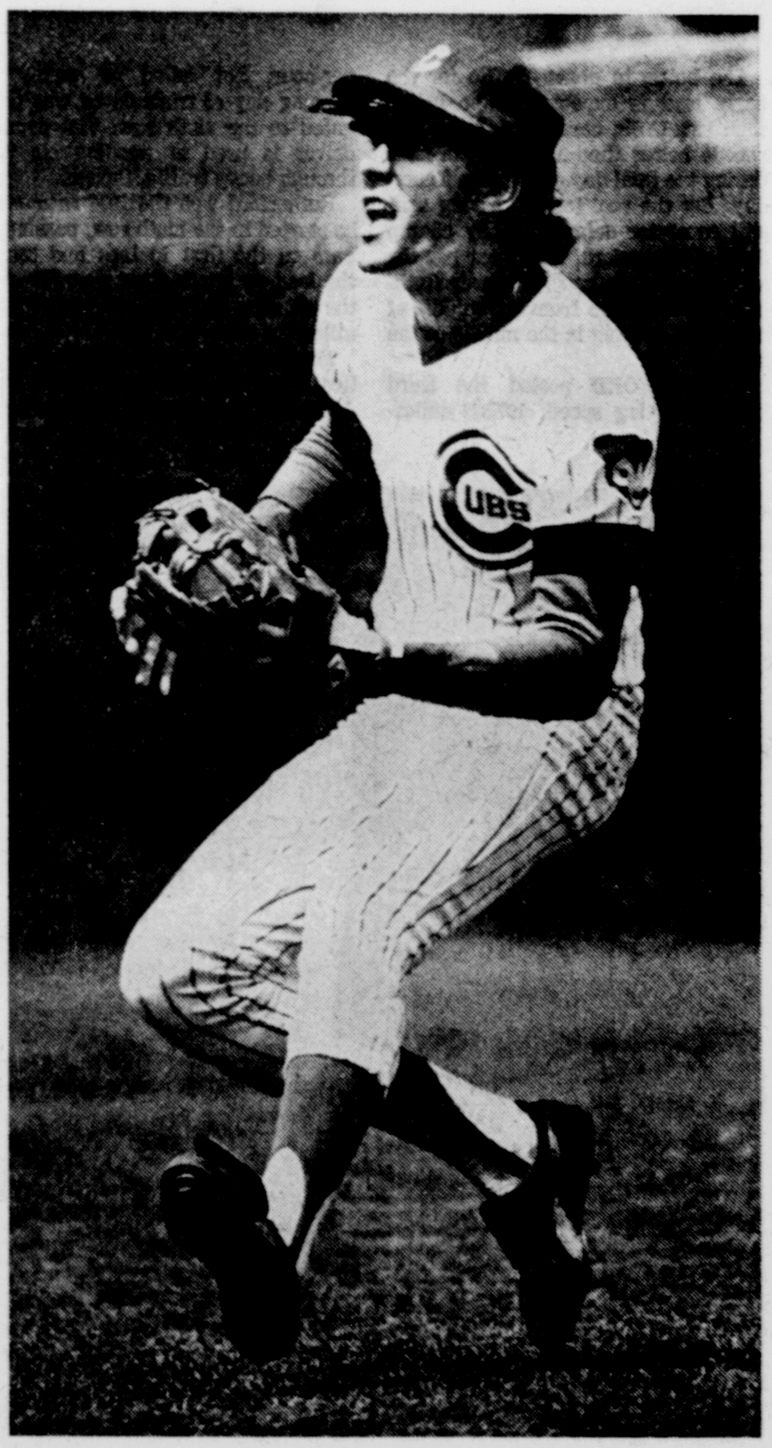
DESPITE THE refs and the guests, Chicago managed to get off 22 shots (to nine for Hawaii) in regulation time and Jennings on a pass from Jimmy Kelly barely missed putting the game away with 7:35 to go. His sharp 30-yarder, however, glanced just off the goalie's fingertips and missed the top rail of the net by one-half foot.

After neither side scored in overtime, each team was alternately allowed five free kicks — a shootout — with only the goalie on defense. Hawaii missed and Jennings hit to put the hosts up 1-0. Hawaii's Tommy Taylor then countered to knot the game at 1-1.

Three misses later, Hawaii went up on Victor Kodelja's 18-yarder but reserve midfielder Benny Alon deadlocked the game once more at 2-2 on the last try of the shootout.

That's when the deflections began.

The Sting is back in action Sunday at Metropolitan Stadium in Bloomington, Minn., against the Kicks.



A HELPING HAND. Manny Trillo of the Cubs moves in to back up a teammate Friday. The Cubs' 4-2 win moved them within half a game of league-leading Pittsburgh.

Arlington Park to feature 50 years in Hall of Fame

A thoroughbred racing Hall of Fame, honoring the finest horses, jockeys and trainers who have appeared at Arlington Park Race Track the past 50 years, will open June 6.

The display of photos, paintings, jockey silks, records and other memorabilia recounting historic moments at the track will be open for free public tours during the track's 103-day racing season.

The 14 horses, three stables and four trainers will be inducted into the Hall of Fame at ceremonies June 6 prior to the first race of the season that afternoon.

Seven jockeys will be honored on Aug. 15.

The horses to be inducted are Round Table, Nashua, Native Dancer, Secretariat, Dr. Fager, Buckpasser, Equipoise, Tom Rolfe, T. V. Lark, Candy Spots, Citation, Armed, Twilight Tear and Coaltown.

Calumet Farm, W. H. Bishop and Hasty House Farm stables will be honored along with trainers Ben and Jimmy Jones, William H. Bishop, Arnold Winick and Harry Trotsek.

The hall of fame also will include jockeys Eddie Arcaro, Steve Brooks, Johnny Sellers, Doug Dodson, Bill Shoemaker, Bill Hartack and Braulio Baeza.

The project is part of the track's 50th anniversary celebration. Other attractions this summer include $8 million in prize money and the re-establishment of the Arlington Classic and the Mid-America Triple.

The Classic, last run in 1970, will be contested Aug. 20 with a $150,000 purse.

The Triple, a popular feature of the 1960s, will consist of the American Derby on July 2, the Round Table on Aug. 13 and the Secretariat on Sept. 17.

The owner of any 3-year-old horse able to capture all three races will be awarded a cup designed and crafted by Tiffany.

Unusual entertainment and giveaways such as rodeos, Frisbee dog contests, square dancing, a fireworks display and picnics also are planned.

Bright lights shine on Janet Guthrie

Byline report

Art Mugalian

The jokes about "Gentlemen, start your engines" are already pretty stale, and the ones about women drivers are downright nasty. But Janet Guthrie is no joke. She is every inch as much a race car driver as — well, as A. J. Foyt.

It is important to keep in mind that Guthrie is not driving to the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday, she's driving IN it. That's hard for some people to accept.

She is doing something that no woman has ever done before in a place where, until last year, no woman was ever allowed. And yet what Guthrie is doing is not as solid a blow for women's liberation as you might expect.

NOT THAT women's lib isn't important anymore because, at least in the world of sports, it is. The female persuasion is breaking into areas heretofore uncharted by all but the bravest men.

Women are skydiving, bullfighting, sailplaning and even jogging through Central Park.

Guthrie is a good race car driver, but that fact has nothing to do with the fact that she is a woman. She didn't set out to prove that women are better than men, only that she, as a woman and as an individual, could perform well enough to earn a starting spot in the most prestigious auto race in the world.

Of course, Guthrie's accomplishment would have been a whole lot more impressive if she had qualified a female car. If we had some way to determine the sex of her racing machine — by looking under the hood or sounding the horn, maybe — then Guthrie's achievement would have fallen under the heading of women's lib.

AS IT IS, all the parts at Indy are interchangeable. Any driver can fit into any car. On a good day, your mother could qualify a car at Indy — if she had the fortune to climb into the right car.

As tough and demanding as race car driving is, the nuts-and-bolts of Indy comes before the race. Guthrie herself admitted that she would have qualified last year if she had been driving a faster car.

Guthrie's contribution to the women's movement is the breakthrough itself. She knew already — as did 105 million American women — that she was capable of qualifying that car. All she needed was a chance. Now, thanks to Guthrie, the way is clear for any woman crazy enough to try it in the future.

Guthrie is a woman, yes. She looks like a woman, not like an East German swimmer. She has, as Woody Allen would say, all the parts in the right places : two eyes on either side, two lips, and a nose right in the middle.

AND, DESPITE that fact, she made it at Indy.

That in itself is an achievement of a lifetime. She would almost do well to quit now while she's ahead and still in one piece. Guthrie breaking into the male-dominated world of Indy is like a man getting fourth runnerup at Atlantic City.

Unless she wins (in which case the headline will probably say something like "Woman driver wins Indy"), Guthrie's finish will be anticlimactic. So much luck is involved on race day that the outcome often is decided by a broken water pump or bugs on your windshield.

Plus, there is the danger of Indy. Janet's collision insurance won't be going down any.

THEY ARE ALREADY beginning to compare Guthrie to Christopher Columbus. "Let Chris fall off the edge if he wants to," they said. But the danger to Janet's phsyical well-being is outweighed by the damage that could be done to her psyche.

Like black baseball pioneer Jackie Robinson, she will have to tolerate the slurs and slaps of childish prejudice. It will be a test of her nerve and of her character. She will have to perform under the bright lights, under glass, with everyone watching.

There will be lots of griping on race day — mostly men griping that the clear lines of sexual difference are fuzzing over, that women aren't acting like women anymore, and that men are no longer coddled and secure on their traditional stomping grounds.

Plenty of critics will complain, quite lamely, that you won't be able to tell the drivers from the groupies anymore. And, for them, that may be a real problem.

BUT THESE are mere coincidentals. They have nothing to do with Guthrie's abilities, just as the racial taunts had nothing to do with Robinson's abilities.

Guthrie proved one thing for sure: ability counts.

But don't expect to see a woman playing centerfield for the Chicago Cubs any time soon.

Because opportunity counts too.

Perch renaissance peaks Memorial Day weekend

Jim Cook

Outdoor editor

A walk along the lakefront on a sunny afternoon makes you wonder what the value of Lake Michigan was before salmon made their pronounced appearance in the 1960s.

Charter boats are buzzing miles off shore, their marine band radios crackling with each coho or chinook to hit the ice chest.

Private boat owners have encircled Jeff's Boat Htuse in Waukegan lik a band of Indians around a wagon train, waiting to launch their boats and get fishing lines in the water.

BUT WHAT was the lake like before the intrtduction of salmon?

Marc Tuttle remembers.

"We used to ride the trolley with our cane poles that were telescopic and easy to carry. On Memorial Day weekend, if you didn't get out on the pier fast enough, you couldn't buy a seat — not for any price."

The target was deliciously famous Lake Michigan perch, the pride of the Friday night dinner table and buck-a-meal, all-you-can-eat feasts at the neighborhood bar or restaurant.

"Some of the good fishermen used trolley lines, but most couldn't afford it," Tuttle remembered. All you needed was a pole, line, some bobbers and small minnows and you were in business. Some of the guys would use pork rind as bait and jig for herring.

"THE TWO HOT spots were Montrose Pier on the north end of the city and Jackson Park pier on the south side. The peak of the perch season almost always coincided with Memorial Day."

Some of the more productive years were during the mid to late 1950's, but since that time, the perch population has been on a slow but steady decline.

The theories on the disappearance are varied.

Guilty fingers have been aimed at commercial fishermen, who until recently, roamed the lake almost unrestrained.

IN 1975, regulations prohibited commercial boats from taking more than 431,000 pounds of yellow perch annually.

Another cause of the perch demise has been linked to the alewife. The little silvery nemesis triggered a total takeover of te lake with its incredible and prolific reproduction.

The omnipresence of the alewife created stiff competition for food, shelter and even space in seemingly sndless Lake Michigan.

Remedies have been instituted to protect the perch. The commercial fishing licenses have been reduced to three and the harvest has been halved.

THE INTRODUCTION of salmon has put a harness on the alewife population. Salmon and trout caught by anglers have been gutted to reveal several alewives in the digestion process.

The result have been modest but encouraging. The piers are virtually ghost-like now as compared to the heyday of the '50s, although some veteran anglers are still pitching ice spoons, minnows and bobbers on a regular basis.

The two-pound perch that was raised from Montrose pier last week brought a thick smile to the face of the successful angler.

It was just like old times.

HOW MUCH is that fishy in the window? Mrs. Agnes Murphy hits a counter button as a 25-30 pound chinook salmon passes fish counting window at Bonneville Dam fish ladders in Oregon. The process gives an indication of what the summer and fall runs will bring.

Finally, a tourney for northerners

Winnebago walleye fishing contest

Wisconsin's Lake Winnebago walleyes will be the target next month for 200 of the nation's top fishermen — many of whom will be trying for the sometime elusive but always good eating fish for the first time.

The occasion will be the first "National Walleye Tournament" June 18-19 and Brian Callaghan of the MerCruiser Division of Mercury Motors freely admits it started as a publicity stunt to promote a new use for stern-drive engines.

"But as we became more involved in the planning and concept of the whole thing, several things came out," he said.

"First of all we realized we were putting on the first national fishing tournament of any significance in the upper U.S.

"ALL THE rest of the national tournaments are southern bass tournaments. Many fishermen, especially these in northern fishing clubs, if they want to pursue tournament fishing, have to go down south and they have to fish for bass.

"They're not familiar with bass since most of the fishing they do up here would be for walleye, or northern or muskie or something like that. So we found we were actually putting on a tournament to give the northern — or upper U.S. — fisherman an opportunity to demonstrate his skills in a more familiar environment and with a more familiar species of fish."

Lake Winnebago, in east central Wisconsin, is inland from Lake Michigan about 30 miles and some 50 miles north of Milwaukee. Tournament headquarters probably will be in Oshkosh.

First word of the tournament leaked out a couple of weeks ago and mailings to professional fishermen, celebrities and fishing clubs around the country started a few days ago. Even before the word got out, Callaghan said, four dozen inquiries had come into his office from fishermen in Wisconsin alone.

HE SAID his office also was told that Curt Gowdy, a well-known fisherman and television sports announcer, would be on hand.

Callaghan said the entries will be limited to 200, though he expects about 500 persons to apply and send the $50 entry fee before the May 31 deadline. Fees from entries not allowed will be returned.

The tournament will offer more than $20,000 in prizes, including a first prize of a custom-made stern-drive walleye rig. Prizes will be awarded for the heaviest total two-day limit of 10 fish — five each day.

Callaghan said the idea for the tourney was to promote the use of stern drive engines in fishing boats meant for northern fishermen and similar to the bass boats that started in the south and have swept the country.

THE TYPICAL bass boat is of shallow draft and in many cases is not suited for the wind-whipped open water lakes of the north — such as Winnebago.

Callaghan said he approached the Cruisers Division of the Mirro Aluminum Co. in Oconto, Wis., with his idea for a "walleye boat" and the production people were excited about the concept. He said they agreed to build a prototype using a deep sea cruiser hull. This will be the boat awarded as first prize.

"If it goes off well, they (Cruisers) would like to introduce it with their 1979 line," Callaghan said. "We'd like to see other boat manufacturers do the same."

Second prize in the tournament will be a small boat and motor with third prize a 20-horsepower Mercury outboard.

CALLAGHAN IS the tournament coordinator and professional fisherman Don Woodruff is the tournament director.

Woodruff contacted the Department of Natural Resources to make sure the tourney was legal and to find out if such intense fishing pressure would hurt the resource of the 137,708 acre lake.

"We were told it wouldn't harm the lake," Callaghan said. "The DNR is interested in observing to see how the fish are biting, what they are biting on and so forth."

And, the DNR will make sure no state laws are broken.

One law, in particular, worries the sponsors — that on culling a catch (throwing back small fish when bigger fish are caught to stay at a limit.) Culling is a common practice in the southern bass tournaments and, in most of the southern tournaments, the fish kept are also returned to the water after being weighed to provide future sport.

"WE CAN'T release the walleye since it's such a delicate fish," Callaghan said. 'We knew that since it wouldn't survive after the catch we had to do something with it. We couldn't just throw it back in the lake.

"So with Saturday's catch we're having a fish fry for all of the contestants and various dignitaries. Then Sunday we will have the fish filleted and frozen and any fishermen who want to take the fish back home can do so. The rest will be available to anyone else who is interested."

Storm, Detroit debut in softball

by DON FRISKE

With a roster of players from mixed softball and baseball backgrounds, the Chicago Storm will open its season against the Detroit Caesars at 7:30 p.m. Sunday on the Windy City Softball Stadium in suburban Bridgeview.

The Storm is Chicago's entry in the American Professional Slo-Pitch League, which kicks off its rookie campaign of 12-inch softball with six games Sunday.

Along with the Chicago-Detroit game, Milwaukee will be at Baltimore, Cleveland at Columbus, New York at New Jersey, Kentucky at Pittsburgh and Cincinnati at Minnesota.

THE STORM'S FIELD manager provides a keen microcosm of the team makeup. He is Milt Pappas, former major league pitcher and one-time softball enthusiast as a youngster in Detroit.

"The team is shaping up very well, a lot better than many people anticipated," said Pappas, who once pitched a no-hitter for the Chicago Cubs.

Because of the dominance of 16-inch softball in Chicago, some people who follow the sport do not think that the style of play that requires a smaller ball will survive.

"Teams in the other cities don't think we'll have a team with championship quality because of this," Pappas said, "but I think we'll surprise a lot of people."

The Storm's first challenge from Detroit can boast of a lineup that includes former Tiger stars Norm Cash and Jim Northrup along with three players from the 1976 national amateur champions.

DETROIT'S ROSTER blend of players experienced in both hardball and softball somewhat resembles the Storm's composition. Chicago held tryouts earlier this spring which attracted amateur 12-inch players, some 16-inch veterans and a few former pro baseball players.

For the last two weeks, Pappas has worked with his final roster, which includes one-time Cub outfielder Gene Hiser and third baseman Mike Krolicki, 16-inch home run champion in Chicago.

"It seems to me that the guys are blending very well," Pappas said. "I could also play if I wanted, but I haven't gone that far yet."

Pappas got involved with the team through a phone call from the Cubs' Jose Cardenal.

"Jose knew Frank Mariani, the Storm general manager," Pappas explained. "Jose called me and asked me if I wanted to get involved with the team and, at first, I didn't understand what he meant. Then he just said, 'Call Frank Mariani, call Frank Mariani.' "

AFTER EVENTUALLY contacting the general manager, Pappas became interested in the project of putting a team together.

At least 3,000 people are expected to attend the Storm opener. Pappas thinks that once his team has shown what it can do, the interest will expand.

"I think that if people come out they will be pleased with the caliber of play," he said. "It is a hitter's game, but the defense is worthwhile, and the game moves extremely fast."

Along with the expected crowd, members of NBC's Grandstand crew will be in attendance to do a feature on Chicago professional 12-inch softball in its infant stage.

Wisconsin's Lake Winnebago walleyes will be the target next month for 200 of the nation's top fishermen — many of whom will be trying for the sometime elusive but always good eating fish for the first time.

The occasion will be the first "National Walleye Tournament" June 18-19 and Brian Callaghan of the MerCruiser Division of Mercury Motors freely admits it started as a publicity stunt to promote a new use for stern-drive engines.

"But as we became more involved in the planning and concept of the whole thing, several things came out," he said.

"First of all we realized we were putting on the first national fishing tournament of any significance in the upper U.S.

"ALL THE rest of the national tournaments are southern bass tournaments. Many fishermen, especially these in northern fishing clubs, if they want to pursue tournament fishing, have to go down south and they have to fish for bass.

"They're not familiar with bass since most of the fishing they do up here would be for walleye, or northern or muskie or something like that. So we found we were actually putting on a tournament to give the northern — or upper U.S. — fisherman an opportunity to demonstrate his skills in a more familiar environment and with a more familiar species of fish."

Lake Winnebago, in east central Wisconsin, is inland from Lake Michigan about 30 miles and some 50 miles north of Milwaukee. Tournament headquarters probably will be in Oshkosh.

First word of the tournament leaked out a couple of weeks ago and mailings to professional fishermen, celebrities and fishing clubs around the country started a few days ago. Even before the word got out, Callaghan said, four dozen inquiries had come into his office from fishermen in Wisconsin alone.

HE SAID his office also was told that Curt Gowdy, a well-known fisherman and television sports announcer, would be on hand.

Callaghan said the entries will be limited to 200, though he expects about 500 persons to apply and send the $50 entry fee before the May 31 deadline. Fees from entries not allowed will be returned.

The tournament will offer more than $20,000 in prizes, including a first prize of a custom-made stern-drive walleye rig. Prizes will be awarded for the heaviest total two-day limit of 10 fish — five each day.

Callaghan said the idea for the tourney was to promote the use of stern drive engines in fishing boats meant for northern fishermen and similar to the bass boats that started in the south and have swept the country.

THE TYPICAL bass boat is of shallow draft and in many cases is not suited for the wind-whipped open water lakes of the north — such as Winnebago.

Callaghan said he approached the Cruisers Division of the Mirro Aluminum Co. in Oconto, Wis., with his idea for a "walleye boat" and the production people were excited about the concept. He said they agreed to build a prototype using a deep sea cruiser hull. This will be the boat awarded as first prize.

"If it goes off well, they (Cruisers) would like to introduce it with their 1979 line," Callaghan said. "We'd like to see other boat manufacturers do the same."

Second prize in the tournament will be a small boat and motor with third prize a 20-horsepower Mercury outboard.

CALLAGHAN IS the tournament coordinator and professional fisherman Don Woodruff is the tournament director.

Woodruff contacted the Department of Natural Resources to make sure the tourney was legal and to find out if such intense fishing pressure would hurt the resource of the 137,708 acre lake.

"We were told it wouldn't harm the lake," Callaghan said. "The DNR is interested in observing to see how the fish are biting, what they are biting on and so forth."

And, the DNR will make sure no state laws are broken.

One law, in particular, worries the sponsors — that on culling a catch (throwing back small fish when bigger fish are caught to stay at a limit.) Culling is a common practice in the southern bass tournaments and, in most of the southern tournaments, the fish kept are also returned to the water after being weighed to provide future sport.

"WE CAN'T release the walleye since it's such a delicate fish," Callaghan said. 'We knew that since it wouldn't survive after the catch we had to do something with it. We couldn't just throw it back in the lake.

"So with Saturday's catch we're having a fish fry for all of the contestants and various dignitaries. Then Sunday we will have the fish filleted and frozen and any fishermen who want to take the fish back home can do so. The rest will be available to anyone else who is interested."

Storm, Detroit debut in softball

by DON FRISKE

With a roster of players from mixed softball and baseball backgrounds, the Chicago Storm will open its season against the Detroit Caesars at 7:30 p.m. Sunday on the Windy City Softball Stadium in suburban Bridgeview.

The Storm is Chicago's entry in the American Professional Slo-Pitch League, which kicks off its rookie campaign of 12-inch softball with six games Sunday.

Along with the Chicago-Detroit game, Milwaukee will be at Baltimore, Cleveland at Columbus, New York at New Jersey, Kentucky at Pittsburgh and Cincinnati at Minnesota.

THE STORM'S FIELD manager provides a keen microcosm of the team makeup. He is Milt Pappas, former major league pitcher and one-time softball enthusiast as a youngster in Detroit.

"The team is shaping up very well, a lot better than many people anticipated," said Pappas, who once pitched a no-hitter for the Chicago Cubs.

Because of the dominance of 16-inch softball in Chicago, some people who follow the sport do not think that the style of play that requires a smaller ball will survive.

"Teams in the other cities don't think we'll have a team with championship quality because of this," Pappas said, "but I think we'll surprise a lot of people."

The Storm's first challenge from Detroit can boast of a lineup that includes former Tiger stars Norm Cash and Jim Northrup along with three players from the 1976 national amateur champions.

DETROIT'S ROSTER blend of players experienced in both hardball and softball somewhat resembles the Storm's composition. Chicago held tryouts earlier this spring which attracted amateur 12-inch players, some 16-inch veterans and a few former pro baseball players.

For the last two weeks, Pappas has worked with his final roster, which includes one-time Cub outfielder Gene Hiser and third baseman Mike Krolicki, 16-inch home run champion in Chicago.

"It seems to me that the guys are blending very well," Pappas said. "I could also play if I wanted, but I haven't gone that far yet."

Pappas got involved with the team through a phone call from the Cubs' Jose Cardenal.

"Jose knew Frank Mariani, the Storm general manager," Pappas explained. "Jose called me and asked me if I wanted to get involved with the team and, at first, I didn't understand what he meant. Then he just said, 'Call Frank Mariani, call Frank Mariani.' "

AFTER EVENTUALLY contacting the general manager, Pappas became interested in the project of putting a team together.

At least 3,000 people are expected to attend the Storm opener. Pappas thinks that once his team has shown what it can do, the interest will expand.

"I think that if people come out they will be pleased with the caliber of play," he said. "It is a hitter's game, but the defense is worthwhile, and the game moves extremely fast."

Along with the expected crowd, members of NBC's Grandstand crew will be in attendance to do a feature on Chicago professional 12-inch softball in its infant stage.

Brawl costs $2,500 for Dawkins, Lucas

NEW YORK — NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien fined Darryl Dawkins of the Philadelphia 76ers and Maurice Lucas of the Portland Trail Blazers $2,500 each for their involvement in a brawl Thursday night near the end of the second game of the NBA playoff finals.

O'Brien also sent telegrams Friday warning 76ers coach Gene Shue and Blazers coach Jack Ramsay that any future incidents would lead to a "more severe response from the commissioner" and ordering them to call team meetings to "review the seriousness of the situation."

The third game of the best-of-seven series, which Philadelphia leads 2-0, will be played Sunday at Portland.

With about four minutes to play Thursday night and Philadelphia on its way to an easy 107-89 victory at home, Portland's Bob Gross and Dawkins came crashing to the floor battling for a rebound. After the two were back on their feet, Dawkins, Philadelphia's 20-year-old, 6-foot-11, 257-pound strongman, threw a wild punch that missed Gross, but caught teammate Doug Collins above the eye. Collins needed four stitches to close the cut.

Lucas then struck Dawkins in the back of the head and both benches cleared. Lucas and Dawkins squared off to fight and as the scene grew uglier, fans swarmed onto the court, threatening to get into the act.

Three share golf lead in Atlanta

ATLANTA — Lou Graham and Dave Stockton, a pair of veterans with major championships behind them, shared the Atlanta Golf Classic lead with lesser-known Mac McLendon at the end of the second round Friday with 7-under-par 137s.

Graham, a former U.S. Open champion from Nashville, Tenn., who finished in fourth place just four days ago in the Memorial Tournament in Ohio, grabbed a two-stroke lead in the rain-delayed first round Friday morning when he closed with a pair of birdies for a 6-under-par 66.

But Stockton, two-time PGA champion, caught up a few hours later when he outshot Graham 69-71 in the morning portion of the second round. McLendon did the same later in the day with his 68-69.

Finley cuts Oakland ticket prices

OAKLAND — Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley geared up for the attendance battle with the cross-bay San Francisco Giants Friday by announcing a 50 per cent reduction in ticket prices for week-day games at the Oakland Coliseum.

At a news conference he earlier had labeled as "one of the most important in A's history," Finley said, effective immediately and through the balance of the American League season, tickets prices will be scaled from $2.50 for lower deck reserved box seats to $1 in the bleachers for games played Monday through Thursday.

In addition, chaperoned youth groups of 50 or more will be admitted without admission.

Weekend admission prices will remain on the $5 to $2 scale.

Smith advances in French tourney

PARIS — Stan Smith, bidding for one of the major titles still eluding him, overcame his dislike of clay courts Friday for a 6-4, 6-3, 7-5 victory over West German Juergen Fassbender to join three other Americans in the third round of the $330,000 French Tennis Championships.

In the women's singles, Nancy Richey also made the third round by beating Uruguay's Fiorella Bonicelli, 6-4, 5-7, 6-1.

The only shock of the day was the victory of Canadians Dale Power and Greg Holder over the defending doubles champions, Fred McNair and Sherwood Stewart, in the first round of the men's doubles, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Fidrych sharp but loses

From Herald Wire Services

A two-out error by Tito Fuentes on a routine ground ball permitted Dan Meyer to score from second base in the sixth inning with the run that beat Mark Fidrych in "The Bird's" season debut Friday night, a 2-1 Seattle Mariners victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Meyer had doubled with two out and then disappointed a crowd of 44,207 when he raced home as Bill Stein's grounder skipped up Fuentes' arm, over his head and into right-center field.

Glenn Abbott and Mike Kekich combined to hold Detroit to just three hits for the third straight game.

FIDRYCH'S FIRST two pitches of the season were stroked for base hits, but he retired the next three batters and pitched shutout ball until the fifth.

Bob Stinson singled and went to third on a one-out double by Larry Milbourne, which Ron LeFlore dropped after a long run in center field. Dave Collins then scored Stinson with a sacrifice fly to left.

Fidrych was to be Detroit's opening-game pitcher but underwent knee surgery March 31 to repair torn cartilage suffered while shagging fly balls in the outfield 10 days earlier.

LEE MAY and Ken Singleton batted in two runs each to support the six-hit shutout of Rudy May in the Baltimore Orioles' 6-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

May, 6-4, tossed a one-hitter through four innings enroute to his 18th career shutout as the Orioles jumped to an early 4-0 lead against losing pitcher Geoff Zahn, 6-3.

Wayne Garland tossed a four-hitter and Rico Carty banged out three hits to give the Cleveland Indians their fifth straight victory, 3-1 over Vida Blue and the Oakland A's.

Garland struck out four and walked none while Blue, who was tagged for seven hits, lost his third straight decision after winning three in a row to fall to 3-5.

VETERAN FERGUSON Jenkins scattered eight hits and Carlton Fisk and Carl Yastrzemski drove home two runs each to pace the Boston Red Sox to a 10-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals, ending a three-game losing streak.

The 33-year-old Jenkins struck out six and walked one in gaining his fifth win in nine decisions. Loser Dennis Leonard, 2-5, struck out nine batters but yielded 11 hits and 9 runs in 6-1/3 innings for the Royals.

Errors by shortstop Bob Bailor and catcher Alan Ashby enabled the California Angels to score three runs in the seventh inning and defeat the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1.

Gary Ross, with relief help from Paul Hartzell with nine out in the eighth, lifted his record to 2-2, while Johnson fell to 1-2.

Steve Brye's pinch-hit sacrifice fly with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning scored Sal Bando with the winning run to provide the Milwaukee Brewers with a 6-5 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Bando and Cecil Cooper singled off Paul Lindblad with one out to put runners on first and third. Byre, batting for Von Joshua, hit a long fly to deep center field to score Bando with the winning run.

IN THE NATIONAL League Friday Tommy Hutton batted in four runs, including the game-winner in the eighth inning, to spark the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-4 victory Friday night over the New York Mets.

Mike Schmidt doubled to open the eighth and pinch-runner Terry Harmon scored the decisive run on Hutton's sacrifice fly. Hutton stroked an RBI single in the first and also belted a two-run homer in the fifth, his first home run of the year.

Gene Garber, Philadelphia's third pitcher of the game, picked up his second victory in five decisions. Skip Lockwood, 0-2, took the loss in relief of Tom Seaver.

Ken Reitz' first major league grand slam homer capped a six-run fourth-inning splurge night which gave Larry Dierker and the St. Louis Cardinals a 7-3 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The win was the first of the season for Dierker, who lost his only previous start after returning from a broken leg suffered in spring training. He allowed seven hits over seven innings, striking out two and walking two.

The Cardinals collected six straight hits in the fourth off Expos' starter and loser Santo Alcala, 1-2.

Soccer

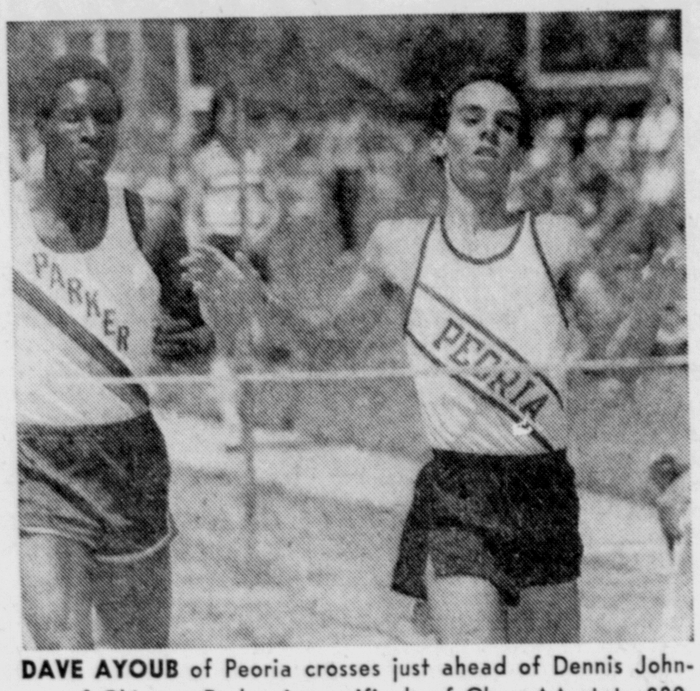
Arlington Heights

The Senior Division Pioneer Eagles soccer team completed a spectacular spring season with an undefeated record and the Arlington Youth Soccer Senior championship.

The talents of strikers Scott Grundberg, Rob French, Russ Cutlip, Gary Ahlberg and Marge Buckingham provided the accurate passing and pressure tactics.

It was the running, ball handling, and clearing passes of the Eagles halfbacks that caused opposing teams to give up the ball. Mark Hoffman at center, combined with Tom May, Kathy Ronayen, and Greg Head, showed the aggressiveness necessary. The fullback line of Joe Higgins, Kay Kelly, and Gina Adamini, rarely let the opposing teams through with booming, clearing kicks.

Even with all this help at defense, goalie Pat Sullivan showed his winning style with the longest kicks of any goalie in the league. His dives and team coordination with the fullbacks were impressive all season. The coaches were Mrs. French and Mr. Higgins.



DAVE AYOUB of Peoria crosses just ahead of Dennis Johnson of Chicago Parker in semifinals of Class AA state 880-yard run Friday in Charleston. Ayoub's time was 1:51.72 and he will duel Chris Heroux of Maine North today in one of the featured races.

Brawl costs $2,500 for Dawkins, Lucas

NEW YORK — NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien fined Darryl Dawkins of the Philadelphia 76ers and Maurice Lucas of the Portland Trail Blazers $2,500 each for their involvement in a brawl Thursday night near the end of the second game of the NBA playoff finals.

O'Brien also sent telegrams Friday warning 76ers coach Gene Shue and Blazers coach Jack Ramsay that any future incidents would lead to a "more severe response from the commissioner" and ordering them to call team meetings to "review the seriousness of the situation."

The third game of the best-of-seven series, which Philadelphia leads 2-0, will be played Sunday at Portland.

With about four minutes to play Thursday night and Philadelphia on its way to an easy 107-89 victory at home, Portland's Bob Gross and Dawkins came crashing to the floor battling for a rebound. After the two were back on their feet, Dawkins, Philadelphia's 20-year-old, 6-foot-11, 257-pound strongman, threw a wild punch that missed Gross, but caught teammate Doug Collins above the eye. Collins needed four stitches to close the cut.

Lucas then struck Dawkins in the back of the head and both benches cleared. Lucas and Dawkins squared off to fight and as the scene grew uglier, fans swarmed onto the court, threatening to get into the act.

Three share golf lead in Atlanta

ATLANTA — Lou Graham and Dave Stockton, a pair of veterans with major championships behind them, shared the Atlanta Golf Classic lead with lesser-known Mac McLendon at the end of the second round Friday with 7-under-par 137s.

Graham, a former U.S. Open champion from Nashville, Tenn., who finished in fourth place just four days ago in the Memorial Tournament in Ohio, grabbed a two-stroke lead in the rain-delayed first round Friday morning when he closed with a pair of birdies for a 6-under-par 66.

But Stockton, two-time PGA champion, caught up a few hours later when he outshot Graham 69-71 in the morning portion of the second round. McLendon did the same later in the day with his 68-69.

Finley cuts Oakland ticket prices

OAKLAND — Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley geared up for the attendance battle with the cross-bay San Francisco Giants Friday by announcing a 50 per cent reduction in ticket prices for week-day games at the Oakland Coliseum.

At a news conference he earlier had labeled as "one of the most important in A's history," Finley said, effective immediately and through the balance of the American League season, tickets prices will be scaled from $2.50 for lower deck reserved box seats to $1 in the bleachers for games played Monday through Thursday.

In addition, chaperoned youth groups of 50 or more will be admitted without admission.

Weekend admission prices will remain on the $5 to $2 scale.

Smith advances in French tourney

PARIS — Stan Smith, bidding for one of the major titles still eluding him, overcame his dislike of clay courts Friday for a 6-4, 6-3, 7-5 victory over West German Juergen Fassbender to join three other Americans in the third round of the $330,000 French Tennis Championships.

In the women's singles, Nancy Richey also made the third round by beating Uruguay's Fiorella Bonicelli, 6-4, 5-7, 6-1.

The only shock of the day was the victory of Canadians Dale Power and Greg Holder over the defending doubles champions, Fred McNair and Sherwood Stewart, in the first round of the men's doubles, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Fidrych sharp but loses

From Herald Wire Services

A two-out error by Tito Fuentes on a routine ground ball permitted Dan Meyer to score from second base in the sixth inning with the run that beat Mark Fidrych in "The Bird's" season debut Friday night, a 2-1 Seattle Mariners victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Meyer had doubled with two out and then disappointed a crowd of 44,207 when he raced home as Bill Stein's grounder skipped up Fuentes' arm, over his head and into right-center field.

Glenn Abbott and Mike Kekich combined to hold Detroit to just three hits for the third straight game.

FIDRYCH'S FIRST two pitches of the season were stroked for base hits, but he retired the next three batters and pitched shutout ball until the fifth.

Bob Stinson singled and went to third on a one-out double by Larry Milbourne, which Ron LeFlore dropped after a long run in center field. Dave Collins then scored Stinson with a sacrifice fly to left.

Fidrych was to be Detroit's opening-game pitcher but underwent knee surgery March 31 to repair torn cartilage suffered while shagging fly balls in the outfield 10 days earlier.

LEE MAY and Ken Singleton batted in two runs each to support the six-hit shutout of Rudy May in the Baltimore Orioles' 6-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

May, 6-4, tossed a one-hitter through four innings enroute to his 18th career shutout as the Orioles jumped to an early 4-0 lead against losing pitcher Geoff Zahn, 6-3.

Wayne Garland tossed a four-hitter and Rico Carty banged out three hits to give the Cleveland Indians their fifth straight victory, 3-1 over Vida Blue and the Oakland A's.

Garland struck out four and walked none while Blue, who was tagged for seven hits, lost his third straight decision after winning three in a row to fall to 3-5.

VETERAN FERGUSON Jenkins scattered eight hits and Carlton Fisk and Carl Yastrzemski drove home two runs each to pace the Boston Red Sox to a 10-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals, ending a three-game losing streak.

The 33-year-old Jenkins struck out six and walked one in gaining his fifth win in nine decisions. Loser Dennis Leonard, 2-5, struck out nine batters but yielded 11 hits and 9 runs in 6-1/3 innings for the Royals.

Errors by shortstop Bob Bailor and catcher Alan Ashby enabled the California Angels to score three runs in the seventh inning and defeat the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1.

Gary Ross, with relief help from Paul Hartzell with nine out in the eighth, lifted his record to 2-2, while Johnson fell to 1-2.

Steve Brye's pinch-hit sacrifice fly with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning scored Sal Bando with the winning run to provide the Milwaukee Brewers with a 6-5 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Bando and Cecil Cooper singled off Paul Lindblad with one out to put runners on first and third. Byre, batting for Von Joshua, hit a long fly to deep center field to score Bando with the winning run.

IN THE NATIONAL League Friday Tommy Hutton batted in four runs, including the game-winner in the eighth inning, to spark the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-4 victory Friday night over the New York Mets.

Mike Schmidt doubled to open the eighth and pinch-runner Terry Harmon scored the decisive run on Hutton's sacrifice fly. Hutton stroked an RBI single in the first and also belted a two-run homer in the fifth, his first home run of the year.

Gene Garber, Philadelphia's third pitcher of the game, picked up his second victory in five decisions. Skip Lockwood, 0-2, took the loss in relief of Tom Seaver.

Ken Reitz' first major league grand slam homer capped a six-run fourth-inning splurge night which gave Larry Dierker and the St. Louis Cardinals a 7-3 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The win was the first of the season for Dierker, who lost his only previous start after returning from a broken leg suffered in spring training. He allowed seven hits over seven innings, striking out two and walking two.

The Cardinals collected six straight hits in the fourth off Expos' starter and loser Santo Alcala, 1-2.

Soccer

Arlington Heights

The Senior Division Pioneer Eagles soccer team completed a spectacular spring season with an undefeated record and the Arlington Youth Soccer Senior championship.

The talents of strikers Scott Grundberg, Rob French, Russ Cutlip, Gary Ahlberg and Marge Buckingham provided the accurate passing and pressure tactics.

It was the running, ball handling, and clearing passes of the Eagles halfbacks that caused opposing teams to give up the ball. Mark Hoffman at center, combined with Tom May, Kathy Ronayen, and Greg Head, showed the aggressiveness necessary. The fullback line of Joe Higgins, Kay Kelly, and Gina Adamini, rarely let the opposing teams through with booming, clearing kicks.

Even with all this help at defense, goalie Pat Sullivan showed his winning style with the longest kicks of any goalie in the league. His dives and team coordination with the fullbacks were impressive all season. The coaches were Mrs. French and Mr. Higgins.

Kruschen at home in "Busting Loose"

by Vernon Scott

Jack Kruschen, a character actor in radio, theater, movies and television for three decades, says he's found a home in episodic TV as the generation gap father in "Busting Loose."

Kruschen, a Canadian native who was reared in Hollywood, is a powerfully built man with a soft manner and warm personality.

He and his wife, Violet, have been married almost 15 years. His stepson, Mark Mooring, 26, recently made Kruschen a grandfather. He has two other children by a previous marriage, Susan, 27, and Steven, 25.

Kruschen's career progressed from radio announcing after World War II to the New York theater. He then moved on to television and motion pictures, making his film debut with Betty Hutton in "Red, Hot and Blue."

The stocky Kruschen and Violet live with Violet's mother a few blocks from the Pacific Ocean in a Spanish-style house that once belonged to Ronald Colman. The rooms are spacious and airy. Almost every window provides a view of the sea and Santa Catalina Island.

Over the years the actor has remodeled almost every room in the house. He built his own workshop and filled it with carpentry tools and rare woods he purchased from a bankrupt furniture factory.

He also fashioned several of the beauitful inlaid tables and other pieces of exquisite furniture in the house. His woodwork blends comfortably with a mixture of traditional pieces and Italian and French provincial furniture.

Kruschen enclosed the front porch and added wrought iron banisters to the staircase. Rounded arches and high ceilings prevail. An outstanding feature of the living room is a beamed ceiling sanded by Mark and Kruschen to give a warm, rich glow to the area.

If Jack Kruschen likes anything better than woodworking, it's fishing. Not infrequently he plods down to the beach with surf-casting gear. He uses the mussels clinging to rock jetties for bait and comes home with catches of walleye, perch and cabazon.

Sometimes he just brings the mussels home and fixes them with butter and garlic for a delicious dish. Once in a while he takes off for Idaho's high country to do some trout fishing.

But Kruschen's new schedule with the CBS-TV series is keeping him closer to home these days.

He generally arises at 6 a.m., puts on work clothes and runs on the beach with the family's two German shepherds, Cresar and Cleopatra. If he can find a partner, he puts in an hour of fun at a nearby tennis club to which he belongs.

Then he has a quick shower and fixes his own breakfast, which often consists of tuna fish and a piece of toast.

Thereafter, Kruschen is off to Paramount Studios. Instead of having lunch, he dashes over to an indoor Hollywood tennis club to devote a half hour to improving his strokes with a ball machine.

Like many another middle-aged man, he wages a constant battle against added poundage. But Kruschen is handicapped by the fact that Violet and his mother-in-law are both of Italian extraction and extraordinarily fine cooks. Indeed, Violet's mother is a professional chef.

"It's tough to stay on my diet with Vi's mother doing most of the cooking," says Kruschen.

"They've both taught me how to prepare Italian specialties and I really have to watch myself at dinnertime."

Kruschen usually is home from the studio by 6 p.m. and in bed at 11.

On weekends the Kruschens customarily get out of town for a change of pace and scenery. Their favorite destination is San Francisco, where some of Jack's relatives live.

While touring Europe and Asia, the couple learned to take time out to visit old churches, museums and points of historical significance. They stop frequently when driving in the American west to do the same thing.

Kruschen is an informal man. He likes to slop around in denims, sandals and a T-shirt. Violet often scolds him for wearing tattered T-shirts, but her husband just shrugs and laughs.

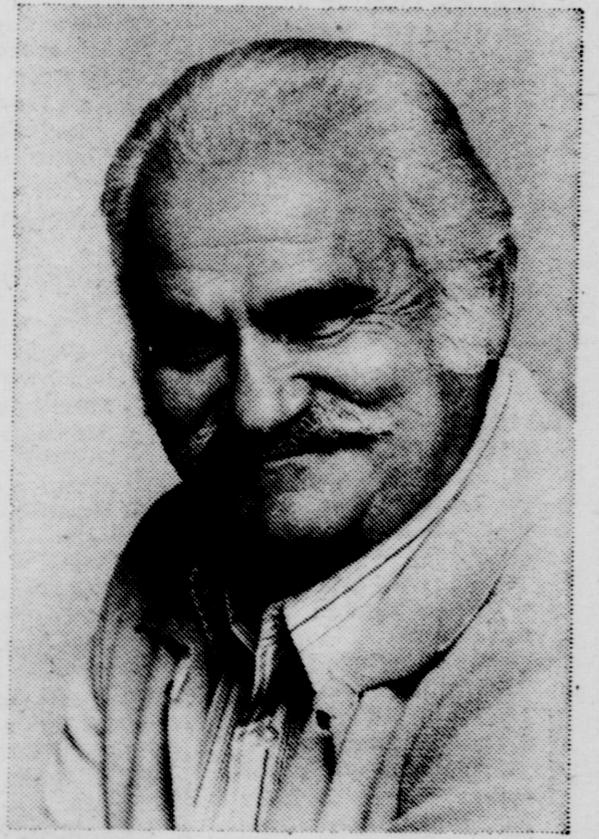
In the back of his mind Kruschen is thinking about buying another house with more property around it. He has become, in addition to a fisherman and carpenter, a gardener.

The large patio and somewhat cramped garden are adorned with pots and boxes, which Kruschen makes himself, filled with flowering plants of every description.

For the past couple of years he has been raising fruit trees from seed, a difficult accomplishment. He also grows vegetables and herbs in the gardne.

"I've come to love the soil," he says. "As I get older I'd like to devote more time to developing a large vegetable garden and citrus orchard."

(UPI)



Jack Kruschen plays the oversolicitous father of a grown son who wants independence in the comedy series "Busting Loose" Mondays at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 2.

This is not your average book sale. When you talk about the Brandeis Used Book Sale you're talking a 15,000 square foot tent sitting in the midst of the Edens Plaza Shopping Center and more than 200,000 books inside.

A committee of women who are as much book lovers as philanthropists, work year round packing, sorting, pricing and collecting books for the sale. Proceeds go to the Brandeis Library and the organizers bring in a bundle.

Education Editor Pam Bigford has gone to the sale religiously for the past seven years. ("Except for a couple years when I was in college and they inconveniently held it during finals week. I would have rather gone to the sale but my mother thought finals were more important," she said, half in jest.)

Pam begins talking about the upcoming sale about mid-January and was a natural to write the story. If you're a book lover this one is for you. Page 4.

There's a small store in a residential neighborhood of Villa Park that looks like a typical corner market painted bright red. Inside, however, are shelves of treasures, antiques, collectibles and, best of all, comic books. The owner of the store is Hank Franklin, a person who loves people and traded in a corporate job for this little store. He's a gentle man who enjoys having neighborhood kids come in to browse, offers his customers a cup of coffee and feels comfortably at home surrounded by things from the past. He's also organizing an event for comic books lovers. Page 3.

GREAT CAESER'S GHOST!

Superman is worth a fortune! So is Archie! Captain Marvel! and all the other favorite comic book characters.

Comic book dealer Hank Franklin stands amidst bags full of comic books in his Villa Park store.

by Dorothy Oliver

Now is the time to rummage through the attic, clean out the garage, tear apart the basement, search through the boxes hidden under the staircase and retrieve a few valuables.

Look for comic books.

Look for those slick covers with the faces of Archie, Superman, Batman and Richie Rich. If you find the first Action comic ever printed, the one where Superman made his first appearance, you've got $5,000 worth of comic book in your hands. Even better, look for the first Marvel Mystery comic printed in 1939 which introduced heros like the Human Torch and Sub Mariner. This one has a market value of $7,000 and has sold for as high as $10,000.

Hope that those old comics are in good shape, that you didn't read them in the bathtub in your youth or tear out ads for decoder rings. Hope that they're still there and you didn't give them away to a young cousin when you felt you were too old. And hope that you were a weekly buyer who faithfully bought up the new comics of a series on allowance day.

Just think. You may be worth a fortune.

Comic book collecting has become a big business with hundreds of collectors and dealers in the United States. They have become a popular and expensive collectible at a time when nostalgia has spurred this young nation to buy up anything from the past.

Hank Franklin, a 47-year-old father of five, is one of those fascinated by the newfound popularity of comic books. A few years ago Franklin sat behind a desk issuing credit cards for a major oil company and hating every minute of his plastic, impersonal job. Today he stands behind the counter of BJ's Country Store, pouring a cup of coffee for a regular customer, selling penny candy to neighborhood kids and ringing up sales of the comic books he sells.

The Country Store, 260 N. Ardmore Ave., Villa Park, was a corner market when it went up for sale about six years ago. The timing was right. Franklin's company of fifteen years was moving from the area and management disliked their maverick credit card division employe as much as he disliked their computerized world. The store offered him the opportunity to be his own boss and get into a "people" business.

The candy and a few grocery items are all that remain of the original stock. The shelves of food gave way to bags of old comics, a collection of old paperbacks and turn-of-the-century hardcover titles.

The back of the store is crowded with antiques and collectibles supervised by Hank's wife, a collector of antique dolls, ink well sets and other knick knacks. Behind the store is a frame garage packed to the rafters with the spillover from the store. When the weather is good, Franklin will set up an impromptu garage sale out back, selling and trading with neighbors and other dealers.

The Country Store is a treasure chest for those who hunt for 1925 erector sets, wooden egg cases, emigrants' trunks or fireman helmets.

But it is the comics that catch the eye.

Franklin has a "small collection" of 8,000 comics, small when you consider that some stores have 40,000 titles and more. He considers himself a dealer rather than a collector. "Where I get my pleasure is in gathering things for other people."

Like other dealers, Franklin is always on the lookout for a find. He sets up booths at flea markets and sometimes runs into a customer with a stash of comic books he's ready to sell. He patronizes garage sales in search of the books and keeps tabs on what other dealers have to offer.

Carefully he brings out a new acquisition. They're called "Weird Tales," magazine-sized books printed on comic book paper, popular in the mid-'30s and '40s.

The books are in perfect condition, protected from the tatters of age by plastic covers. He picked them up at a flea market and stands to make a handsome profit.

"I buy from collectors who need the money, from people who clean out their attics, at garage sales. People aren't really attuned to what they have in these comics," he said.

He uses the "Comic Book Price Guide" and a number of other pricing books to determine value. Some sell for little more than the original buyer paid for them while others — particularly those that introduce new characters — run into the hundreds of dollars.

Comic collecting has been going on since the books made their debut in the '30s, Franklin said. They were preceded in the late 1800s by comic strips and later by the thick, square "big little books" in the 1930s and '40s.

Their value increased substantially after World War II when thousands of the books were dumped during patriotic paper drives.

Their content reflects the social issues of the day. During the war years heros battled German aggression; modern books deal with ecology or the evils of drugs. Characters rarely age but their artists kept them dressed in the current fashion and updated language to include timely jargon.

Tom Moffatt walks in BJ's, accepts a cup of coffee "so strong it's going to get up and walk" and heads for the stacks of science fiction books. Moffatt is a serious collector of science fiction and Archie comic books. Within an hour he has found $16 worth of books to take home.

Moffatt's Archie comics are perfect examples of the changes in comics. The ageless high school students, led by the freckle-faced, carrot-topped Archie, have gone from "gee whiz" to "cool." Veronica and Betty traded in their bobby socks and ankle-length skirts for minis and midis. Even their faces have changed as new artists take over the strip.

The comic book has secured its place in history and rather than being a waste of allowance money, Franklin sees them as "tools that further reading habits. If the education system were to use this source wisely they could get more kids to read." He remembers when reading a Classic comic would interest him in tackling the real book and points out that a number of universities, including Northwestern in Evanston, have extensive comic collections in their libraries.

"The most popular comics," said Franklin, "were the superheros. And they have changed a great deal over the years. Superman was not vulnerable as a rule as a being from another planet and that is very different from today. Superman and Batman have been humanized because they have to compete with other humanized heros. Take Spiderman. He's one of the most human heros you can have. He has all kinds of phobias — all the same problems we have."

Franklin has organized a comic book and antique phonograph records show where buyers, sellers and traders will converge Sunday at the Lombard Veterans Memorial Hall, 635 N. Parker Dr., Lombard from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The show will be co-sponsored by the Lombard VFW Post, who will use their share of the proceeds to help buy the Memorial Hall.

Franklin expects about twenty dealers to have booths at the show. "If it goes over we'll have it again. We're shooting for a second one on the fifth Sunday in October."

In the meantime Franklin will tend the counter during the week and pack up his books on Sundays to work the flea markets in the area, and continue to add to his "small collection."

"We don't make much money here," he said. "But we have a hell of a good time." §

The Brandeis Book Sale is not your ordinary used book sale. It's a project that takes a year to put together and culminates with 200,000 books on sale under the big top.

by Pam Bigford

If you are the type of person who buys a box of books sight unseen at an auction because you can't resist them . . .

If you spend hours in book stores pouring over expensive volumes you can't afford . . .

If the sight of a used book store sign draws you inside like a magnet to spend hours gleefully pawing through stacks . . .

Then have I got a book sale for you.

The name is the Brandeis Used Book Sale, the largest used book sale in the world, and it begins tonight in Wilmette.

Housed in a sprawling yellow-and-blue striped circus tent filling up most of the Edens Plaza parking lot, the fair offers more than 200,000 used books with at least 100,000 of them selling for less than $1.

Sponsored annually by the North Shore chapter of the Brandeis University National Women's Committee, the week-long fair is not only the largest but probably the best-organized and undoubtedly the most eagerly anticipated.

"People who used to live in the Chicago area tell us when they come back to visit their families, they plan their vacations around the fair," said Marsha Goldstein, one of the Brandeis women's committee members.

When the book fair first opened in 1959, it attracted only local people. This year the mailing list contained names of 20,000 devotees living in thirty states and four foreign countries.

The 1959 book sale was the brainchild of an unknown member of the North Shore chapter to raise money for the Brandeis University libraries in Waltham, Mass. The sale consisted of a paltry 6,000 books collected and sorted in members' basements. After three years the sale had outgrown all available storefronts, and the women were catching on that appealing to the miserly book-lover was an idea whose time had really come.

The fair has been held at Edens Plaza, Lake Avenue and Edens Expressway, since 1963. It has mushroomed from a 3,200-foot tent that year to a tent of more than 15,000 square feet in 1977 — and even that isn't enough space. A separate checkout tent with a long row of cashiers has been added.

"In 1959 the volunteers did all the work for the fair the week before. Later it was the month before, and then in January. Now we start working on next year's fair the minute the tent closes on this one," said Mrs. Goldstein. The Brandeis women now maintain a rented warehouse in Highland Park and work year-round sorting, packing and pricing the books, and even have a hotline with a listed phone number for book donations.

"People come to the fair every year and think it just pops out of the parking lot," Mrs. Goldstein said. "They don't realize how much time and effort goes into getting it together."

The fair has in fact become such big business that for security reasons the Brandeis women don't even like to talk about how much money flows through the tent. Suffice it to say that Mrs. Goldstein admitted the North Shore chapter increased its donation to the Brandeis libraries in 1976 by $25,000 more than it's 1975 contribution.

The best part is that the big bucks are produced by a lot of customers spending just a few dollars to get a disproportionate amount of goods and pleasure. Because the fair has so much of what so many love — bargains in books — people have gone absolutely bananas over it. It's almost as much fun to sit around and check out the people as it is to check out the books.

Last year there were more than 1,000 fans of the sale lined up at noon waiting for the 6 p.m. opening time, Mrs. Goldstein said. Toting lounge chairs, picnic baskets, Kentucky Fried Chicken and shopping bags, some with children strapped to their backs, they sit and wait for the tent to open.

One man showed up shortly after 6 p.m. in top hat and tails. His son, he said, had the nerve to get married on the opening night of the Brandeis Used Book Sale, so the receiving line at the reception would have to do without him until he'd made his literary selections.

"I can't believe it, but there's a cult that's developed around this fair," Mrs. Goldstein said. She described one North Shore group that plans an annual party around opening night. One party-goer is paired off with another he doesn't know well and they are told to chat with each other for 15 minutes. Then they pile into cars and head for the Brandeis fair to purchase a book each thinks the other would want. They get to do their own shopping during this prime time, of course. A buffet caps the evening.

Although fair veterans like these know exactly where to head in the gigantic tent to uncover books just for them, even a rookie would have no trouble finding his way around this exceptionally well-organized event.

The books are packed tightly on groups of tables organized into categories. Signs labeled "law," "philosophy," "humor," "children's,"or whatever hang neatly over each island of tables.

The books are packed tightly on groups of tables organized into categories. Signs labeled "law," "philosophy," "humor," "children's,"or whatever hang neatly over each island of tables.

"We can only display about half the books at one time, and the tables don't even start to get bare until mid-week," Mrs. Goldstein said.

Although the aisles may be clogged with shopping carts borrowed from the nearby grocery store, and customers sporting at least one overflowing shopping bag can't seem to avoid bumping into each other, the atmosphere is amiable.

Family members who have already finished their shopping sprawl on the grass outside the tent or sit quietly inside reading their selections while others continue their search. Groups arriving together synchronize their watches, arrange a meeting place for two hours hence and race madly off in all directions. A student pouring over the paperback tables stops to ask a middle-aged man if he has run across a copy of Ayn Rand's "Atlas Shrugged." The man pauses, points to a table an aisle away then hesitates again. Or maybe it was over there . . .

Whatever your interest, the slogan is "if you can't find it at the Brandeis Book Sale, it probably doesn't exist." One Northwestern University student said she had searched every new and used book store in Chicago for copies of some obscure Virginia Wolfe books needed for her master's thesis and turned in desperation to the Brandeis sale. She found them, and probably got them cheaper than she could have anywhere else.

Prices are a book fanatic's dream. Paperbacks average 40 cents while a copy of practically brand-new hard cover best sellers can be virtually stolen for a third of the price.

If that isn't enough to please the book addict's niggardly soul, wait until next Saturday and Sunday, bargain weekend, when you can buy any paperback in the tent for 10 cents and any hardback for a quarter. "The idea," Mrs. Goldstein said, "is to get the books back into the community." Leftover books, about 15 per cent of the total, are carted away free by social agencies so no books are carried over to next year's sale.

The books are sorted into thirty categories, and about 500 volunteers work in the tent, many of whom serve merely to straighten the books out and put more on the tables when others are snatched up.

Categories include American heritage, art and music, biography, business, children's, collector's items, first editions, foreign language, history, humor, law, literature, media, medicine, mystery, mysticism and occult, paperbacks, philosophy, poetry, religion, social science, sports and hobbies, travel and adventure and many more.

Especially good buys can be found in the category marked "sets" where a set of encyclopedias only a few years old can be had for a song.

Ever so often one of the Brandeis volunteers will be unpacking a motley box of books and happen upon a valuable find like a signed first edition or a rare book. These are sometimes placed into the fair's silent auction where patrons are allowed to put in sealed bids on the books.

Other years the auction has included first editions of the illustrated "Alice in Wonderland" and a first edition "Great Gatsby."

This year customers will bid on a first edition book by Mark Twain; a first edition of "For Whom The Bell Tolls" signed by author Ernest Hemingway; "Carl Sandburg" by William Golden signed by both author and subject; and catalogues published in 1840 of old silver and silver plate. And these are only a few of the selections.

Although she believes that most people know it when they're giving away a valuable book, Mrs. Goldstein said they never mention it when they donate their boxes of books. "We just find the valuable ones in with everything else. If a person is looking for a tax break, this is the way. The individual gets to take 20 per cent of the original value off his taxes. They estimate themselves what the books are worth."

Because people don't put the valuable books on top of the pile with labels marked "expensive," a couple of the Brandeis volunteers have had to develop expertise in spotting and pricing valuable volumes.

"We have people who know publishers, certain bindings, dates, authors," said Mrs. Goldstein. These women work with Yale Levin, an 80-year-old gentleman capped by a beret, who Mrs. Goldstein describes as "the greatest authority you can ever imagine," and who merely glances at the outside of a dusty old volume and says "Ah, yes, that was published in 1902 by . . ."

Very often a book will not be high-priced but will be the kind of thing people would collect rather than keep for bedside reading. These fall in a category called "collector's items." An example that Mrs. Goldstein morbidly suggested is a book on post-mortem techniques of the 1880s. (She insists it would be a real find for a book-collecting surgeon.)

Some people, she said, look for books with beautiful bindings and the subject matter is secondary. These volumes are called "coffeetable books" because they are rarely cracked by a reader but impress visitors to your living room.

While the Brandeis women and Levin try hard to spot every valuable book, "nothing at one time, and the tables don't even start to get bare until mid-week," Mrs. Goldstein said.

Although the aisles may be clogged with shopping carts borrowed from the nearby grocery store, and customers sporting at least one overflowing shopping bag can't seem to avoid bumping into each other, the atmosphere is amiable.

Family members who have already finished their shopping sprawl on the grass outside the tent or sit quietly inside reading their selections while others continue their search. Groups arriving together synchronize their watches, arrange a meeting place for two hours hence and race madly off in all directions. A student pouring over the paperback tables stops to ask a middle-aged man if he has run across a copy of Ayn Rand's "Atlas Shrugged." The man pauses, points to a table an aisle away then hesitates again. Or maybe it was over there . . .

Whatever your interest, the slogan is "if you can't find it at the Brandeis Book Sale, it probably doesn't exist." One Northwestern University student said she had searched every new and used book store in Chicago for copies of some obscure Virginia Wolfe books needed for her master's thesis and turned in desperation to the Brandeis sale. She found them, and probably got them cheaper than she could have anywhere else.

Prices are a book fanatic's dream. Paperbacks average 40 cents while a copy of practically brand-new hard cover best sellers can be virtually stolen for a third of the price.

If that isn't enough to please the book addict's niggardly soul, wait until next Saturday and Sunday, bargain weekend, when you can buy any paperback in the tent for 10 cents and any hardback for a quarter. "The idea," Mrs. Goldstein said, "is to get the books back into the community." Leftover books, about 15 per cent of the total, are carted away free by social agencies so no books are carried over to next year's sale.

is foolproof," Mrs. Goldstein said. "People can and do find very valuable books we've overlooked." Customers have opened books to find money stashed inside, and one found a critical essay of a book handwritten by the author.

Unlike many other sales where organizers get the best buys, Mrs. Goldstein swears there are no early sales and the Brandeis women have to wait for opening night like everyone else. Members are allowed to borrow a book to read, however, as long as they bring it back in time for the sale. Brandeis women are so honest they even return library books that are inadvertently donated.

Although Mrs. Goldstein initially professed that the Brandeis women are so heavily into the book fair because they are dedicated to bettering the quality of education, I suspected, and she finally admitted, that an equal motivation is that they have as much fun setting it up as patrons do going to it.

While the monetary benefits go to Brandeis, the volunteers "really feel we're doing something good for the greater metropolitan area of Chicago, too," said Mrs. Goldstein. "We're offering an opportunity to purchase books for a fraction of their price. Everyone comes out a little better off."

Hours for the sale are 6 to 10 p.m. today; 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday (closes early to prepare for bargain weekend); 6 to 10 p.m. Saturday, June 4 and 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. next Sunday, June 5. Admission tonight is $2.50; the rest of the week it's free.

Even if you buy a whole shopping cart full of delicious curl-up-and-read-by-the-fire goodies to last you until next year, don't feel guilty. It certainly won't have cost you much. And remember, when you get done with each boxful, just call the Brandeis Used Book Sale donation hotline; the Brandeis women will be more than delighted to pick up those books and sell them back to you next year. §

ATHENS - Once the cultural center of Western Civilization, Athens has become just another overcrowded, polluted city.

Cities are like people. Some become more distinguished and mellow with age but Athens, like a woman who has let herself go, has grown ugly. Her charms seem contrived and forced — her golden beauty replaced by neon.

So travelers have found other reasons to visit Greece, more than 1,400 reasons in fact.

At last count there were 1,425 islands in Greek territory, some large, some mere chunks of rock, some as yet undiscovered by tourists, some swarmed with travelers.

Looking at a map you see them scattered along the coastline and across the sea. Cruising on the blue-green waters these clusters of land are never far from sight. In the distance there is always another island — a mass of white rock covered with deep green foliage. It is as though some mythological creature took great hunks of uncut jade and cast them like pebbles into the sea.

On these islands one still finds the beauty and serenity of Ancient Greece along with the pleasures one comes to expect in modern travel. There are ancient civilizations and ruins to be explored, gleaming white houses and churches terraced on hillsides, clean, clear water and sandy beaches, sleepy villages and towns with small shops, peaceful sidewalk cafes and lively night spots.

A typical itinerary for Greece includes a few days in Athens, just long enough to see the Acropolis and visit a museum or two; a few side trips to other bits of antiquity on the mainland; and a cruise to the islands lasting anywhere from a day to two weeks or more.

Information for this article was gathered during a tour of Greece financed in part by the Greek National Tourist Organization. Air transportation was provided by Scandinavian Airlines.

For all its faults, Athens does have at least one good thing going for it. It has the Acropolis. One simply MUST stop in Athens when visiting Greece if only to see this sacred hill. To miss it would be like traveling to France and never laying eyes on the Eiffel Tower — it just isn't DONE, my dear.

Those of you who really do have a burning desire to see this famous site should waste no time in getting there. After centuries of standing gleaming in the sun, the grace and beauty of these famous ruins are in jeopardy. The marble is flaking away — a victim of air pollution. It seems that fumes from autos and oil burners used to heat homes in the city have combined with moisture in the air to form sulphuric acid.

Tourists are no longer allowed to enter the famed Parthenon but must admire this famous monument from afar. Guards are posted near the steps to ward off over zealous sightseers hoping for a closer look. The statues of six women, which form the columns of the Fifth Century B.C. Caryatide Porch, have been wrapped in plastic and are now being restored. And taxis and tourist buses are no longer allowed to ascend the sacred hill. As a result, tourists must climb to the entrance of the ruins on foot.

And speaking of feet, be sure to bring some comfortable shoes, preferably with rubber soles, when you go exploring on the Acropolis or any of the other ruins in Greece for that matter. The climb over huge chunks of marble, worn smooth by countless other tourists, can be both treacherous and painful to the feet.

The Acropolis is open every day from 7:30 a.m. to sunset and also can be toured at night during the period of the full moon. The Acropolis Museum, also open daily, contains some statues and parts of statues found on the site with drawings showing their original form.

From the sacred hill tourists get a magnificent view of Athens and some of the ruins and monuments nearby. There is the Areopagos from which St. Paul exhorted the Athenians, the Theatre of Herodes Atticus dating from 161 B.C., and near the foot of the Acropolis is the Theatre of Dionysos. Nearby is Pnyx Hill where the Council of the People convened, the Temple of Hephaistos which is called the Theseum, the ancient marketplace of Agora, the restored Stoa of Attalus and the Octagonal Tower of the Winds.

Another relic of ancient times in Athens is the Olympeion, the temple of Zeus, which was intended to be the largest temple in the city. Work began on it during the 6th Century B.C. but it was not completed until eight centuries later. Today only a few columns remain. Hadrian's Arch, near the Temple of Zeus, was built as a city gate by the Roman Emperor Hadrian.

The Stadium, a relatively new monument in Athens, was built in 1896 for the first of the modern Olympic Games. Made of gleaming white marble, it replaced the original stadium which was destroyed by the Turks in 330 B.C.

Churches from the Byzantine period of Greece also make for interesting sightseeing in Athens. Most date from the 11th and 12th centuries and one of the most famous is Old Mitropolis Church, the oldest and smallest Byzantine Church in Athens.

Lycabettus Hill, crowned by a picturesque little church which can be reached by cable-car, offers another panoramic view of Athens. Lycabettus, along with the Acropolis, protrudes up from the valley where the city lies. Looking like two humps on a camel, the hills are an odd site, and their placement there is the midst of the lowland looks almost accidental. A legend from mythology tells us the two hills are really two giant boulders that were thrown in a battle between two Titans.

Sights to see in modern Athens include the sidewalk cafes of Constitution Square, also called Syntagma Square; the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier; the Royal Palace where tourists gawk at those guards in their cute little skirts; and the National Garden, a green oasis in the center of the noisy, crowded city.

Crowded around the foot of the Acropolis is the old section of Athens called Plaka. This once was a charming old quarter with taverns, fine old houses and courtyards but today the spirit of commercialism has taken over and one finds a succession of strip tease joints, discos, and fast food establishments (would you believe Zorba's pizzeria?) There is something going on in Plaka virtually around the clock and even at four in the morning it's a noisy place.

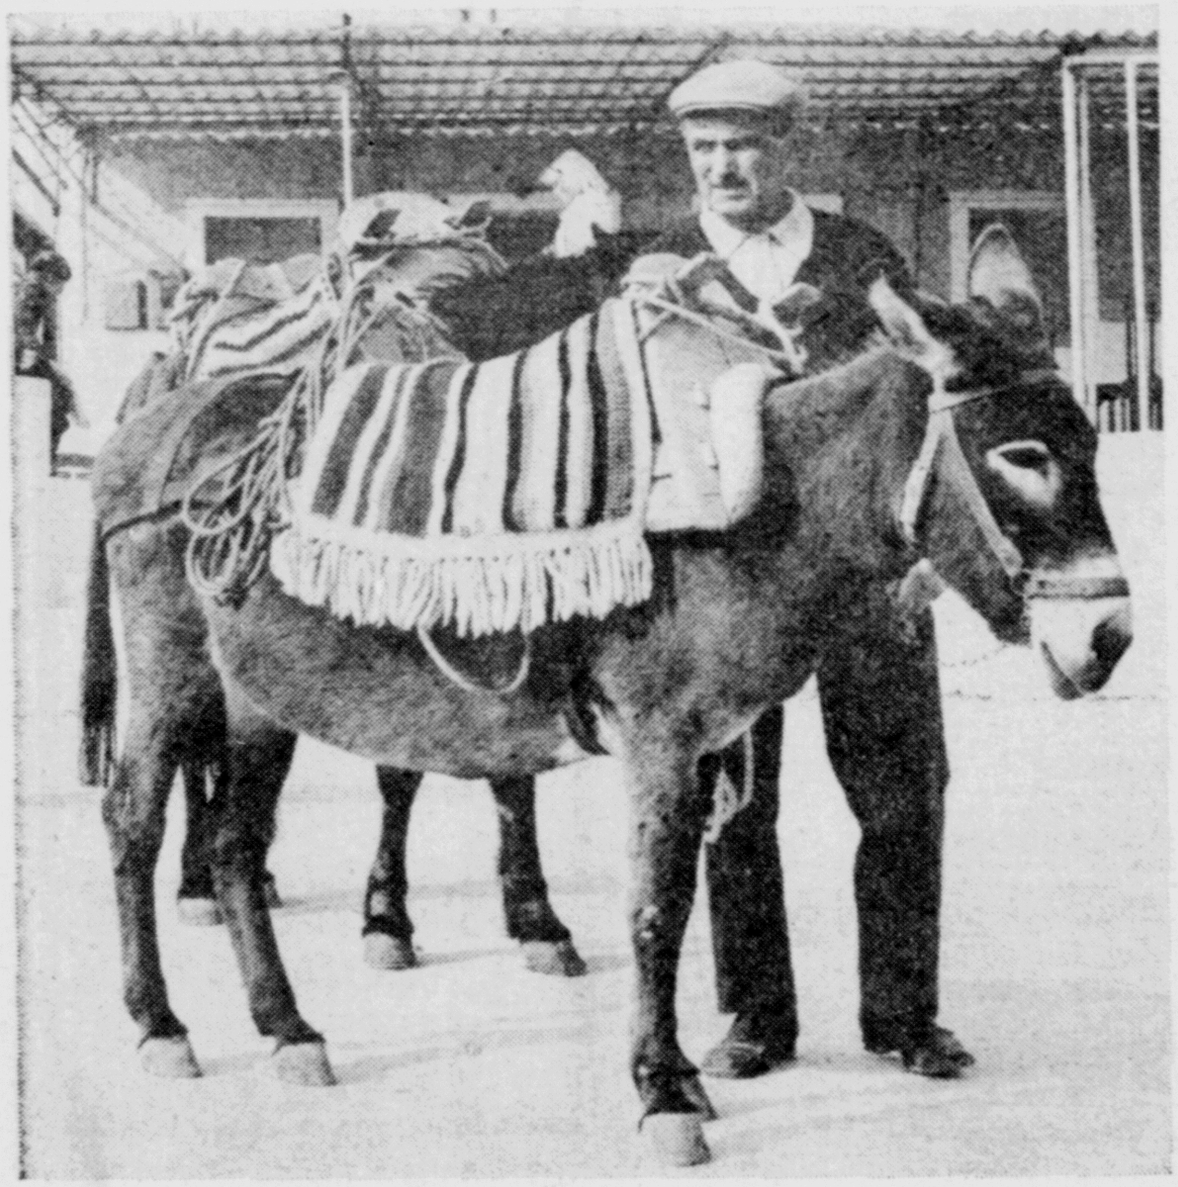
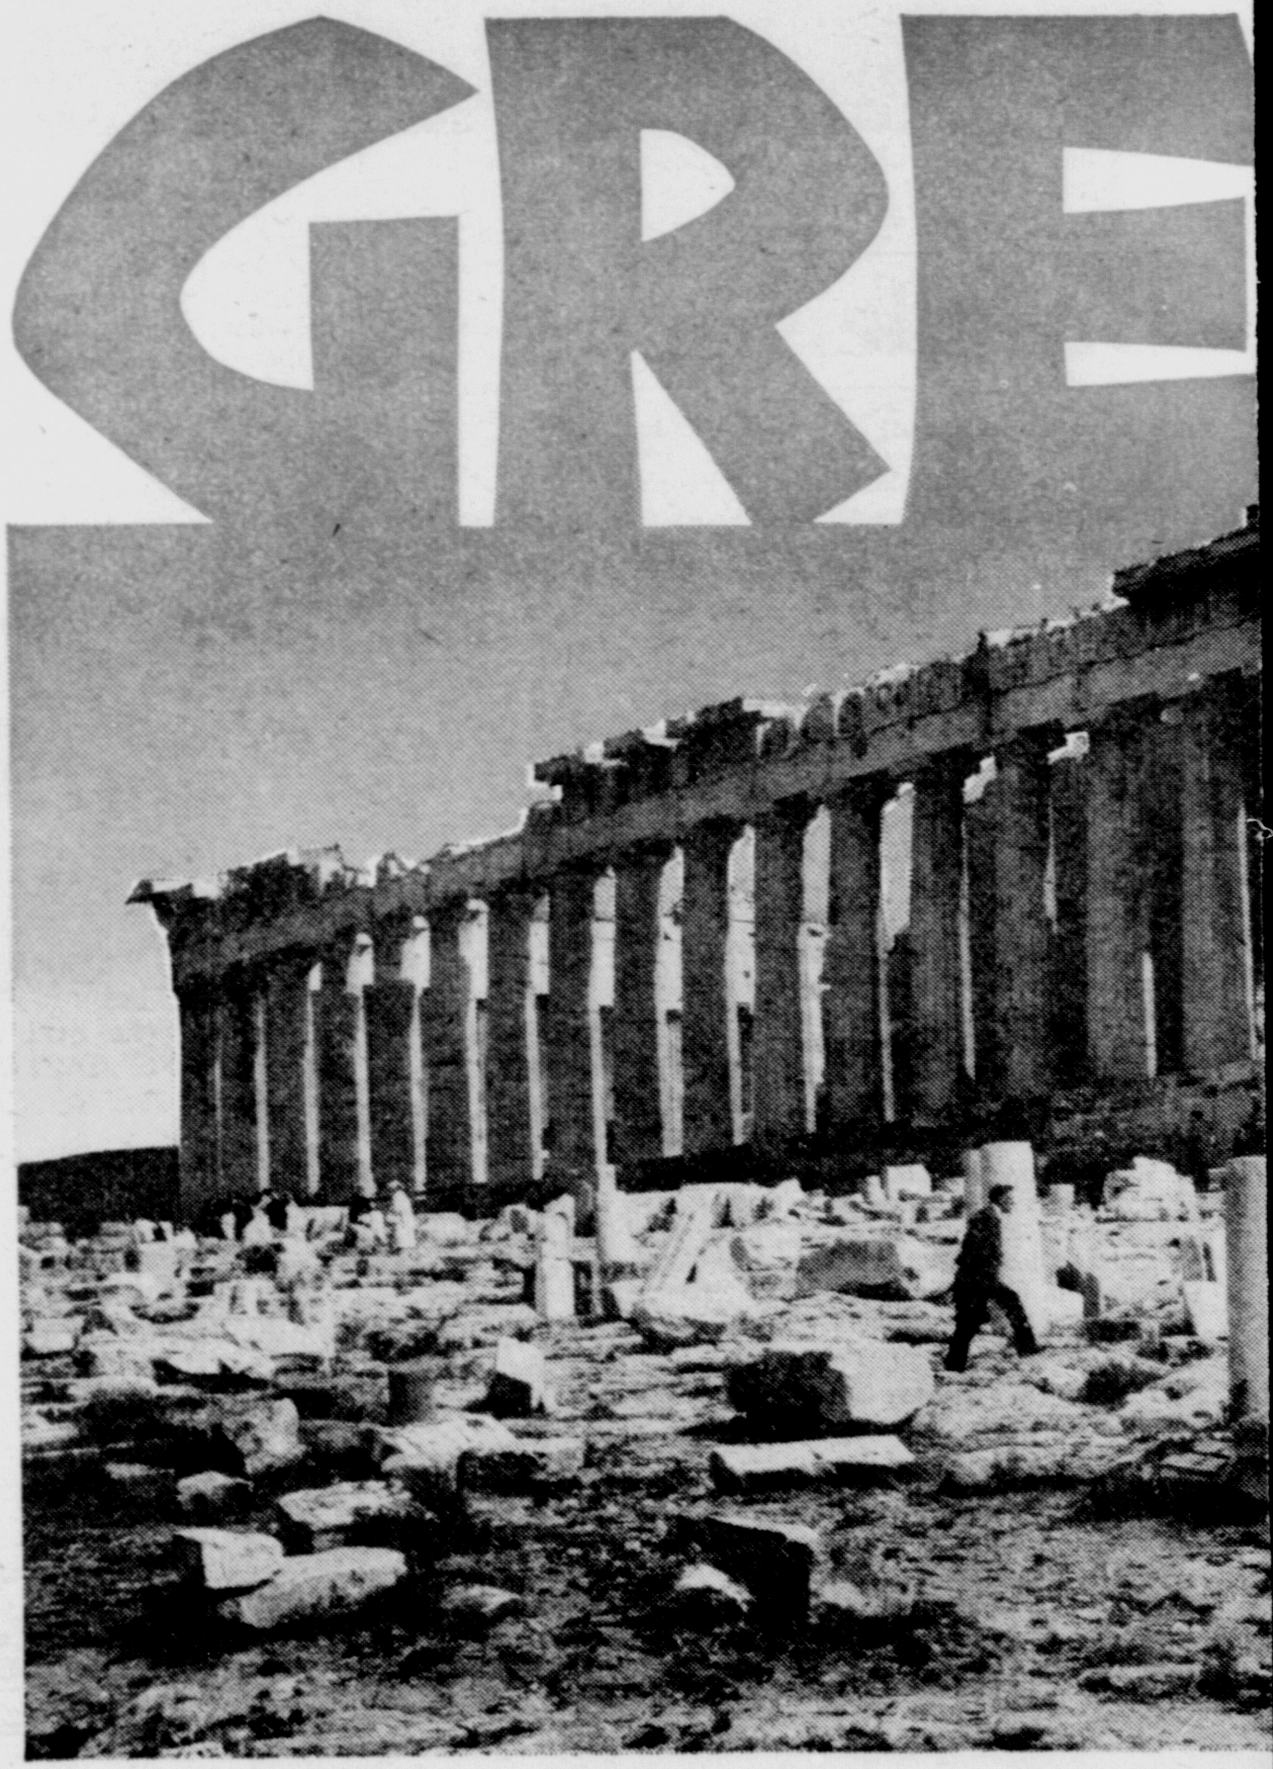
There is something going on in Plaka virtually around the clock and even at four in the morning it's a noisy place.





Getting around in Athens means taking taxis. Most tourists rely on cabs for transportation when they are not taking a conducted sightseeing tour and the taxis are fairly inexpensive, about eight drachmas per kilometer plus a surcharge after midnight. When you consider that a drachma is worth about three cents you need not feel you are being extravagant when you hop into a cab. A ride to the airport runs around $3.50.

Of course you can explore Athens on foot. If your hotel is near the Acropolis most of the sites in Athens proper should be within walking distance. However, tourists should realize that pedestians never have the right of way so look out for speeding taxis.

As for food, Greek food is renowned and to sample it you need go no further than Halsted Street right here in Chicago. In Athens as in the rest of Greece you will find souvlaka (skewered lamb), baklava (a nut pastry soaked in honey syrup) and moussaka (layers of minced meat and eggplant or artichoke topped with cheese and baked lasagna style). You'll also find plenty of seafood including octopus, cheese, wine such as retsina and ouzo an aniseed-flavored liqueur.

The average taverna meal will be less than $5 and instead of choosing from the menu you have the option of visiting the kitchen and peeking under each of the steaming pots before making your selection.

A number of excursions from Athens are available taking in Southern Greece and the Peloponnese Peninsula. There's Ancient Corinth, 64 miles from Athens, the ruins of a city dedicated to Aphrodite, Goddess of Love. Here one finds the Temple of Apollo and the Acrocorinth, a hill crowned with massive ramparts and fortifications.

In Epidarus, 110 miles from Athens, the big attraction is the most well preserved ancient theater in the world. The Theatre of Epidarus seats 14,000 and is renowned for its acoustics. Performances are held here each summer during the Epidavria Festival.

Olympia, 220 miles from Athens, is the site of the first Olympic Games held in 776 B.C. The Ruins of the Stadium, once capable of housing more than 20,000 spectators, can be visited. Sightseeing also includes the Temple of Zeus and the two museums in Olympia.

Delphi, on the mainland 110 miles from Athens, is the site of the Ancient Oracle found on the slopes of Mt. Parnassus. There are ruins of temples, a theater and stadium and visitors can also browse through the archeological museum.

Excursions from Athens by sea are readily available with several shipping lines offering a variety of island cruises departing from the port of Piraeus. There are so many islands that it is difficult to decide just where to start. The islands are grouped according to their location in the sea. There are the Saronic Islands in the Saronic Gulf, the Islands of the Aegean, the Dodecanese Islands, the Ionian Islands, the Sporades Islands, and to the south is one of the largest islands in the Mediterranean, Crete.

No matter how short your stay in Greece a cruise of the Greek islands is well worth your travel dollar because they show another side of Greece. They present a picture of Greece that is entirely different from the picture presented by Athens.

Several cruise lines offer a one-day cruise to three of the Saronic Islands — Aegina, Poros and Hydra priced around $30. A bus picks you up at your hotel around 8 in the morning and brings you back around 7:30 in the evening. Lunch is served aboard ship and is included in the price plus there are all sorts of other amenities on board that can be enjoyed for a small price — a cocktail bar, sun deck, and lounges and some ships even have boutiques, discos, and slot machines.

Aegina is the island closest to port and is

Excursions from Athens by sea are readily available with several shipping lines offering a variety of island cruises departing from the port of Piraeus. There are so many islands that it is difficult to decide just where to start. The islands are grouped according to their location in the sea. There are the Saronic Islands in the Saronic Gulf, the Islands of the Aegean, the Dodecanese Islands, the Ionian Islands, the Sporades Islands, and to the south is one of the largest islands in the Mediterranean, Crete.

No matter how short your stay in Greece a cruise of the Greek islands is well worth your travel dollar because they show another side of Greece. They present a picture of Greece that is entirely different from the picture presented by Athens.

Several cruise lines offer a one-day cruise to three of the Saronic Islands — Aegina, Poros and Hydra priced around $30. A bus picks you up at your hotel around 8 in the morning and brings you back around 7:30 in the evening. Lunch is served aboard ship and is included in the price plus there are all sorts of other amenities on board that can be enjoyed for a small price — a cocktail bar, sun deck, and lounges and some ships even have boutiques, discos, and slot machines.

Aegina is the island closest to port and is

A typical itinerary in Greece consists of a few days in Athens, a sidetrip to other remnants of Ancient Greece on the mainland, and a cruise to the Greek islands. The big attraction in Athens is, of course, the Acropolis and the Parthenon (center) while the Greek islands offer a variety of holiday pleasures including donkey rides up rocky slopes (left) and glasses of ouzo at sunny sidewalk cafes like this one (above) on Hydra.

GREECE:

usually the first stop on the one day cruise. It is also the most commercialized of the three islands. It attracts not only travelers from abroad but also the Athenians who often make this excursion on weekends.

The streets of Agia Marina, the port of Aegina, are lined with souvenir shops selling handicrafts, pottery, fisherman knit sweaters, jewelry and other mementos of Greece. Several shops selling women's clothing have cotton dresses and blouses hanging from the awnings and blowing in the wind like bright colored flags decorating the street and sidewalk.

Visitors can ride by bus or by donkey across the island to the Temple of Aphaia which stands on a pine knoll overlooking Aghia Bay. The Doric-style temple is reputed to be the best specimen of its type. On the way to the temple you pass through groves of pistachio trees. The nuts are a specialty of the island and can be bought fresh from vendors on the street.

For those who prefer swimming to antiquity there is a sandy beach near Agia Marina, a pleasant place to while away an hour until it's time to return to the ship. The blue-green water is so clean and clear you can see bottom several yards off shore.

The island of Poros is the next closest to Athens and it's merely a ferry ride across to the Peloponnese Peninsula. Cruising around the island the port suddenly comes into sight, a cluster of white-washed buildings, shops and restaurants. A navy cruiser lies at anchor in the bay and sailors saunter down the street passing old men sitting in the afternoon sun, their wrinkled hands quietly fingering a string of beads.

These beads, called worry beads, are a common sight in Greece on the islands as well as the mainland. Public use of the beads is strictly a male activity and very much a part of the cafe and taverna scene. The men dangle the string of beads between their fingers, letting them click in time with their thoughts. Storekeepers stand in their doorways flicking the beads as they watch tourists flit in and out of their shop. The combination of sound, feeling and motion, the Greeks say, has a tranquilizing effect.

A variety of worry beads are offered for sale from the common, inexpensive sort to the high fashion worry beads made of gold, silver and precious gems. There are some strands with beads the size of baseballs that are used as a household decoration.

The island of Hydra is the next stop and probably the most popular of the three islands on the one day cruise. As the ship draws close to the island the massive green covered mountains loom against the sky. Rocks are scattered everywhere and there are no sandy beaches. In the distance a string of white marks the shoreline and as the ship comes closer you recognize the shapes of gleaming white-washed buildings set on terraces ringing the natural horseshoe-shaped harbor. Set against the mountains, the port looks like a giant Greek theater and you are on stage. There is one difference, however. As the ship pulls ashore you are the one who applauds. The beauty of this idyllic place is breath-taking.

During the 19th Century Hydra was home for a group of sea captains who amassed great wealth and built magnificent mansions on the island. In 1821 they sacrificed their fortunes when they lent a hand as Greece fought for independence from the Turks. Today the island is an artist's colony. Shoppers find a higher grade of merchandise here — jewelry, sculpture and other ornaments in gold, silver and copper, pottery, tapestries, rugs and artwork. Balconies of two and three story buildings cast shadows over quaint sidewalk cafes with tables attended by waiters dressed in white shirts and black jackets, a napkin neatly drawn over an arm.

Hydra has an air of refinement. It is rumored to be the favorite Greek island of Jackie Onassis and the inhabitants often call Hydra the "Greek Capri," an honor that is refuted by the island Mykonos which also takes the title.

The bad thing about the one day cruise is it's not long enough. More than likely, after having had a taste of what the Greek islands have to offer, you will want more. These three islands are only the beginning for there are hundreds more awaiting discovery. You can visit them on extended overnight cruises or you can even charter your own yacht and like some modern Ulysses take off on your own Greek island odyssey. Yachts can be chartered for about $100 a day to $500 and up with or without crew. The cruising season runs from April to November.

Among the most popular Greek islands are Mykonos, Corfu, Rhodes and Crete.

Mykonos is a fashionable island with cubic white houses, quayside taverns and thatched windmills. The pace of Mykonos is never still with nightclubs, tavernas and cafes livening the atmosphere. The golden beaches and warm summer sea bring out the nature lover in everyone.

Corfu stretches out in a sickle-like curve at the entrance of the Adriatic near the coast of Albania. The chief town, also called Corfu, has a big Venitian fortress and both Italian and English influences are evident in the town's architecture which is characteristic of an Ionian island town. The island is dotted with villages smothered in flowers and the air is filled with the fragrance of orange and lemon groves.

Rhodes is the easternmost island in the Greek Aegean Sea. It is called the Island of the Sun and legend says that when he was allotting islands Zeus forgot to provide one for Apollo, the Sun God. Fortunately a new island rose from the sea and Zeus gave it to Apollo who named if after Rodos, a nymph whom he loved. People are still falling in love with Rhodes today.

The city of Rhodes is divided into two parts, old Rhodes and modern Rhodes. The old town lies within the walls of the fortress, the Knights of St. John, and in it can be found narrow streets, medieval inns, battlements and mosques. Modern Rhodes is a carefree place with luxury hotels, casinos and shops and a European atmosphere. Many organized tours of the rest of the island are available by bus or by boat. A popular excursion is to the ancient town of Lindos with the Acropolis of Lindos, the 3rd Century B.C. Temple of Athena and the medieval Fortress of the Knights.

Crete is the southernmost part of Greece and its wild and unspoiled scenery, caves and grottoes surprisingly close to modern hotels hold a special fascination for the visitor. Crete is the legendary home of the ferocious Minotaur, a monster half man and half Cretan bull. The main attraction on Crete are the Minoan palaces of Knossos, Phaestos and Mallia, the remains of a highly technical and artistic civilization that flourished between 2100 and 1100 B.C. Museums on the island contain the world's finest collections of Minoan relics — frescoes, vases, and jewels.

These and other islands all add their special seasoning to a vacation in Greece. Almost everyone who goes exploring in these waters has his favorite island for the islands each have their own special characteristics which appeal to different individuals. Perhaps one of these will be your favorite but who knows, perhaps you will discover your own island, a remote, uncharted paradise put there by some mythological deity for you to explore and enjoy thousands of years later. §

Pioneer era recreated during Railsplitting Days in Arcola

The sights and sounds of spring on a pioneer Illinois farm will be recreated again this spring during Railsplitting Days at Rockome Gardens near Arcola, Ill.

Visitors will hear the sounds of the woodsman's axe today and tomorrow and June 4, 5 and 11, 12 as they witness this annual event. But unlike spring on the farm of more than 50 years ago when everyone was expected to lend a hand, visitors will be expected to do nothing more than crowd up close and watch. There will be old-timers around to explain the machinery and reminisce about their own youthful experiences on the farm. And, as the wood chips fly, you'll think back to the days when Abraham Lincoln split rails for his father Tom's farm not far away in Macon County.

making, and old-fashioned shingle sawing with steam power. All of the railings made will be used for fences at Rockome Gardens. There will also be demonstrations of glass blowing, chair caning, pottery, quilting and other crafts by craftsmen from Illinois and Indiana. Visitors can also see all the regular Rockome craftsmen practicing blacksmithing, harness making, candle making, weaving and jewelry making. Don't miss the homemade corn meal being stone ground at Yoder's Grist Mill.

Visitors will want to stroll through the 10 acres of flower and rock gardens that have made Rockome famous. Old Bagdad Town, the recreated frontier Illinois village, will be busy with all sorts of activity. The bakery will be making fresh bread and hot cinnamon rolls, the blacksmith will be shoeing horses, and the Calico Craft Shop will be stocked with penny candy, handmade clothes and candies and other gifts. Visitors to the Amish farmhouse will see a variety of Early American antiques and colorful quilts. Children enjoy feeding the chickens and goats or climbing to the 35-foot-high tree house or exploring the Haunted Barn.

One of the best ways to see Rockome Gardens is from the seat of a buggy pulled by two easy-paced horses. At the end of the day visitors may wish to partake of dinner at Rockome's Family-Style Restaurant at the Dutch Kitchen on Main Street. The Rockome Store sells Dutch cheese and an assortment of unusual gift items.

Rockome Gardens is located in the heart of Illinois Amish Country. Here visitors will see windmills and tall, square wooden water towers, family buggies and bountiful gardens and orchards. You may see Amish men farming with their teams of huge Belgian horses unless you visit on a Sunday when the Amish are in church. The Amish are a religious sect originally from Germany and Switzerland. They prefer not to be photographed and appreciate your caution when sharing the road with their buggies. As you slow to pass, give a friendly wave.

Rockome Gardens is located about five miles west of Arcola. Arcola is about a four-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs and is located about 30 miles south of Champaign off I-57. For more information contact Rockome Association of Commerce, Rural Route 2, Arcola, Ill. 61910, phone 217-268-4226.

Conservation Summits are unusual vacations

Need ideas for a unique vacation?

The National Wildlife Federation suggests NWF Conservation Summits this summer as the answer to the annual problem of what to do and where to go to enjoy nature.

Designed for people of all ages, Conservation Summits are six-day outdoor workshops that go "back to nature" at an Adirondack lakeside retreat, on Colorado's Continental Divide, or in a quiet cove of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Activities at each Summit are tailored to the location, with a wide range of nature-oriented programs for individuals or families with children.

NWF's three Summits for 1977 are: Blue Ridge Summit, Black Mountain, N.C., June 26-July 2, Rocky Mountain Summit, Estes Park, Colo., July 6-12, and Adirondack Summit, Silver Bay, N.Y., July 31-August 6.

Experts at the Summits teach courses that include astronomy, wildlife ecology, fresh water biology, backpacking, outdoor cooking, birding, nature photography, wildflower identification, folk history, and geology. Teachers and students may earn academic credit by participating in a Conservation Summit.

For details about all aspects of the Summits, including price and courses, write: National Wildlife Federation Conservation Summits, Dept. CS-2, 1412 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Monarch Sun begins new Caribbean itinerary

Starting June 12, the SS Monarch Sun will begin a new itinerary, calling at Cap Haitien, San Juan, St. Thomas and Puerto Plata.

The 23,500 gross ton ship will sail every Sunday out of Miami, Fla. on week-long cruises. Minimum rates for offseason start at $495, and $525 for season.

The ship will arrive in Cap Haitien at 8 a.m. Tuesday, departing at 3 p.m. On Wednesday at 5 p.m. she visits San Juan with departure at 2 a.m. Her call at St. Thomas is set for 8 a.m. on Thursday, with a 5 p.m. sailing, and on Friday at noon, the SS Monarch Sun arrives in Puerto Plata, departing at 5 p.m. Arrival back in Miami is scheduled for 8 a.m. Sunday.

Located in northern Haiti, Cap Haitien is noted for its famous donkey ride up to the Citadel, which was built by King Henri Christophe in 1804 to protect Haiti from possible marauders. Tourists can explore the ruins of San Souci Palace, which an earthquake destroyed in 1842. Shoppers hie themselves to the local marketplace to buy mahogany utensils and statues, primitive art and straw products.

Miami Hotel gets sexy image

The opulent Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach plans to work its way out of hock by "providing the elements" of sex for the swinging singles trade.

Nude sunbathing, a videotape dating service and romantic moonlight swims dominate the hotel's new Le Club Romantique, a $154 one-week singles' vacation package plan.

"We're not providing sex, but we're providing the elements," said Appollonia Kessler, director of the program. She said the Fontainebleau, which filed for bankruptcy last month, is offering the singles vacation to counter the image that Miami Beach is just for old folks and conventioneers.

In the package, the hotel provides such conventional activities as tennis, beach parties with bonfires, dances in a remodeled disco bar, snorkeling, sailing and scuba diving. And at no added expense, the vacationing single can be videotaped so a member of the opposite sex can check out what's available before making a "blind" date.

The coed nude sunbathing will be restricted to the hotel's rooftop solarium, and Ms. Kessler said she doesn't see any problem with the sex-oriented promotions. "We live in a promiscuous society. Something like nude sunbathing creates a little excitement. It's something you're not going to do in your home in Buffalo, N.Y., with your mom and dad or relatives around," she said.

Monarch Sun begins new Caribbean itinerary

Starting June 12, the SS Monarch Sun will begin a new itinerary, calling at Cap Haitien, San Juan, St. Thomas and Puerto Plata.

The 23,500 gross ton ship will sail every Sunday out of Miami, Fla. on week-long cruises. Minimum rates for offseason start at $495, and $525 for season.

The ship will arrive in Cap Haitien at 8 a.m. Tuesday, departing at 3 p.m. On Wednesday at 5 p.m. she visits San Juan with departure at 2 a.m. Her call at St. Thomas is set for 8 a.m. on Thursday, with a 5 p.m. sailing, and on Friday at noon, the SS Monarch Sun arrives in Puerto Plata, departing at 5 p.m. Arrival back in Miami is scheduled for 8 a.m. Sunday.

Located in northern Haiti, Cap Haitien is noted for its famous donkey ride up to the Citadel, which was built by King Henri Christophe in 1804 to protect Haiti from possible marauders. Tourists can explore the ruins of San Souci Palace, which an earthquake destroyed in 1842. Shoppers hie themselves to the local marketplace to buy mahogany utensils and statues, primitive art and straw products.

The opulent Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach plans to work its way out of hock by "providing the elements" of sex for the swinging singles trade.

Nude sunbathing, a videotape dating service and romantic moonlight swims dominate the hotel's new Le Club Romantique, a $154 one-week singles' vacation package plan.

"We're not providing sex, but we're providing the elements," said Appollonia Kessler, director of the program. She said the Fontainebleau, which filed for bankruptcy last month, is offering the singles vacation to counter the image that Miami Beach is just for old folks and conventioneers.

In the package, the hotel provides such conventional activities as tennis, beach parties with bonfires, dances in a remodeled disco bar, snorkeling, sailing and scuba diving. And at no added expense, the vacationing single can be videotaped so a member of the opposite sex can check out what's available before making a "blind" date.

The coed nude sunbathing will be restricted to the hotel's rooftop solarium, and Ms. Kessler said she doesn't see any problem with the sex-oriented promotions. "We live in a promiscuous society. Something like nude sunbathing creates a little excitement. It's something you're not going to do in your home in Buffalo, N.Y., with your mom and dad or relatives around," she said.

Fish Bait recalls 42 years on the Hill

by Steve Brown

Few men would be able to step away from the power of the U.S. Congress and adapt to a new lifestyle without pining away for the old days.

But William Mosley "Fish Bait" Miller, who spent 42 years working for the U.S. Congress — 28 as the doorkeeper — says he is content to live out his retirement in Atlanta, Ga., with his daughter and grandchildren.

The son of a schooner captain who deserted his family, Fish Bait retains a down home flavor in his mannerism and character.

"I am just a country bumpkin, I am not an author," Miller is quick to note. He backed away from an invitation to sign on with a speaker's bureau that has handled a number of dignitaries including President Jimmy Carter.

Much like his book, Miller answers questions with long, winding anecdotes about his days working with former U.S. House Speakers Sam Rayburn and John McCormack who are his two picks for the best Congressmen he has seen.

Looking like he was mildly surprised, Fish Bait explains that he never intended to make his book a "revenge" effort against the congressmen in the Democratic Caucus who refused to vote his retention as doorkeeper in 1974.

"This is not a revenge book. They were scared to death, but I did not have any terrible trauma," the former doorkeeper said.

Miller said his retirement is "something you get used to and you look back and wonder how you stayed around so long."

Right now his life is wrapped in interviews and efforts to sell his memoirs.

"You know this is a pretty racket," he said, noting that maybe the venture should not be described in that way.

But Miller has found himself something of a celebrity and it takes a little getting used to for a man who started earning a living in his youth by holding a hatful of odd jobs in Pascagoula, Miss.

"We spent six hours just taping the segment for 60 Minutes," Miller said as he outlined his nation hopping travel itinerary.

Fish Bait said he enjoyed the opportunity to serve the congressmen and congressmen seemed to enjoy his being there.

While downplaying Miller's suggestion he was a confidant to leaders of the lower chamber, U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, said Fish Bait was always very helpful.

"Once I was back in Illinois and my wife was in an auto accident in Washington. Fish Bait tracked me down and told me before anyone else. I was grateful for that," Mikva remembered.

Although Fish Bait has produced a muted kiss and tell account of the Congress, he is careful not to burn any current members or suggest there are more tales of indiscretion that he has left out.

He has written about the shadier sides of people like Wilbur Mills and Wayne Hays, but he would rather talk about his meeting Queen Elizabeth and how the U.S. State Department decided he should go to protocal school so he might handle his next meeting with royalty the right way.

After calling Prince Philip the "most handsome brute in the whole world," Miller got the thanks of the late President Harry Truman for showing the royal couple around the capital.

Fish Bait also talks of presidents he has watched come and go at the White House and takes the time to defend Richard Nixon for an incident involving both of them:

"There was an item in Jack Anderson's column about former President Nixon choking me outside the House before addressing a joint chamber.

"He always joked around before making a speech and just squeezed a little harder. It was no big deal," Fish Bait explained.

But the days of royalty and presidents are over and except for recalling the serious and humorous days for interviewers as he makes the rounds promoting the book, Fish Bait is only a memory.

Congressmen remember him as a helpful aide and the public can recall the 68-year-old Southerner who still wears suspenders as the rather portly fellow who parted his hair down the middle and shouted "Mistah Speakah, the President of the United States."

FISHBAIT: THE MEMOIRS OF THE CONGRESSIONAL DOORKEEPER by William "Fish Bait" Miller as told to Frances Spatz Leighton (Prentice-Hall, $12.50)

Reviewed by Steve Brown

If you are looking for a lot of spicy new gossip about the trifles of your elected representatives in the U.S. Congress, do not pick up a copy of "Fish Bait".

In a day and age where the revelations of secretaries have toppled congressmen, William Miller seems content to recite the better known dalliances and little foibles generally attacking this august body with a feather duster.

Miller's effort is the latest in a continuing series of "as told tos" by Frances Spatz Leighton, who has distinguished herself with the writings of the former dog tender at the White House and Jackie O's White House secretary.

The writing is unimpressive and repetitive — Miller must tell his reader nearly a dozen times that former U.S. Rep. William Colmer, D-Mississippi, was responsible for getting him on the federal payroll.

Miller fills his books with hundreds of personal anecdotes and tales he collected during months of research in the Library of Congress. The result is a 366-page indexed volume that not only tells of his 42 years of service but other memorable moments since the founding of the nation.

Fish Bait — he dislikes the publishers having made his moniker a single word in the book — tells about the ghosts that have been seen in the capital, how Congress has spread its bureaucracy from one office building to three and tales of junkets, fringe benefits and visiting royalty.

Anecdotes — like the time during a heated floor debate two congressmen who tried to grab each other were nearly strangled by the microphones which were strung around their necks — fill the book.

"Fishbait" does little to explain the often complex workings of Congress and instead concentrates on both the already known affairs of its members and the activities of the two men Miller served most fervently, former U.S. House Speakers Sam Rayburn and John McCormack.

No effort is made to talk about the legislative efforts or the significance of the legislative process — a somewhat sad commentary for a man who was at the elbow of the powerful and had a front row seat for their activities.

But then this was not Miller's job. His task was to minister to the needs of the congressman and see that their newspapers were fetched and secrets kept.

First-time author Himmel sets his novel in Chicago

THE TWENTY-THIRD WEB by Richard Himmel (Random House, $8.95)

Reviewed by Holly Hanson

Beginning fiction writers generally are advised to write about what they know, and Chicagoan Richard Himmel has done that in part in his new novel "The Twenty-Third Web."

Set almost exclusively in Chicago and its suburbs, the novel is a confusing but interesting international thriller about a plot to destroy Israel by blackmailing rich Americans and forcing them to withdraw financial support from the country.

Along the way, Himmel throws in various subplots, some more successful than others, but all related to the conspiracy.

The blackmail victims include a homosexual pair whose love affair is endangered when the terrorists threaten to expose them in the National Enquirer; a beautiful but frigid model who is the ex-wife of an anti-Israel radical; her aging father, whose sore spot is his fling with a brassy career woman; and the Irish widow of a famed Jewish doctor who has taken to spending her days (and nights) in the company of attractive young lovers.

Although Himmel's plot is exciting, as a thriller should be, there are too many similar characters to keep straight and no clear rationale for the whole complicated plot. We know what the terrorists hope to accomplish, and we learn all about their vile and ingenious methods, but we never really understand why they want to put an end to Israel. Himmel obviously has had no experience as a paid assassin.

Himmel moves his characters all around familiar suburbs, including Lake Forest, where several of them live, to less glamorous Rolling Meadows, which is the location of a computer that is spinning out the blackmail plot.

Himmel is cleverly vague about these locations, referring to homes as near Lake Michigan and pinpointing streets only as eastbound tollway exits.

Because he is dealing with the jet set, however, he frequently allows his money-laden characters to visit Zorine's, a glitzy nightspot in Chicago which was decorated and is managed by Himmel.

If we can believe the frequent references by Chicago gossip columnists, the exclusive nightclub caters to a monied, slightly kinky crowd that enjoys the sleek, silvery decor and the mirrored dance floor.

Unfortunately, Himmel's novel is too much like his discotheque: its outside is polished, slightly flashy and quite attractive. But under its shiny skin, the structure simply doesn't hold together.

A well-written, poignant novel by Broughton

A FAMILY GATHERING by T. Alan Broughton (Dutton, $7.95)

Reviewed by Cathy Collison

First novels have a way of promising so much and delivering so little. But not so with "A Family Gathering."

T. Alan Broughton's first novel is both endearing and enduring. The tale begins with the Wright family traveling to cousin Bonnie's wedding. Bailey Wright, his wife Jacqueline, her simple-minded brother Edward, first are seen through the Wright's son Lawson's eyes.

Twelve-year-old Lawson soon copes with growing pains, falling in love with his cousin Bonnie. At the same time, Bailey, who recently lost his job, copes with middle-age through a frenzied involvement with Bonnie's bridesmaid Nora. Lawson, in trying to grasp something new and different, and Bailey, something old and forgotten, both neglect others.

Jacqueline's personal anguish pierces through their distance, but she too is unable to share or tend to others in the family.

Their isolation is all the more apparent against the backdrop of the wedding and the stable relatives, Brody, Esther, and Bonnie. Even they are absorbed in wedding preparations and fail to notice or properly understand anyone outside their circle. Sometimes, even Uncle Edward in his own dream world seems far closer to understanding the family's quiet grief.

Lawson, unable to grasp what Bonnie means to him, lashes out rudely at the relatives:

"Lawson was impatient and annoyed by the constant chatter and laughter. They all were so worked up and few of the things they said seemed worth laughing about. Finally he could not bear it anymore.

" 'Where's Bonnie?' he blurted, and his voice was so loud they all turned to him.

"... 'Voice changing, eh?' Brody winked. 'Growing up.'

Just as Lawson draws back, so does Bailey:

"But he was confused and from that moment very circumspect, watching his gestures and moods carefully for anything inadvertent. That was when a sense of danger began to come over him. His dreams, vague, fluctuating, would hang ominously into the day, or he would wake suddenly at night, heart pounding, certain someone or thing was prowling in the empty house below, and for the first time he began to think of going away, or removing himself from the people he loved for a while because he might be dangerous to them. But then, what would he do without them?"

Bailey, as his affair with the bridesmaid abruptly ends, just as abruptly runs toward the barn and a pistol.

The suicide attempt shatters both Lawson's and Jacqueline's lives. Broughton writes of no miracle healing in the following days. But the slow and painful coping of the Wright family offers a tender and bittersweet glimpse at a family's struggle for survival.

This rare novel is one that portrays the family in the perspective of a personal diary, polished to perfection by the artist.

Broughton's art is so intense the reader can't escape the anguish in "A Family Gathering." For he is able to draw each person out — each person caught in an emotional web and absorbed in the self, unable to deal with outsiders.

The crisis of the Wright family pulls in the reader. It dwells on the individual's need for enduring human bonds and the great sacrifice those bonds demand.

Political, sociological, economical traumas have no place here. Even analysis falls flat. Broughton's story is far too human to undergo such an approach. His book succeeds where others fail because this family needs no interpretation. We empathize because the struggle of the Wrights is a familiar one. So familiar it is, that Broughton can capture it in the words and thoughts of a 12-year-old visiting his harmless, simple-minded uncle at an insane asylum.

"Lawson did not understand. All he knew was that something so sweet and mild and loving was in the man's face that he wanted to cry. Instead he turned his back and stared down over the lawn toward the birdbath, but he held onto his uncle's hand as if it were the only thing that prevented him from floating off into the ragged blue sky.

"A nurse came soon. Visiting hours were over. He said goodbye, and Edward whispered, 'Don't go too far away,' and then Lawson walked home. He wasn't ready to run away yet, he decided."

Learn to live the good life as a single

Reviewed by Valerie Berg

Somehow, it's happened to you.

Maybe Mr. or Ms. Right never walked into your life. Maybe you know your marriage or love affair is in its death throes, but you can't face the thought of solitary TV dinners or the meat market atmosphere of a singles' bar.

However it's happened, you have joined the ranks of the millions of unmarried persons in this country — a situation for which you have been totally unprepared, according to Dr. Stephen M. Johnson, a clinical psychologist who specializes in counseling divorced and separated persons. "An independent existence, if it occurs at all, is usually of short duration and viewed as a temporary transition between young adulthood and the true maturity that involves monogamous coupling, marriage and the creation of a family," he writes in his book "First Person Singular: Living the Good Life Alone."

Why should anyone want to commit themself to living alone? Because, according to Johnson, a person who is able to live as an autonomous adult, who can appreciate or even learn to enjoy single life, will be more likely to enter future relationships by choice rather than in desperate need and will be more likely to succeed.

Suppose you know your current relationship is doomed. Then bury it, Johnson says, and start anew. He explains how to cope with the problems of uncoupling, including telling friends and family and negotiating the legal aspects of divorce. On the emotional side, he advises one to cope with the trauma of breaking up by reprogramming one's guilt-ridden or depressed thoughts into a more philosophical vein.

Your next step, he says, is to get reinvolved with life by learning new self-care skills such as cooking and budgeting for one, and by finding new interests, which not only can lead to meeting people, but can give one a sense of self-esteem. The abilities to tolerate living alone and to maintain a network of friends also are important. To increase skills on the job of being single, he explains a system of setting goals and reinforcing efforts to reach these goals.

And what book on the single life would be complete without a section on dating and sex? Don't expect to find Fifty Great Lines to Pick Up Women, or any of that "swinging" bit, however. Johnson's advice on meeting prospective dates is simple and rational: go wherever people are and work persistently — but not desperately — to meet them. In other words, go to singles' bars if you want, but don't take the whole scene too seriously.

And if you find yourself playing the dating game again and realize that you have forgotten the rules, Johnson offers a few concrete suggestions on where to go and what to talk about, but admits that nowadays there really are no rules. Likewise, when discussing sex, he doesn't give explicit advice on how to do it, but emphasizes the communicative aspect instead. The advantage of this no-rules dating scene, he says, is that persons can build a relationship based on their own needs rather than prescribed rules.

The best aspect of "First Person Singular" is its relaxed and rational tone. The author has been through the emotional wringer of divorce and the hassles of living the single life, and has come out of it with a clear head. His attitude of "don't worry, enjoy whatever an adult relationship has to offer" — which he admits is easier said than done — is a refreshing change from all the "swinging singles" hype found in Cosmopolitan and popular paperbacks.

Most of the book reads quickly, enlivened by numerous examples from the lives of Johnson's friends, patients and himself. In some places, though, he gets too psychological. For example, when he begins discussing decision diagrams, checklists and other homework type assignments, one begins to wonder if anyone really would go through all that trouble.

Another problem with the book is its idealism. Johnson writes in his conclusion that there is no longer an established "right way" in which to live, which sounds beautiful, but simply isn't true — yet — in this couple-oriented society. In spite of the soaring divorce rate and the many real advantages of single life, marriage still is the place to be.

But the principle behind the book is sound. Even though you may be single, life is filled with lots of interesting things, people and options in relationships — if you will only look for them.

'Scimitar' takes you on a roller coaster ride

SCIMITAR by Rick DeMarinis (Dutton, $8.95)

Reviewed by Genie Campbell

It is to the reader's advantage that Rick DeMarinis begins his latest novel, "Scimitar," on a nonthreatening course. It's like being on a roller coaster. The steady, slow climb to the top precedes the thrill and excitement.

For just when the senses are lulled, DeMarinis debarks on a bold, imaginative bizarre trip that travels over the sexual perversities of modern America and this nation's insatiable craving for industrial power.

However, when Project Scimitar, a contract arms limitation financed by the Arabs, comes up at work, Ponce fails to get the promotion that is rightfully his.

He consoles himself in a sexual romp with a very sexy neighbor, a big mistake for our hero. Ponce's troubles begin, and so does the roller coaster ride.

When the young lady is found strangled with her own pantyhose, Ponce is dubbed the "pantyhose murderer" and forced to flee for his life.

In trying to vindicate himself, Ponce realizes that all loose ends lead back to Scimitar and the big wigs involved with the project. What emerges is an industrial plot that is designed to alleviate all fear of possible nuclear war but would actually put every citizen at the mercy of the industrial hierarchy. Ponce is just a pawn.

Behind the project is Skylor Blue, an all-powerful grotesque bionic caricature of Howard Hughes. Machines supply him with everything except the miseries and everyday disappointments of the common man. But Blue needs those for his ultimate goal: eternal life.

DeMarinis' writing is comparered to the style of Kurt Vonnegut, though I find him easier to digest and his philosophy more matter-of-fact. His inventive curt description lends an imaginary flair to "Scimitar." And behind the outlandish escapade is a carefully outlined and thought provoking idea.

As Ponce discovered in his bizarre adventure, Scimitar "by disarming nations and individual citizens would guarantee the future: No one nation could accrue the power to impose its social, political, and economic arrangements on another."

Sometimes, even Uncle Edward in his own dream world seems far closer to understanding the family's quiet grief.

Lawson, unable to grasp what Bonnie means to him, lashes out rudely at the relatives:

"Lawson was impatient and annoyed by the constant chatter and laughter. They all were so worked up and few of the things they said seemed worth laughing about. Finally he could not bear it anymore.

" 'Where's Bonnie?' he blurted, and his voice was so loud they all turned to him.

". . . 'Voice changing, eh?' Brody winked. 'Growing up.'

" 'Do you feel all right?' and his mother reached across the table and touched his forehead with the flat of her hand, but he drew back."

Just as Lawson draws back, so does Bailey:

"But he was confused and from that moment very circumspect, watching his gestures and moods carefully for anything inadvertent. That was when a sense of danger began to come over him. His dreams, vague, fluctuating, would hang ominously into the day, or he would wake suddenly at night, heart pounding, certain someone or thing was prowling in the empty house below, and for the first time he began to think of going away, or removing himself from the people he loved for a while because he might be dangerous to them. But then, what would he do without them?"

Bailey, as his affair with the bridesmaid abruptly ends, just as abruptly runs toward the barn and a pistol.

The suicide attempt shatters both Lawson's and Jacqueline's lives. Broughton writes of no miracle healing in the following days. But the slow and painful coping of the Wright family offers a tender and bittersweet glimpse at a family's struggle for survival.

This rare novel is one that portrays the family in the perspective of a personal diary, polished to perfection by the artist.

Broughton's art is so intense the reader can't escape the anguish in "A Family Gathering." For he is able to draw each person out — each person caught in an emotional web and absorbed in the self, unable to deal with outsiders.

The crisis of the Wright family pulls in the reader. It dwells on the individual's need for enduring human bonds and the great sacrifice those bonds demand.

Political, sociological, economical traumas have no place here. Even analysis falls flat. Broughton's story is far too human to undergo such an approach. His book succeeds where others fail because this family needs no interpretation. We empathize because the struggle of the Wrights is a familiar one. So familiar it is, that Broughton can capture it in the words and thoughts of a 12-year-old visiting his harmless, simple-minded uncle at an insane asylum.

"Lawson did not understand. All he knew was that something so sweet and mild and loving was in the man's face that he wanted to cry. Instead he turned his back and stared down over the lawn toward the birdbath, but he held onto his uncle's hand as if it were the only thing that prevented him from floating off into the ragged blue sky.

"A nurse came soon. Visiting hours were over. He said goodbye, and Edward whispered, 'Don't go too far away,' and then Lawson walked home. He wasn't ready to run away yet, he decided."

Learn to live the good life as a single

Reviewed by Valerie Berg

Somehow, it's happened to you.

Maybe Mr. or Ms. Right never walked into your life. Maybe you know your marriage or love affair is in its death throes, but you can't face the thought of solitary TV dinners or the meat market atmosphere of a singles' bar.

However it's happened, you have joined the ranks of the millions of unmarried persons in this country — a situation for which you have been totally unprepared, according to Dr. Stephen M. Johnson, a clinical psychologist who specializes in counseling divorced and separated persons. "An independent existence, if it occurs at all, is usually of short duration and viewed as a temporary transition between young adulthood and the true maturity that involves monogamous coupling, marriage and the creation of a family," he writes in his book "First Person Singular: Living the Good Life Alone."

Why should anyone want to commit themself to living alone? Because, according to Johnson, a person who is able to live as an autonomous adult, who can appreciate or even learn to enjoy single life, will be more likely to enter future relationships by choice rather than in desperate need and will be more likely to succeed.

Suppose you know your current relationship is doomed. Then bury it, Johnson says, and start anew. He explains how to cope with the problems of uncoupling, including telling friends and family and negotiating the legal aspects of divorce. On the emotional side, he advises one to cope with the trauma of breaking up by reprogramming one's guilt-ridden or depressed thoughts into a more philosophical vein.

Your next step, he says, is to get reinvolved with life by learning new self-care skills such as cooking and budgeting for one, and by finding new interests, which not only can lead to meeting people, but can give one a sense of self-esteem. The abilities to tolerate living alone and to maintain a network of friends also are important. To increase skills on the job of being single, he explains a system of setting goals and reinforcing efforts to reach these goals.

And what book on the single life would be complete without a section on dating and sex? Don't expect to find Fifty Great Lines to Pick Up Women, or any of that "swinging" bit, however. Johnson's advice on meeting prospective dates is simple and rational: go wherever people are and work persistently — but not desperately — to meet them. In other words, go to singles' bars if you want, but don't take the whole scene too seriously.

And if you find yourself playing the dating game again and realize that you have forgotten the rules, Johnson offers a few concrete suggestions on where to go and what to talk about, but admits that nowadays there really are no rules. Likewise, when discussing sex, he doesn't give explicit advice on how to do it, but emphasizes the communicative aspect instead. The advantage of this no-rules dating scene, he says, is that persons can build a relationship based on their own needs rather than prescribed rules.

The best aspect of "First Person Singular" is its relaxed and rational tone. The author has been through the emotional wringer of divorce and the hassles of living the single life, and has come out of it with a clear head. His attitude of "don't worry, enjoy whatever an adult relationship has to offer" — which he admits is easier said than done — is a refreshing change from all the "swinging singles" hype found in Cosmopolitan and popular paperbacks.

Most of the book reads quickly, enlivened by numerous examples from the lives of Johnson's friends, patients and himself. In some places, though, he gets too psychological. For example, when he begins discussing decision diagrams, checklists and other homework type assignments, one begins to wonder if anyone really would go through all that trouble.

Another problem with the book is its idealism. Johnson writes in his conclusion that there is no longer an established "right way" in which to live, which sounds beautiful, but simply isn't true — yet — in this couple-oriented society. In spite of the soaring divorce rate and the many real advantages of single life, marriage still is the place to be.

But the principle behind the book is sound. Even though you may be single, life is filled with lots of interesting things, people and options in relationships — if you will only look for them.

'Scimitar' takes you on a roller coaster ride

SCIMITAR by Rick DeMarinis (Dutton, $8.95)

Reviewed by Genie Campbell

It is to the reader's advantage that Rick DeMarinis begins his latest novel, "Scimitar," on a nonthreatening course. It's like being on a roller coaster. The steady, slow climb to the top precedes the thrill and excitement.

For just when the senses are lulled, DeMarinis debarks on a bold, imaginative bizarre trip that travels over the sexual perversities of modern America and this nation's insatiable craving for industrial power.

Yet DeMarinis's message is so gleefully put at times, the true ramifications come off like cotton candy.

Arjay Ponce is a middle-aged suburbanite from Southern California who rationalizes life with a good-paying job at Dynablast Aerospace. He is security anesthetized. His life is not exciting, it is comfortable.

However, when Project Scimitar, a contract arms limitation financed by the Arabs, comes up at work, Ponce fails to get the promotion that is rightfully his.

He consoles himself in a sexual romp with a very sexy neighbor, a big mistake for our hero. Ponce's troubles begin, and so does the roller coaster ride.

When the young lady is found strangled with her own pantyhose, Ponce is dubbed the "pantyhose murderer" and forced to flee for his life.

In trying to vindicate himself, Ponce realizes that all loose ends lead back to Scimitar and the big wigs involved with the project. What emerges is an industrial plot that is designed to alleviate all fear of possible nuclear war but would actually put every citizen at the mercy of the industrial hierarchy. Ponce is just a pawn.

Behind the project is Skylor Blue, an all-powerful grotesque bionic caricature of Howard Hughes. Machines supply him with everything except the miseries and everyday disappointments of the common man. But Blue needs those for his ultimate goal: eternal life.

DeMarinis' writing is comparered to the style of Kurt Vonnegut, though I find him easier to digest and his philosophy more matter-of-fact. His inventive curt description lends an imaginary flair to "Scimitar." And behind the outlandish escapade is a carefully outlined and thought provoking idea.

As Ponce discovered in his bizarre adventure, Scimitar "by disarming nations and individual citizens would guarantee the future: No one nation could accrue the power to impose its social, political, and economic arrangements on another."

But Scimitar would signal the death of the defense industry. Companies relying on defense contracts would close their doors for good.

Occasionally DeMarinis gets so caught up in his futuristic sidetrips that our minds are fairly boggled. But only if you're not paying attention.

Forget that diet: skinny is passe, big is beautiful

GREAT BIG BEAUTIFUL DOLL by Stella Jolles Reichman (Dutton, $9.95)

Reviewed by Dorothy Oliver

May is the diet month. It's the time when women especially, stand before the mirror, picture themselves in their swimsuit and gag. Then they head for the diet books, diet pills and whatever else will help them shed 5, 10, 20 or more pounds before changing to a summer wardrobe.

I admit it. I'm one of them. And then I had to go and read "Great Big Beautiful Doll," by an incredible great big beautiful doll. Stella Jolles Reichman is 50 years old, 5 foot 8 inches, 199 pounds, measures 48-38-48, wears a size 22½ and says she is "proud of every ounce and inch." I feel so petite.

She is also rich and famous. She is the spokeswoman for about 200 Lane Bryant stores in the United States. She was born into the Jolles family, founders of the needlepoint industry and came to this country during World War II from Australia.

Here she graduated from Vassar and designed and ran the Jolles business in New York and Vienna for 20 years, winning fashion awards and authoring many fashion related how-to articles.

She is described by Wyatt Cooper, in a forward to her book, as a "creature of astonishing originality. Warm, unique and larger than life...overwhelming,...an air of embracing sensuality,...one fine figger of a woman..."

This woman has written a book that is filled with litle zingers like: "It doesn't turn me the slightest shade of green that Lee Radziwill is size 3 or size 10." and "the twentieth century may be remembered for creating its own particular plague — a dreadful malady of the Spirit that I call thin chauvinism."

She believes "life is living not dieting" but at the same time doesn't encourage eating into obesity and warns against dangerous overweight. She encourages the spirit by pointing out that history held large woman in high esteem. Venus de Milo was about 5 feet and measured 37-27-38. Rubens would not paint a woman who weighed less than 200 pounds.

She downgrades skinniness at every turn and uses as her motto: "Inside every emaciated woman lives a healthy woman waiting to be fed." She reveals that she too tried crash diets, a water-protein diet that helped her gain 10 pounds, a grapefruit diet that gave her heartburn and a two-day fast that made her feel faint.

When the pep talk is through she proceeds with chapters on grooming ("grooming is essential for us because we cannot hide."), make-up, exercise, and buying clothes — which includes a very small, forgivable plug for Lane Bryant. Her chapters are accompanied by photos of big, beautiful Stella: Stella in a leotard, Stella sitting in the almost altogether in front of a painting of nudes, Stella in a bikini, Stella on a scale. And Stella, although there is 199 pounds of her, looks darn good. She's living proof that the right clothes, a little firmness here, carefully applied cosmetics there, a big smile and an even bigger bustline is very attractive.

Even if she doesn't convince you to be satisfied with an ample figure, she does put her point across that life is more than a total on a scale. It is there to enjoy, and this lady enjoys it in a big way.

Stamp notes

The U.S. Postal Service will release a 13-cent commemorative stamp June 13 honoring the Marquis de Lafayette.

First day ceremonies will be held in Charleston, S.C., where, 200 years ago, Lafayette landed to join the American fight for independence.

Though not sponsored by the French government, Lafayette's participation in the Revolution is thought to have been a prelude to the French support which came later. He was commissioned a major general in the Continental Army and fought at the Battle of Brandywine and the Battle of Monmouth Court House. He also served as liaison between the Americans and Comte d'Estaing's French fleet, which arrived off Rhode Island in 1778, and commanded the forces in Virginia against Cornwallis. He was a favorite of George Washington, whom he called his "adopted father."

Lafayette has appeared on two earlier U.S. stamps — the 1952 commemorative which marked the 175th anniversary of his American landing (Scott. No. 1010) and the 1957 adhesive marking the 200th anniversary of his birth (Scott. No. 1097).

The vertically-oriented, jumbo-sized Lafayette commemorative was designed by Bradbury Thompson of Riverside, Conn. and is the second in the Bicentennial series of 1977, following the Washington at Princeton issue.

Collectors affixing their own Lafayette stamps to covers may submit them for first day cancellations to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Charleston, S.C. 29401" no later than June 28. There is no charge for this service.

Collectors wishing the Postal Service to affix the new issue stamps should send covers to "Lafayette Stamp, Postmaster, Charleston, S.C. 29401" enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed. Pencil in lightly in the upper right hand corner of your cover which stamps you wish affixed. Because of the size of this issue, make sure your address is low and to the left of your envelope. Orders must be postmarked by June 28.

For those of you who are maintaining the loose-leaf book, "United States Postage Stamps," the Transmittal Letter No. 5 supplement, containing information on 1975 U.S. issues, is available for $1.25 from "Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402."

On June 8, the Irish Post Office will release three new stamps in its current definitive series — a 10p adhesive featuring a dog, a 12p elk and a 17p winged ox — all designs taken from early Irish Christian art.

On May 16, the Greek Post Office released a 7 drachmae adhesive marking the 45th European Conference of Ministers of Transport (CEMT).

The Greek Post Office, also on May 16, released three Europa adhesives as a participating member of the Conference of European Postal and Telecommunications Administrations. Denominations include a 5 drachmae (Castles of Mani), a 7 drachmae (Santorini) and a 15 drachmae (Lassithi).

This year's common Europa theme was 'sites and landscapes,' giving member countries the opportunity to highlight their own landmarks rather than adhering to a common design as was often the case in previous years.

THE SAVING OF P.S. by Robbie Branscum (Doubleday, $5.95, upper elementary and junior high ages)

Reviewed by Dorothy Oliver

They nicknamed her P.S. because she was the last of Preacher Blue's five children. At 12, seven years younger than her closest brother or sister, she ran the household, cooking, cleaning and doing chores on the Arkansas dirt farm where her preacher-farmer father lived.

Her mother died after giving birth to the dark-eyed dark-haired child, the only one of her children not fair and blond. P.S. said she felt like a "crow in a tree of bluejays" and considered herself a "black sinner" who "cussed alot" and "carried the cares of the world" in a religious family where everyone had long ago been saved.

"The Saving of P.S." carries hope for this scrawny heroine in its title. She is "saved," yes, but on the way to her salvation learns lessons in living and loving that are invaluable.

P.S. (Priscilla Sue is her given name) tells her own story with humor, honesty and wisdom. She is an angry little girl, who is thrown into a tizzy when her kind, quiet father courts and then marries the blond widow from the big city who, along with her two well-mannered daughters, moved into the clean white house down the road. Jealous of her new mother and afraid her father no longer cares, P.S. first stages a hunger strike and then runs away from home with the lumbering, cross-eyed family dog "who would've drown himself to get to be close to a human."

Her adventures carry her into the rural areas and small towns of Arkansas where she meets the kind and the cruel, faces rattlesnakes and floods and learns a great deal about herself and the people she loves.

"The worst feeling of all was that everything was all my own selfish fault for not wanting to share what I never had in the first place, for the knowledge came to me from someplace that one human cannot own another human no more than they can own the stars or all God's love just for themselves . . ."

Robbie Branscum set her warm story of P.S. in the countryside in which she grew up. Her characters come alive through her familiarity with the lifestyle and dialect of Arkansas. P.S.'s faults are easy to identify with and her anger and pain easy to understand. Hers is a story worth telling and a story worth reading.

Olga knows

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Baffling circumstances continue as you seek for the meaning to "all this". Fate and the universe both turn slowly, my friend. Abide. By end of week pot begins to boil. In the meantime, muster a weak smile. It worked for Mona Lisa.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are searching for space, Taurus; some outer and some inner. To help expedite your search you should get rid of excess baggage. But first, clear the exits! Full Moon does its usual mischief, but by end of week you calm considerably. Love beckons. Follow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Music is playing just for you, Gem, and it sounds like a waltz. Romance can't come too often these days, Gem, so enjoy! Wear ribbons and bells. Buy roses. Week comes to an end on key of F, for fugue, fantasia, and fireworks!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some dull days ahead, Moonbaby, so dust off old habit and play the part. Rewards are worth it. Toe tapping allowed, however, and just may be signal someone is waiting for. End of week you should slip out of stuffy role and into something comfy.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Usually allowed to exist in your own little world, Leo, you discover this week that others want to rattle your cage. Ignoring these visitors from "outer space" will just put off confrontation until another day. Now is the hour. Deal. When all else fails, joker wins the game.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): Star-studded week ahead, Virgo. Dreams come true. And then some. If you're tied up on home port, the world comes to you. Last day for running barefoot in the grass, on the beach or across your waterbed. Whatever's right.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): Spring cleaning should be just about over, but go after remaining cobwebs with an iron broom. This week Libra, like attracts like, and spirits help spirits. Kindred soul seeks you out on last day and turns broom into wand.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): Your health is highlighted. Stop all other projects and attend to it. Rest, fruit and simplicity will do wonders. TLC comes from unexpected source. Let someone else be boss this week, Scorp. You need the rest.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Breaks fall your way this week, Saj. Take advantage of all offers. Something rather unexpected pans out. Inner voice guides you. Follow. You gain new insight into old, nagging problem. At last!

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): Sun warms Saturn as thoughts turn from divining the heavens to heaven knows what! You glow and go, Cap, but just keep earth shoes on for lengthy walks. On last night if you feel pinch (feet, pocket or whatever), just pitch your tent, light your Coleman lantern, and relax.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): Your swan song may be turning into an opera, Aquari. Keep it short and sweet. Original plan you made to seek new horizons is in danger of getting lost in the proverbial shuffle. The goodbyes have been said. Now it's time to move into a lower key.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): Old life style shifts to make room for new ideas. You feel the insistent push of change as fresh cycle begins. This is not a minor alteration, Pisces. What has been lost will be found. You'll see.

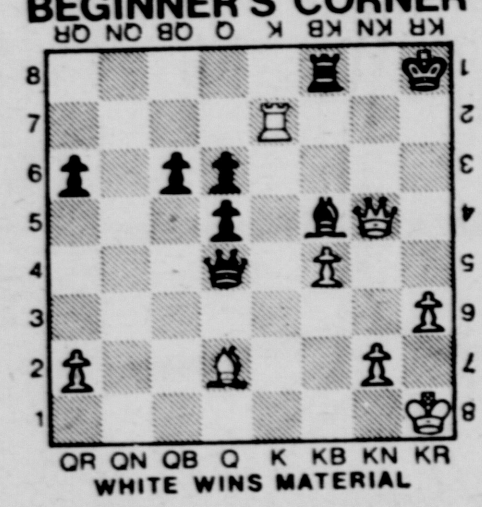
BEGINNER'S CORNER



Carmen Nieves, a student who lives on the "Lower East Side" of Manhattan (Avenue D and 12th Street), tells me that chess is thriving in her mainly Puerto Rican neighborhood.

"Most of my friends play and surprisingly a number of adults more than thirty (previously a generation of domino players) have learned to play chess."

WHITE'S KNIGHT IS ATTACKED. SO?!

According to Carmen, an outdoor amphitheatre in the nearby Jacob Riis Housing Project is the rallying point for the area's chessplayers. Not uncommonly, a youth looking for an opponent can be seen wandering with chess set and board under arm, while others already play.

One of Carmen's friends, Ricky, attests that at least sixty of his friends and acquaintances frequently play chess. Ricky, who Carmen discovered did not know that the chessboard must be placed with a white square in the right-hand corner, nevertheless, owns and plays chess with a clock.

In the 1920s and 1930s, lower east side coffeehouses catering to Eastern European Jewish immigrants spawned many of this country's top chessplayers.

The British magazine Chess called the first-place tie gained by Nona Gaprindasvili at Lone Pine with Balashov (U.S.S.R.), Panno (Argentina) and Sahovic (Yugoslavia) "the greatest woman's chess success of all time." No wonder! Eleven other grandmasters and nine international masters lagged behind the winners.

The position in SOLVE-IT shows the culmination of a brilliant idea by Ms. Gaprindasvili. Here the women's world champion played 20 N-Q7! and after . . . BxN; 21 P-K6 B-B1; 22 P-K7 BxP; 23 RxB . . ., she had achieved (at the cost of a pawn) a winning domination of the seventh rank and the center of the board.
